

10,000 E. Pakistanis die in 2 days of civil war

NEW DELHI (UPI) — East Pakistan's rag-tag rebel "army" fought for its life Saturday, facing superior West Pakistani troops backed by tanks, artillery and jet bombers. An Indian news agency report said an estimated 10,000 East Pakistanis had been killed in less than two days of civil war.

Each side claimed to have the upper hand. Radio Free Bengali claimed at nightfall Saturday that the East Pakistani separatist government, the "Bangla Deshi," controlled most parts of the province. But official Pakistani federal government reports said its army was in complete control.

UPI correspondent Robert Kaylor, one of about 25 foreign newsmen expelled from East Pakistan, reported (on reaching Bombay, India, on Saturday) that as of Friday night, the federal army appeared to be in control of Dacca and was running the Dacca airport.

Kaylor reported that gunfire was dying down but that flames could be seen at the edge of Dacca and a pall of smoke hung over the East Pakistan capital.

Rebel radio broadcasts said Pakistani air force jets roared into action in support of hard-pressed West Pakistani ground troops who were encountering tough resistance from "liberation army" fighters. The latter were clad in sarongs and pajamas, and many of them were reported armed with only sticks, knives and axes. Some reportedly attacked mechanized forces with spears.

The Press Trust of India (PTI) quoted "highly reliable and neutral" sources as saying that at least 10,000 Bengalis had been killed in widespread fighting in East Pakistan.

It was one of a number of major reports on the situation there Saturday that was either contradicted or not confirmed by the government's official Radio Pakistan in Karachi, West Pakistan.

The other reports were:

—Radio Pakistan said

the rebel leader, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, was arrested at his residence in Dacca early Friday. A speaker identifying himself as Rahman on the rebel radio said Saturday that the Radio Pakistan report was false and that he was —The rebel radio said Saturday night that Rahman's followers controlled most areas of East Pakistan, including the port city of Chittagong, where army troops were routed. Radio Pakistan said reports of fighting in East Pakistan were exaggerated, the army controlled the entire province and the situation there was returning to normal.

—The rebel radio said Lt. Gen. Tikka Khan, the government's martial law administrator in East Pakistan, was shot and killed by Rahman's followers during a battle Friday with army troops in Dacca. Radio Pakistan said the claim was false and that Tikka Khan was neither killed nor wounded.

—The rebel radio said heavy fighting was underway in Dacca, where the paramilitary East Pakistani Rifles and police have sided with the rebels. Radio Pakistan said curfew imposed Friday in Dacca had been lifted Saturday.

(In Washington, the U.S. State Department said Saturday its latest information from Dacca was that the city was calm. Press officer Charles W. Bray III said the Pakistan army appeared to be in full control there.)

U.S. planes pound traffic on Ho Trail

SAIGON (UPI) — Hundreds of U.S. warplanes, including B52 bombers, ripped Laotian jungles Saturday in stepped-up raids against near-record Communist truck traffic rushing supplies through the Ho Chi Minh Trail.

Military sources reported 1,200-1,500 North Vietnamese vehicles moving over the roads every day in both directions in an effort by Hanoi to make up for heavy losses inflicted by South Vietnamese forces in their recently ended offensive against the supply trail.

In Saigon, U.S. headquarters announced three U.S. Army battalions totaling about 2,500 men began standdowns Saturday in preparation for return to the United States under President Nixon's withdrawal program. U.S. sources said the successes of the Laos offensive would speed U.S. troop withdrawals.

NEW Communist pressures were reported in Laos and Cambodia Saturday. North Vietnamese gunners shelled the airport at the royal Laotian capital of Luang Prabang Saturday and defenders there were reported short of ammunition. In Cambodia, field reports said Communist troops were in firm control of a 10-mile stretch of the highway linking the capital of Phnom Penh to the nation's oil refinery port of Kompong Som.

Reports on the Communist truck traffic in Laos said the flow normally dwindles to a few hundred vehicles per day at this time of year when the monsoons are beginning. The traffic upsurge was attributed to Hanoi's desire to re-equip at least 16 North Vietnamese battalions, totaling 10,000 men, which military sources said were decimated by the South Vietnamese campaign.

Manson jurors cheerful Panel ends deliberations, rests till Monday

Wearing zany sports clothes and waving happily to newsmen, a five-woman, seven-man jury ended five-and-a-half hours deliberating the fate of Charles Manson and his three girl friends Saturday without reaching a verdict.

The panel, which is to decide whether the four members of Manson's "family" will live or die for their part in the bloody Tate-LaBianca killings, will begin their second full day of deliberations Monday at 9 a.m. The jury took a leisurely two-hour lunch but went beyond the usual 4:30 p.m. quitting time.

PRIVATE CHURCH services will be held today in the Alexandria Hotel in downtown Los Angeles, where the jury is sequestered.

Although courtroom observers predict a quick verdict, the same group deliberated for almost 43 hours two months ago before bringing in the first-degree murder verdict against the 36-year-old Manson, Patricia Krenwinkel, 23, Susan Atkins, 22, and Leslie Van Houten, 21.

The guilt phase of the trial lasted 32 weeks, in comparison with the penalty phase, which took nine weeks.

Q. On weekday mornings the west-bound traffic on Lampson Avenue destined for the north-bound San Diego Freeway on-ramp at Seal Beach Boulevard frequently backs clear up to the entrance to the Old Ranch Country Club. There always are a dozen or so "dandies" whose station in life precludes their joining this queue, so they pass all the drivers willing to take their turn and proceed up to the signal, where they either horn in on the line or make a left turn from the inner lane. Can't the Seal Beach Police do something about this? I have never noticed any citations being given. D. E. P., Seal Beach.

A spokesman for the traffic division of the Seal Beach Police Department explained that the problem you describe is caused by the fact that there are two left turn lanes on Lampson Avenue to Seal Beach Boulevard, but only one lane for turning from Seal Beach Boulevard onto the freeway. So motorists using the second Lampson Avenue lane to turn onto Seal Beach Boulevard find themselves out of line for getting onto the freeway. "These motorists merging into the left-turn lane for the freeway could cause a real hazard," the spokesman said, "and we're glad to have this brought to our attention. We'll look into it and start enforcement in the area."

Q. Why is there no flag, American or otherwise, flying from the Queen Mary? Don't all ships fly some kind of flag? A.F., Long Beach.

A. "First of all the Queen Mary is no longer classified as a ship," ACTION LINE learned from Marvin Wolf of the Long Beach Queen Mary Department. "She's actually a building now and is presently categorized as a 'non-conforming floating structure' by the building department." However, Wolf said the Queen Mary soon will be flying at least one American flag and probably a California state flag and Long Beach City flag, "just like many other large buildings in town."

Calley verdict delayed as jury hears more readback

Combined News Services

Jurors in the court-martial of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. were granted permission Saturday to hear readbacks of testimony from eight GI's who were flying over My Lai during the alleged massacre, thus eliminating any chance of a verdict before Monday.

Col. Reid W. Kennedy, the judge, recessed court for the day after the jurors had heard testimony by four of the eight witnesses. Kennedy said court would reconvene this afternoon to conclude the readings. The jury resumed deliberations — now in its 22nd day — after the court was closed.

Kennedy has said he would not accept a verdict today and if one is reached on the Sabbath, it will not be announced until Monday. The judge said an Army chaplain would be provided the jurors for a nondenominational service in their quarters at Ft. Benning, Ga. as was held last Sunday.

The readback request, which came in a sealed manila envelope moments after the jury returned from lunch Saturday, touched off a flurry of activity that brought Calley rushing to the courtroom for the first time in three days.

Kennedy denied a request from the jurors which would have given them a 30-minute recess between the testimony of each of the eight helicopter pilots and crewmen.

SELF-EXILE

Hungary's Communist government is ready to consider almost any concession to allow Cardinal Jozsef Mindszenty to end 14 years of self-exile in the U.S. Embassy in Budapest, Hungarian sources said Saturday.

But the sources said the government will not allow Mindszenty, the primate of Hungary, to act as archbishop and priest within Hungary again. For that reason, Mindszenty is expected to refuse the offer and stay where he is.

Short of that one stipulation, the Hungarian government will consider dropping all charges against Mindszenty and allowing him to live in Hungary or go to the Vatican, the sources said.

Mindszenty, who will be 79 Monday, is a fervent anti-Communist and royalist who was tried for high treason in 1949 and sentenced to life imprisonment. During the 1956 uprising he was freed briefly and made an anti-Communist speech from the parliament building.

ACTOR WEDS

Actor Bob Cummings married his secretary at 3:44 a.m. Saturday — the time two astrologers assured him would be the most propitious for the ceremony.

Both astrologers attended the candlelight, double-ring ceremony at the Little Church of the West here in Las Vegas, uniting Cummings, 60, and Regina "Gigi" Fong, 32.

She had been secretary to the former star of the television series "Love That Bob" since 1966.

Cummings is divorced from his third wife, Mary, the mother of his five children.

SINGER WELL

Actress-singer Ann-Margret was released Saturday from Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Hollywood after a nearly one-week bout with flu.

The star was flown to the hospital after leaving an extended engagement at the International Hotel in Las Vegas when she came down with flu, a hotel spokesman announced. She had headlined the show since Feb. 24.

HIH IN '72?

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Saturday that at the moment he was not planning to seek the Democratic nomination for president in 1972 but added he would not make any final decision until the fall.

Humphrey said that right now he was content to be "a busy and hard-working senator."

"I am not a presidential candidate," said the former Vice President in New York. "I am, however, going to be active in the political scene."

GLOBE-TROT

American hypnotist Alexander Kurtz flew into London and took off almost immediately for Moscow Saturday on his bid to travel around the world in 40 hours by plane.

"Man needs a new vision of himself, more in keeping with his new view of the world as a global village," the 40-year-old hypnotist from San Francisco said.

Kurtz boarded a Japan Air Lines flight to Moscow from where he said he planned to continue his trip to San Francisco by way of Tokyo.

GOLDWYN

President Nixon visited the Beverly Hills home of movie magnate Samuel Goldwyn on Saturday and conferred on him the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian award.

Nixon said Goldwyn, 88, proved that movies could be made that were entertaining, exciting, great box office, not square and "not dirty."

Goldwyn's films won 27 Academy Awards.

Nixon said Goldwyn was more deserving than anyone else he could think of for the award and that he bestowed it on behalf of millions of American moviegoers.

Goldwyn, recovering from a stroke suffered a year ago, was in a wheelchair in a brown suit and wearing bedroom slippers for the presidential ceremony.

DRUG 'KINGPIN'

A former C. W. Post College basketball star who became leader of a youth sports program has been arrested in New York City and charged with possession of $1.5 million worth of heroin.

Police described Frank Townsend, 30, as a "kingpin" in heroin traffic and a "large supplier to pushers" who was seized after a 10-week investigation.

Police said Townsend was director of the First National City Bank's ghetto sports program for youths. He was co-captain and guard on the C. W. Post team in 1964.

NIXON CRITIC

Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr. of California, a leader of Republican antiwar forces, is setting up a campaign office in Washington for possible election challenge to President Nixon.

The ex-Marine says he still hopes some other nationally known Republican will take on the job, but that he wants to be ready to make a strong push in next year's New Hampshire primary in case no one steps forward.

McCloskey's congressional official and staff have been overwhelmed with mail since the 43-year-old Californian emerged as a leading GOP spokesman against the Vietnam war on the strength of a speech last month calling for a national dialogue on whether Nixon should be impeached for his conduct of the war.

2 sought in pellet snippings

Youths shoot from car, injuring four pedestrians in L.B.

Police Saturday were searching for two youths who drove through Long Beach Friday night firing a pellet gun at pedestrians, injuring four persons.

Although none of the victims was seriously hurt, investigators said, three of them were treated at local hospitals and released.

Police said the victims were struck by round pellets that appeared to be about .22-caliber.

FIRST victim was Henry V. Curtis, 57, who was struck in the right hand while walking near his home in the 2900 block of East Second Street about 6:15 p.m. He was treated at Community Hospital.

Another victim, Judy Jamison, 23, was struck in the hip in the 100 block of Bennett Avenue.

Ruth E. Welborn, 60, was hit in the right leg at Broadway and Long Beach Boulevard. She was treated at Memorial Hospital.

The fourth victim, Roland B. Hein, 31, was treated at Memorial Hospital after he was struck in the upper right arm while walking in the 200 block of East Pleasant Street about 6:35 p.m.

Anaheim

tot drowns in yard-pool

An Anaheim child died Saturday afternoon an hour after his father found him lying face down on the bottom of a neighbor's swimming pool.

Police said Michael Renaud, two-and-a-half, of 108 Glendon Ave., was pronounced dead at Anaheim Memorial Hospital at 2:23 p.m., where he was rushed by a fire department rescue unit.

According to investigators, the youth's father, Robert Albert Renaud, missed his son early in the afternoon and began searching the neighborhood.

Other children told Renaud his son was "in the swimming pool," and Renaud rushed down the block to 108 Glendon Ave., where he found his son.

Renaud pulled the tot from the pool and attempted artificial respiration until the rescue crew arrived to take the child to the hospital.

Big search futile in 'SOS call'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two military planes searched waters 900 miles east of Cape Hatteras, N.C., Saturday after an apparent distress signal was reported from a ship. The search was suspended when nothing was found.

The Coast Guard had reported that at 12:15 p.m. a distress signal with the call sign "ZIZZLE" followed by the words "blow up" was received at Coast Guard stations in Halifax, Nova Scotia and Boston and by several merchant vessels.

A 19-year-old Vietnam veteran lies immobile in a spinal cord injury ward at the Long Beach Veterans Hospital. Paralyzed, he is only able to move his eyes. He believes his suffering is without meaning, for he finds little purpose in the Vietnam war. He is bitter, resentful.

Graddus Schrottenboer, a Red Cross volunteer at the hospital, relates to men like this:

"I am a disabled veteran," he explains. "I can empathize with them, and they will usually open up to me. I try to show them how they can live useful lives."

Schrottenboer and three other VA volunteers will leave Tuesday for a three-day conference in Washington, D.C. to examine the VA volunteer program. Other delegates are Mitchell Gusha, Margaret Howell and Shada Shonover. The conference is part of the 25th anniversary tion hall.

The volunteers deserve the recognition. Last year, they gave more than 260,000 hours of services to the 1,500 hospitalized veterans.

Their duties encompass 30 areas. They escort patients to and from in-hospital clinics; they perform clerical and receptionist duties, they pack medical supplies; they aid nurses and doctors; they feed patients, write letters and run errands for them; and they show the patients that someone cares.

"The VA hospitals could not operate without volunteers," said Nina Burkle, a volunteer for 21 years. "Our most important contribution is to patient morale. Those of us who work on the wards have helped patients through bad times. We also relieve hospital staff of menial duties, so they can have more time to devote to patients."

Volunteers do not, however, take jobs that would otherwise be paid positions, according to Mrs. Bur-sick people. We provide an orientation program and help them find the right assignment. For example, we have a retired printer working in the manual arts program and a retired teacher in the educational around in wheelchairs. They fill their own empty hours and contribute a valuable service," he said.

The young as well as the old can be of service, according to Schrottenboer. There is a week-end program for college-age students and a summer program for about 225 high school students. The young people are placed according to their career goals. One boy who wants to be a doctor was put to work in the cardiac room. A girl who loved animals worked with hamsters in a cancer research program.

Heading the youth program appeals to Schrottenboer, because he watches the young people mature as they assume responsibilities and widen their personal relationships.

Volunteers usually spend one day a week at the hospital, but Mary Murray, 70, spends five days a week, six to eight hours a day. Her husband, Louis, 73, also volunteers.

"We did not want to play bridge or fool around after my husband retired from the Navy, so we decided to offer our services. It's rewarding work," she said. "I remember when a boy without legs and with just one arm got his artificial limbs. He practiced on them for 10 days and then came walking over to me. He was so proud."

Mrs. Murray, "Red" to the hospital patients, has been a volunteer since the hospital opened in June 1950.

Asked about charges that VA hospitals are inadequate, Mrs. Murray said the hospital is under-staffed, but that every employee from floor sweeper to doctor cares about the patients.

She added the hospital has grown tremendously and has an excellent reputation for its heart and brain surgery programs, mental hygiene service and spinal cord injury service.

Mae Pierce, a long-time volunteer, said volunteers not only donate their time, they often raise money to purchase needed medical machinery for the hospital and to maintain the Social Service Emergency Fund for patients.

"One night a man came in expecting to be hospitalized, but the hospital was not ready for him. The man had only 17 cents in his pocket. We gave him money from the fund to pay for lodging and food until he could be admitted," she said.

Mrs. Pierce is dedicated to the hospital:

"You work hard, and you are tired when you go home. But you know the tiredness comes from helping people, and that's a good feeling."

VA HOSPITALS DEPEND HEAVILY ON VOLUNTEERS

observance of the VA Voluntary Service program.

On a local level, Mayor Edwin Wade proclaimed the week of March 20 as VA Voluntary Service Week. About 1,300 Long Beach VA volunteers will be recognized for their work at a reception Tuesday from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. at the hospital recreation hall. The hospital hires as many persons as the budget permits.

Russell McKeown, director of voluntary services and a member of the hospital staff, said more volunteers are needed, particularly men and women between 35 and 50.

"Our volunteers must have patience and a knowledge of therapy programs" he explained.

Most volunteers are motivated by desire to help humanity, McKeown said, adding others help because they are lonely or want to feel needed.

"We have volunteers who are World War I veterans. They are between 72 and 78 years of age. But they push disabled veterans

Yugoslavia, Italy vow friendly ties, press world peace

ROME (UPI) — Italy and Yugoslavia pledged Saturday to bury their past differences and give the world an example of how capitalist and Communist countries can live together in peace.

A joint communique issued at the end of Yugoslav President Tito's state visit to Rome said the two countries intended to work together toward peace.

They offered to "contribute actively" to preparation for a European security conference, called for strengthening of the United Nations with Communist China's admission, hailed West Germany's recent accords with the Soviet Union and Poland, and urged the Israelis and Arabs to accept the peace mission of U.N. representative Gunnar V. Jarring.

The communique came as three-sided discussions took form on the Middle East crisis, one of the main topics discussed in Tito's two-day official visit.

Tito is to return to Rome Monday for an official visit to Pope Paul VI.

Woman held in ex-mate's gun death

A Huntington Beach woman shot and killed her former husband in a residential garage about 4 p.m. Saturday, police reported.

Mrs. Doris Barrett, 40, of 16162 Sher Lane, Huntington Beach, was booked on suspicion of murder about 20 minutes after James Barrett, 46, of North Hollywood, died from multiple gunshot wounds.

Barrett was visiting Mrs. Barrett's son by another marriage, Michael Burke, 25, 1664 Bartlett St., Huntington Beach, police said.

Burke told police two men were doing some carpentry in the garage when Mrs. Barrett appeared, drew a .38 automatic from her purse and fired several shots at her former husband.

He died while en route to Huntington Intercommunity Hospital.

Undercover agents in Los Angeles arrested a bearded, middle-aged man in the beating death of an 87-year-old woman and the savage beatings of nine other elderly women, police said Saturday.

Booked for investigation of murder was Frazier DeWayne Brown, 44, of Hyde Park, an unemployed laborer, officers said.

Sgt. Manuel Gutierrez said Brown is believed responsible for the attacks on the other women and additional charges would probably be filed by the district attorney's office.

The murder charge was for the death of Henrietta Leplat, mother of former movie actor and dancer Marc Platt. Mrs. Leplat died Wednesday from head injuries suffered in a March 12 robbery.

Police said most of the robbery assaults were made by a burly, soft-spoken man fitting the assailant's description talking and trying to help elderly women in Hollywood Friday night. He was later arrested at a rooming house where police said they found items linked to the other robberies.

Police said Brown offered no resistance. He is expected to be arraigned Tuesday.

The most recent victim, Nella Ayres, 89, of Los Angeles, was in serious condition Saturday at California Hospital with multiple jaw fractures after being attacked and robbed in downtown Los Angeles Thursday.

FUN & GAMES

SNARL

Harrisburg, Pa. (UPI) — A state senator wants to ban the showing of adults-only movies at drive-in theaters as a means of reducing traffic accidents.

Sen. Richard A. Tilghman argues that when a passing motorist catches sight of salacious portions on the big drive-in screens his attention drifts. His automobile may drift, too, the legislator said.

HOLE-Y

HUCKNALL, England (UPI) — Mrs. Constance West is refusing to pay rent for her town-owned house because of a hole in her garden.

The hole first appeared last October and has grown bigger every day.

Now it is six feet wide, six feet long and three feet deep.

"All the council has said is don't go near it," Mrs. West said. A council spokesman said the National Coal Board has been asked to investigate.

SNOOPY

DETROIT (UPI) — One of Detroit's more luxurious East Side apartment dwellings recently installed a television camera in its lobby as a security measure with a hook-up to each tenant's TV set.

But one young woman resident viewed her fiance entering the building with another woman, "two champagne glasses and a bottle" and immediately broke their engagement.

TRIMMED

YOKOHAMA, Japan (UPI) — Election officials have ordered Yokohama's two candidates for mayor to cut 3/100ths of one inch off their campaign posters.

Officials ruled that the poster printed by Mayor Ichio Asakata, a Socialist, was 3/100ths of an inch too long while the poster from Conservative candidate Takeshi Kawai was 3/100th too wide. Campaign workers shaved a millimeter off each poster.

Japan's district election rules limit the size of campaign posters to 12 inches by 16.8 inches. Japan's major cities will elect new mayors on April 11.

COW GIRL

LUSAKA, Zambia (UPI) — The winner of the first Miss Zambia beauty contest will receive a cow, $350 and a trophy, contest organizers announced. They said the runner-up will get $175 and a pig.

SMARTY

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) — Jon E. Vanden Berg had money to burn and federal agents didn't like it.

Vanden Berg is charged with possessing and manufacturing bogus $20 bills. He is partner in a print shop in a suburban Wyoming where police confiscated 56 phony bills.

He also works at the Wyoming Diesel GM plant. He didn't try to pass the bills. He used them to light cigarettes and startle his co-workers.

RISKY

DES MOINES (UPI) — The head broke off a gavel and hit a couple of legislative employees in the Iowa House last week. Nobody was hurt mallets and other equipment but some damned helmet for protection.

They went back to work unprotected a few days later and another gavel head went flying as House Majority Leader Andrew Varley was calling the house to order.

IDENTITY

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Robert Hughes, 26, picked the wrong place to cash a stolen check.

Hughes waited two days, then drove across town to cash the $100 retirement-disability check made out to Ben Smith in a liquor store. Not only did the owner know Smith, 56, but the intended recipient happened to be in the store at the time.

Hughes was sentenced to five years in prison for the offense.

INSULT

CAIRO, W.Va. (UPI) — When Troxel Skidmore tangled with a train in the central West Virginia community, he lost two ways.

A westbound train knocked Skidmore's car 40 feet from the downtown crossing, causing $1,500 damage.

And to add insult to injury, police charged Skidmore with failure to yield the right of way.

Voorhis to address Demo Women's Study Club April 7

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Jerry Voorhis, whose 1946 congressional defeat launched the political career of Richard Nixon in California, will speak at the April 7 luncheon meeting of the Democratic Women's Study Club in the Lafayette Hotel French Room.

Voorhis, now 70, returned to San Dimas last year after his retirement as executive secretary of the Cooperative League of the U.S.A., a post he held in Chicago from 1948.

Nixon's 1946 campaign against Voorhis for the San Gabriel Valley district seat Voorhis held for 10 years was a highly controversial one. Voorhis partisans ascribed his defeat to a telephone campaign in which an anonymous caller would ask voters, "Did you know that Jerry Voorhis is a Communist?"

Voorhis, author of several books including "Confessions of a Congressman," scheduled for reissue, will speak on "Moral Crisis for America."

PPP SPEAKER Dr. Michael Aldrich, author of a doctoral dissertation, "Cannibals: Myth and Folklore," will discuss the "opium war in Laos" at 8 p.m. April 7 in Long Beach Peace and Freedom party headquarters, 1263 Pine Ave. The meeting is public.

FRONTIER DEMOS

The New Frontier Democratic Club will have a card party and luncheon fund raising event Wednesday noon at Mottell's Garden Room, 509 E. Third St. The party is public.

WAKEFIELD TALK

Assemblyman Lloyd Wakefield, R-Downey, will speak at a public meeting of the Jefferson Davis unit of United Republicans of California at 3 p.m. today in the residence of unit chairman Bob Walters, 8802 San Leon Circle, Buena Park.

BROWN AT TORRANCE Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. will speak at an 8 p.m. Friday dinner of the RFK Democratic Club at the Queen's Kitchen, 1332 Sartori St., Torrance.

Mayor Gil Smith, of Carson, will be master of ceremonies. Bill Pickens, president, said the new club was formed principally of former campaign workers for Congressman Glenn Anderson and Sen. John Tunney. Its next meeting is at 7:30 p.m. April 4 in the Western Federal Building Commun-

Zumwalt evaluates

Russ Navy

By EDWARD K. DELONG

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt, the chief of naval operations, Saturday said the United States can handle any military situation that might grow out of Russia's increasing naval activity in the Caribbean.

In an interview, Zumwalt said the Navy's hottest potential trouble spot is the Eastern Mediterranean, where both the U.S. 6th Fleet and the Russian navy now operate in the shadow of Middle East political and military unrest.

Of the three areas where Russia seems intent on exerting greater influence through its growing naval forces — the Mediterranean, the Caribbean and the Indian Ocean — Zumwalt said the latter poses the least concern to the United States.

As President Nixon stated in his foreign policy message, the Middle East is the most potentially explosive area in the world," Zumwalt said.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

A small Johnson City, N.Y., boy seems puzzled by the marquee message of the Enjoy Cinema in the village. But a little investigation turned up the news that Sweden's sex games aren't going to be shown to the kids. The matinee movie was somewhat less provocative.

INDIANA WOMAN
is a mother

By KAY MOORE

MEMPHIS, Ind. (UPI) — Until she shows you her muscles, Earlene Broady might be just another pea-shelling, quilt-stitching farmwife in this southern Indiana community.

But in a normal day's work, she makes brick walls, fireplaces and plumbing fixtures as well as homemade biscuits and jam.

The 39-year-old mother of three says she has been told by national union officials that she is the only woman bricklayer in the nation in their membership records.

During her five years of work for her husband's private masonry firm, Mrs. Broady has mortared the walls of such structures as a new post office in New Albany, a library at the Jeffersonville branch of Indiana University, and countless apartment and housing projects throughout Indiana.

MRS. BROADY'S day begins at 4 a.m. when she helps her husband, Martin, milk the cows and feed the chickens before the couple and a married son, Martin Earl, go to work on bricklaying projects. Her toll also includes pouring concrete, installing plumbing, laying floors, hanging doors, and painting.

"I tell everyone that bricklayin' no harder than housekeepin', except you have the scars to show it," Mrs. Broady told UPI in her pronounced midwestern accent.

The "scars" of her masonry career have included several broken toes and fractured ribs from accidents, but the energetic Mrs. Broady said she doesn't "believe in missing work for sickness" and boasts a perfect record of no absenteeism during her five years on the job. She's never had a backache, although she lifts up to 100 pounds at a time without help.

SHE CREDITS her large capacity for labor and her innate restlessness to her childhood in Asphalt, Ky., where she was the oldest daughter in a family of 14 children.

"There was always a lot of woodchoppin' to be done, and girls were good as boys at that," she said.

A small, sturdy woman with sparkling blue eyes and honey blonde hair, Mrs. Broady, like any other working wife, finds the housecleaning still to be done when her days of mortar and plaster has ended. Before supper, she and her husband and the two younger Broady sons, ages 10 and 14, go to the barn for the evening milking.

On Sunday, her only "day off," she sews, embroiders, mows the lawn, cans the yield of her garden, and entertains "between 25 and 30 people who just drop in" to the Broady's spacious yellow brick home filled with antique furniture.

Demos ask to be involved

Governors want
'expanded role'
in '72 election

ST. LOUIS Mo. — Democratic governors agreed Saturday to seek an expanded role, "a part of the action," in the build-up to the 1972 campaign for the White House.

They said they were talking about issues, not candidates, and about political involvement, not the soothing of statehouse egos.

Fifteen of the 29 Democratic governors conferred privately at a St. Louis airport motel and their chairman, Gov. Robert W. Scott of North Carolina, said afterward:

"We do want to have a part of the action, to feel and have a significant input that we are being heard put into the affairs of the party."

It was a demand Democratic governors, frustrated at the political attention focused on Washington and at what they consider neglect of the state capitals, had sounded before.

Gov. Kenneth Curtis of Maine said the governors were not seeking to enlarge their role "for any type of ego-soothing motive," but because they believe they can reflect the concerns of the people and contribute to a Democratic victory in 1972.

IN THE privacy of the conference, there apparently was a sharper tone to the complaints.

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri, for example, was quoted as complaining that a governor does not become the object of presidential speculation until and unless he is elected a senator.

Gov. Marvin Mandel of Maryland was reported to have said the governors get little attention in national Democratic affairs except when the party wants money.

Scott said the governors had agreed they would meet four times a year in the future to talk about politics and the issues and they would seek the appointment of a representative of governors to a full-time position on the Democratic National Committee.

Scott said no one had been chosen for the job.

Democratic National Chairman Lawrence P. O'Brien is to meet with the governors today.

Hearnes said the governors were "100 per cent pleased with O'Brien's performance as national chairman."

He said what the governors want is political involvement.

"It's very hard to explain to anyone who is not a governor because the more you talk the more it sounds like you're seeking a power play rather than involvement," he said.

HEANES said there had been no discussion of presidential candidates at the caucus. Scott added he thinks it unlikely the governors will attempt to fashion any consensus on a candidate for the 1972 nomination.

Mandel told the governors they should have a crucial role in preparation for the 1972 campaign. He said regular policy declarations from the governors would help with the problem of "repairing the low visibility" that troubles them.

"Here at St. Louis today we can begin developing the framework that will lead to a vital role for governors in the selection of our party nominee," Mandel said. He proposed that all Democratic presidential contenders be invited to meet with the caucus of governors before the 1972 campaign.

Mandel said that "world strengthen the bargaining position of the governors within the over-all framework of the Democratic party."

SCOTT said the governors objected to the system under which members of the Democratic National Committee are automatically made delegates to the party convention. He said the National committee members have never stood for election to public office while "the governors having done so are sensitive to the needs of the people."

Scott complained that automatic delegation status can undercut the political position of the governor in his own state.

Hearnes said the governors were not suggesting that they be given automatic delegate status. But he said the governors don't want National Committee members to have it either.

The governors agreed to meet again in Omaha, Neb. in June. No date was set.

Scott said they spent a two-hour afternoon session discussing national issues, primarily revenue sharing, but took no policy positions.

They did adopt two resolutions urging that President Nixon release impounded federal aid funds.

One, proposed by Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, asked for the release of highway construction funds. Carter said $20 million in aid to Georgia alone is being held up by the administration.

The other, proposed by Gov. Milton J. Shapp of Pennsylvania, asked the release of other delayed federal funds.

"What we're saying, in effect," Scott said, "is if you really want to give some immediate relief to the states, we're saying to the President go ahead and release these funds that have already been appropriated."

He said what the governors want is political involvement.

"It's very hard to explain to anyone who is not a governor because the more you talk the more it sounds like you're seeking a power play rather than involvement," he said.

My straps were killing me . . .

How the twitchies begin . . .

Most women think a brassiere is held up by the straps. If they're not getting support . . . they tighten the straps. Then the back hikes up . . . and they lose support. So they tighten the straps again. They finally end up with no support . . . and the back of the bra is up around their shoulder blades. Meanwhile the straps are so tight they dig into the shoulders. Some women are so used to seeing dents in their shoulders they think it's part of their anatomy. It isn't. Women were never meant to have dent-ed shoulders.

Take the stress off straps

Bali bras are designed so the support comes from beneath the bust. From the design and structure of the cup itself. The straps are only there to form and shape the top of the cup. If the bra is right . . . you can drop the straps without losing the support. You can do this if you're wearing a Bali brassiere in the right size and style. In fact . . . you shouldn't even be able to feel it. Bali believes no one should ever be uncomfortable in a bra. That's how Bali bras are designed and always will be. Whether it's an old Bali favorite or a new, soft, natural-look design.

Ask an expert . . .

It would be great to rid the world of the strap twitchies. And, we can begin with you. Experts in our Body Fashions department know all a brassiere can do for you . . . and what it can't. (They also know what it can do to you!) They're all working together to show you the comfortable ways to wear a Bali bra. They'll show you how free it feels to put on a bra in your correct size. And there is a selection of styles that are perfect for you and your fashions. Come in. Be liberated. Giant new Russ offensive-missile deployment seen

By TAD SZULC
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—United States officials said Saturday that the pattern of recent construction of intercontinental missile sites in the Soviet Union might presage the deployment of a new Soviet offensive-weapon system.

United States observation of new construction by the Russians, first detected last December, has shown "about 20" holes large enough to accommodate the Soviet SS-9, the largest intercontinental ballistic missile in existence, or even bigger weapons, these officials said.

New information available to the U.S. has also shown that the recently dug holes are distributed in five clusters along the wide arc forming the Soviet offensive missile system. This stretches from the Polish border to the Chinese frontier.

THIS EXTENSIVE deployment pattern is increasingly suggesting to U.S. specialists that the Soviet Union may indeed be building a new weapons system. This might be related to improved SS-9's, or still newer missiles, equipped with accurate MIRV's, or multiple independently targetable re-entry vehicles.

The White House is understood to be proceeding on the assumption that the new construction is related to Soviet development of the multiple-warhead MIRV's.

As detailed information from satellite observation has been obtained in recent weeks, the Nixon administration was reported to be chiefly concerned with the long-range potential of new Soviet missile deployment rather than with the present size of missile stockpiles.

Since it takes about 18 months from the start of construction until a missile site is operational, the White House is believed to be thinking of the nuclear parity problem that will exist by the middle of 1972—with the assumption that the Soviet multiple warheads will then have become operational.

U.S. INTELLIGENCE officials are aware that the Soviet Union is testing MIRV warheads, but do not know how successful these tests have been.

An explanation of the new construction was requested.

EXCLUSIVE
N.Y. Times Service

ed last week by American representatives at the talks in Vienna on limiting strategic arms. The Soviet delegation has not replied, officials here said.

When the talks resumed March 15, after a three-month recess, the U.S. was awaiting an answer to its inquiries about the meaning of the cessation of work on three of six new SS-9 sites.

Officials said Saturday that construction of these three silos remained halted and they speculated that the sites might have been abandoned in favor of a new system connected to the approximately 20 new holes observed in recent months. The new holes, officials said, are in locations different from those of the three silos on which work was stopped.

After American intelligence agencies spotted the halt in the installation of the three silos—information indicated that some of them might have even been dismantled—the Nixon administration publicly wondered whether this was a signal that the Soviet Union might be amenable to a slowdown in the deployment of offensive weapons.

IN HIS STATE of the World Message on Feb. 25, President Nixon expressed hope for a slowdown. The U.S. position in the talks to limit arms is that an agreement with the Soviet Union must cover both offensive and defensive weapons and not only defensive ones, as proposed by Moscow.

The first public disclosure of the new Soviet construction was made on March 7 by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., in a television appearance. It was confirmed the same day by the Pentagon spokesman, Jerry W. Friedheim, who said that "it is correct that we have detected some new ICBM construction in the Soviet Union" but that "we are not sure exactly what it is or what the Soviets' intentions are."

Since then, however, additional observation by satellite has provided the U.S. with more detailed information on the number of the new holes and their deployment pattern.

This knowledge, officials said, has increasingly inclined the administration to consider the possibility that the Soviet Union may be working on a new weapons system.

THEY ADDED THAT such a new system might indicate installation of missiles even larger than the SS-9, conversion of the SS-9 from liquid to solid fuel or an altogether new generation of weapons.

The conversion of the SS-9 to solid fuel, which would be a major technological achievement, would give the missile a propellant that could be instantly ignited. The use of liquid fuel forces some missiles to be maintained in constant readiness, a costly and dangerous procedure.

Solid fuel also provides greater thrust per unit of weight of propellant.

The U.S.' Minuteman missiles, which are smaller than the SS-9, use liquid fuel.

OFFICIALS HERE ALSO reported that no meaningful progress had been achieved in the Vienna talks in the last 10 days.

They said that while the Soviet delegation had indicated its willingness in principle to discuss an agreement on defensive and offensive nuclear weapons, it still insisted that an accord be reached first on defensive systems.

GUERRILLAS AMBUSH JORDANIAN TROOPS

United Press International

Jordanian authorities imposed a curfew on the northern town of Irbid Saturday, sealed it off with a cordon of troops and sent security forces through the town in a search for armed Palestinian guerrillas who battled troops in daylong fighting Friday.

An official said gunmen ambushed one of the search parties, killing four security men and wounding others. He said a soldier was found burned alive in the local office of the Al Fatah guerrilla organization.

This raised casualties on the government side, including victims of Friday's fighting, to eight killed and 20 wounded. Guerrillas have said they lost four dead and 14 wounded Friday. Ten civilians were wounded.

PALESTINIAN guerrilla sources said 5,000 troops from King Hussein's army, including tough Bedouin soldiers, were deployed against guerrilla concentrations south of Irbid Saturday and travelers saw what they estimated was an infantry brigade in a valley in the area.

Military sources said the Jordanian troop movement was the biggest since the civil war with the guerrillas last September.

Elsewhere in the Middle East, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat flew to Khartoum Saturday for urgent talks with the president of Sudan, Jafaar Numeiri.

Sadat was accompanied on the 21-hour visit by Egypt's war minister Lt. Gen. Mohammed Fawzi. The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said the visit was aimed at mobilizing sources of the projected Arab Federation against Israel.

The semi-official Egyptian Mideast News Agency said intensive efforts were being dedicated to preparing Egyptian men and aircraft for a possible resumption of war with Israel.

The agency said Egypt did not underestimate the ability of Israel and its air force.

"The training goes on night and day," the agency's military affairs correspondent reported. "The coming battle will be more fierce than all the previous battles."

In Jordan, a military police captain who declined to give his name said: "Shooting is still going on inside Irbid and in the area."

THE CAPTAIN and his men turned back all civilian traffic at a crossroads seven miles from Irbid as armored personnel carriers clanked by toward the town.

An interior ministry spokesman, announcing the curfew, said the search in Irbid, 45 miles north of Amman, was for "people who killed security men Friday and burned the police station of the Princess Basrah Hospital and its telephone exchange."

The trouble started Friday when Palestinian guerrillas fired on police who had discovered a cache of weapons hidden in a cemetery.

Unseasonably cold over U.S.

Combined News Services

Unseasonably cold weather covered most of the nation Saturday. A record low for this season — 44 degrees — was reported at West Palm Beach, Fla.

A late season storm was developing through the nation's midsection, dumping rain, freezing rain, sleet and snow along the northern tier of states from the Upper Great Lakes region to the northern Great Plains.

Along the East Coast another storm swept out to sea after lashing the area from South Carolina to Virginia with heavy snow early Saturday. The retreating storm left in its wake gale winds and high tides which the National Weather Service said threatened beach erosion in some areas.

Elsewhere in the nation, temperatures in the 80s and 90s were the rule Saturday afternoon in much of the central and southern Rockies and the central and southern plains.

Generally fair and cool weather prevailed in the western states, with occasional rain in the Pacific northwest.

Temperatures extremes ranged from 31 at Marquette, Mich., to 95 at Childress, Tex.

Honduras election will decide role in Latin common market

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — Hondurans will choose a new president today in an election that will determine the country's future in the Central American Common Market.

The two candidates ended their campaigns Saturday, and the polls will open at 7 a.m. today. Early returns are expected shortly after the polls close at 6 p.m.

A total of 900,653 persons is eligible to choose between the government candidate, Ramon Ernesto Cruz, 68, and opposition nominee Jorge Bueso, 31. Their campaign was one of the more peaceful in Honduras' history.

Cruz favors keeping Honduras out of the Central American Common Market until other members grant Honduras a preferential treatment. He would encourage foreign investment and continuation of the economic policies of outgoing President Oswaldo Lopez Arellano.

Bueso wants Honduras to return to the common market as soon as possible. He favors increased taxation of the United Fruit Co. and Standard Fruit Co., the two banana companies which account for nearly half Honduras' exports. Bueso also favors admission of Communist China to the United Nations.

Honduras suspended participation in the Central American Common Market last year after 10 years of membership. Lopez said the other member countries had profited at Honduras' expense. The other members are Costa Rica, Guatemala, Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Efforts to bring Honduras back to the common market failed. The other governments have chosen to await the results of the election before making any further move.

Bueso's Liberal Party early in the campaign complained Cruz' National Party had access to more money. By law the government assesses each government employee a small percentage of his pay during the campaign. The funds are divided between the parties.

CITES ECONOMIC DRAWBACK

Mansfield blasts U.S. rail network as 'fraud, outrage'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana Saturday said the government-backed corporation that will begin May 1 to take over the nation's railroad passenger service is a fraud and "an outrage."

The National Railroad Passenger Corporation, dubbed Railpax, is "a real disservice to the people of this nation," Mansfield told reporters.

"I think Railpax is going to increase unemployment and decrease revenue for local governments in such states as my own and add to the gravity of the (economic) situation."

Railpax, created by Congress in 1970 to relieve private railroads of a costly part of their operations and to try to save the vanishing passenger train at the same time, announced last Monday that it would maintain a network linking 114 major cities requiring 184 trains.

That is roughly half the service now available.

Critics have faulted Railpax for eliminating service in sparsely populated states and some important cities, the largest being Cleveland, Ohio, once a major rail center.

"I don't intend to vote for any funds for this railroad corporation," Mansfield said. "I think I've been had . . . We can spend money for an SST and finance round trips to the moon, but we can't take care of the surface needs of the people of this planet . . . This is an outrage, an outrage."

Asked if he considered the Railpax idea a fraud,

Bomb reports leads to gold discovery

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — A report that a bomb had been placed in a storeroom at Lima's international airport led police to the discovery of $25,000 in gold bars.

The gold was in a parcel marked watches en route from Zurich to Buenos Aires.

No bomb was found.

he snapped: "I certainly do. That's putting it baldly, but I certainly do."

But Mansfield's Republican counterpart, Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, said he would like to see much more money appropriated by Congress for Railpax. The $40 million provided so far is "ridiculous" and "a drop in the bucket." Scott said in an interview taped for Pennsylvania television stations.

"You take $40 million in Railpax and $289 million for the SST . . . and it is out of proportion," he said.

The corporation already has received $40 million in cash from Congress plus $100 million worth of federal loan guarantees and about $200 million in loans or equipment from the railroads in exchange for their obligation to provide passenger service. The railroads will continue to provide the track and crews for the Railpax-operated trains.

David W. Kendall, the corporation's board chairman, said Monday that he expected it would incur a $100-million deficit in its first year. But he said he had no immediate plans to ask Congress for any more money.

Mansfield said he and Sen. Lee D. Metcalf, also a Montana Democrat, would sponsor legislation to revoke the free grants of land the federal government made many years ago to several railroads to help them extend service across the nation.

"These grants were made to serve the needs of specific areas, and if the railroads aren't going to serve them, then the government should ask that the lands be returned," he said, adding that much of that land includes "very profitable" resources of oil and timber.

Tougher U.S. wage curbs possible if current attempt fails

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson Saturday said if proposed voluntary wage constraints fail to moderate inflation in the construction industry, something more drastic may be tried.

"In contrast to traditional emergency control program, the proposed mechanism is largely self-regulating," Hodgson said. "It relies on the cooperation of the parties to make it work. Constraints probably more aptly describes the mechanism than controls. If in operation it does not produce results it will have to be replaced."

If Nixon okays the wage constraints as expected Monday, and if the third White House "inflation alert" set for early this week turns out to be tougher than the first two, it would represent a new offensive by the administration against inflation.

It would be the kind of anti-inflation policy pressed by the Federal Reserve Board. The board, by law independent from the White House, is reluctant to pursue Nixon's requested easier-money policies for fear of inflation.

THE LAST inflation alert, issued three months ago, threw the White House spotlight on wage and price increases in the oil, copper, railroad and automobile industries, among others.

That alert was stronger than the mild exhortations against inflation contained in the first, but it still contained one big qualification. It said the White House was not making any comment on whether any of the wage-price increases spelled out were justified.

Whether that qualification will be stripped from the upcoming report is uncertain. But administration officials said it will zero in on specific wage and price decisions.

Dr. Hendrik Houthakker, a member of Nixon's Council of Economic Advisors, said the new alert "will be of the same general nature" as the last.

He hinted that recent price increases of lumber and steel will be mentioned, along with comments on the inflation problem in the construction industry.

But Houthakker refused to say whether the alert will be tougher than the last.

Last Friday, Nixon's Construction Industry Stabilization Commission recommended the President issue an executive order that would set general wage guidelines in the construction industry, establish craft-by-craft boards to oversee them, and empower a stabilization board to take action if the guidelines are violated.

Nixon has long shunned setting up wage and price

Bayh urges U.S. profit, wage curbs

PORLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said wage and profit control measures should be used to halt inflation if voluntary programs fail to do the job.

Bayh, frequently mentioned as a possible presidential contender in 1972, met here with state Democratic officials. He was to attend a Democratic workshop Saturday at the Salem Fairgrounds.

Bayh told Democrats here he expects inflation to continue throughout the coming year.

The Indiana Democrat urged full voting rights for the nation's young people.

"I don't see how we can tolerate anything but full and complete access to the ballot box," he said.

Bayh called Vice President Spiro Agnew's criticism of a CRS documentary "typical." He said he felt the program, "Selling of the Pentagon," was "accurate."

guidelines, and so have his economic advisers, but the administration has pointed to the construction industry as a different situation.

The inflation alert should shed light on whether Nixon has been fully converted to the policy of "jawboning," the use of White House pressure-by-publicity to hold down big wage and price increases. Already Nixon has jawboned one steel firm into cutting a large price increase by half.

Hodgson said the executive order he proposed "provides for a mechanism of constraints that should bring substantial stability to the inflation-ridden construction industry."

"The President's suspension of the Davis-Bacon Act on Feb. 23, 1971 has generated a climate conducive to industry-union participation in such a mechanism. The suspension was a clear manifestation of the President's seriousness of purpose. The executive order option would not have been a practical course for the President if he had not taken the action he did in the first instance.

"The proposed constraints employ as one enforcement tool the disengaging of excessive wage settlements when prevailing wage determinations are being made for Davis-Bacon Act purposes. This is to say we can suspend the administration of Davis-Bacon in selective local circumstances. This is a natural sequence of the national suspension action.

"While the proposed executive order rests legally on the wage and price control features of the Economic Stabilization Act of 1970, it is predicated on industry-union cooperation and not on traditional concepts of controls where the government has established formal regulations enforceable in court by fine and imprisonment.

"In contrast to traditional emergency control programs, the proposed mechanism is largely self-regulating. It relies on the cooperation of the parties to make it work. Constraints probably more aptly describes the mechanism than controls. If in operation it does not produce results it will have to be replaced."

10,000 Pakistani 'Bangla' reported killed in uprising

Indira Gandhi expressed support Saturday for the rebel followers of Sheik Rahman in the Pakistan civil war.

"We welcome the Democratic action of an entire people who have spoken with one voice," she told Parliament in New Delhi in reference to the uprising by East Pakistanis against the Pakistan army.

The Pakistan government radio, broadcasting from the Western portion of the geographically divided country, said reports of fighting in East Pakistan were exaggerated.

Radio Pakistan said the army was in full control throughout East Pakistan and that the situation there was rapidly returning to normal Saturday.

Radio Pakistan attributed its reports to martial law administrators in Dacca, the capital of East Pakistan, which is separated from the western province by 1,000 miles of Indian territory.

DETAILS OF the situation were sketchy. The federal government imposed total censorship in both parts of Pakistan early Friday after initial reports on the outbreak of civil war.

A rebel station, identifying itself as Radio Free Bengal and monitored in India, said Pakistan air force planes had bombed civilian areas in East Pakistan. The PTI, quoting East Pakistanis along the Shelter

Q. I understand there is a fully-equipped hospital under Los Alamitos Race Course and that it was built for emergencies which might arise during air attacks. Is this true? E. E., Long Beach.

A. Not quite true, according to a public relations spokesman for Los Alamitos Race Course, 4961 E. Katella Ave., Cypress. "We have a very large and well-equipped first aid area under the grandstands, which operates only during racing season," he said. "There also is a Civil Defense, bomb-shelter kind of facility which was built under the grandstands during their construction in 1949 and '50." ACTION LINE checked with William Krause, Los Alamitos city manager, who confirmed there is a "county disaster facility" under the Los Alamitos Race Course grandstand, which could service the Los Alamitos-Cypress area during an emergency. Krause said the facility has been continually stocked and modified by the Orange County Civil Defense office since its construction.

Traveller's aid

Q. Can ACTION LINE give me the name and address of a local club for individuals who like to camp with motor homes, campers or tents? A. B., Long Beach.

A. Most camper clubs are sponsored by individual manufacturers and are open only to those persons who own that brand of camper. If you now own a camper, check with the manufacturer about clubs for your brand of camper. Fredson's Trailer Supply, 815 N. Harbor Blvd., Santa Ana, sponsors several camper clubs in the Orange County area that are open to any type of camper or trailer. For more information on the chapter nearest your home, call Fredson's at 839-5555. The Santa Ana Trailer Club is another local camping club, but it does not accept camper owners. For membership information, write to Penny Betschar, 507 S. Euclid St., Space 136, Santa Ana, Calif. 92704. The National Campers and Hikers Association with chapters throughout California is open to all campers with or without recreational vehicles. To find the chapter nearest your home, write to Leonard Wise, promotional director, 8741 Hillcroft Trail, Canoga Park, Calif. 91340.

Despite the increase in traffic, however, military sources said only about eight per cent of the Communist supplies moving on the trail was actually getting through to communist forces in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

U.S. air strikes were reported to have knocked out at least 200 trucks per day, forcing the Communists to stockpile huge quantities of weapons and ammunition outside battle areas.

In Saigon, South Vietnamese headquarters announced the Laos offensive, which had massive U.S. air support, had deprived the Communists of 176,246 tons of munitions. A communiqué said the thrust destroyed more than 120 Soviet-built tanks, 1.3 million liters of gasoline, about 7,000 yards of fuel pipelines and a large quantity of miscellaneous war material.

IT REMAINED to be seen what role would be played by the 20,000 South Vietnamese troops posted in South Vietnam's northern reaches after pulling out of the Laos drive.

U.S. troops continued to withdraw from northern bases they had occupied to support the Laos campaign. UPI correspondent Stewart Kellerman reported from the provincial capital of Quant Tri that U.S. commanders gave South Vietnamese forces control over one of four such bases along the demilitarized zone.

More Americans left Khe Sanh Saturday, but a low cloud cover and bad weather slowed the withdrawal. Khe Sanh was the main U.S. support base for Laos.

U.S. ARMY troops at Khe Sanh blew up bunkers, dismantled one of the two aluminum mat runways and loaded equipment aboard transport planes. Parts of the Khe Sanh telephone switchboard were removed.

South Vietnamese intelligence officers said a North Vietnamese commando battalion had been detected close to Khe Sanh, which is 12 miles from the Laotian border. They predicted more commando raids on the base.

Three U.S. soldiers were killed by Communist hand grenades Saturday in a brief, close-in skirmish 14 miles north of Khe Sanh and about six miles south of the demilitarized zone.

Crews then started work on a third hole in hopes of reaching the men. They said drills were not expected to reach the level where the men were trapped until at least daybreak today.

Rescuers also reported special seismic devices deployed on the surface failed to detect sounds of life in the Buckeye Coal Co. shaft, about 340 feet below the surface. Company officials held little hope for the men's survival.

The first drill penetrated a section of the mine where Richard Randolph, 63, is believed to have been when the fire broke out about 10 a.m. Friday.

The second rig cut to the spot 500 feet away where Charles Gibson, 61, was thought to have been working.

Drillers said a partial roof fall was encountered at the base of the first hole.

where a big Communist buildup is reported.

The three were members of the 1st Brigade, 5th Infantry Division. Communist losses, if any, were not reported.

Fall kills rich family's daughter in Tulare jail

TULARE (UPI) — Marian J. Maguire, member of a prominent Connecticut industrialist family, died here after falling from an upper bunk in a jail cell, it was learned Saturday.

Miss Maguire, 27, of New York City, was jailed in nearby Porterville Wednesday on charges of narcotics possession and drunkenness.

Tulare County Pathologist Dr. Jude Hayes said Saturday an autopsy showed that Miss Maguire bled to death from a ruptured spleen.

A Porterville jailor found her lying on the floor of her cell Friday morning. She died en route to Tulare County Hospital here.

Dr. Hayes said Miss Maguire, daughter of Mrs. Russell Maguire of Greenwich, Conn., had been taking daily doses of methadone, a legal substitute for heroin which is administered to addicts.

Dr. Hayes said among her property at the jail were empty 100-milligram methadone containers for Monday and Tuesday and unopened containers for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The doctor said she could have been going through "withdrawal" when she fell in her jail cell.

Porterville police refused to comment.

Police had been called to a motel Wednesday after Miss Maguire and a traveling companion, Randolph Boone, 22, also of New York City, tried to pay for their room with an expired credit card.

Police searched the couple's chauffeured limousine, which had been rented in Los Angeles, and discovered marijuana. Boone and Miss Maguire were arrested.

Boone, still facing marijuana possession charges, said Saturday, "I don't know why they're charging me with it. I was her employee. She bought it with her money and it was in her baggage."

Miss Maguire was the former wife of Don Allen

Chickering, a New York socialite. They have a seven-year-old son, Donn, and were divorced in 1967, at which time she married Hollywood producer Robert A. Weiner. Miss Maguire later divorced Weiner.

Her father, the late Russell Maguire, became wealthy as an industrialist and financier, established the Russell Maguire Foundation and served as president and board chairman of several corporations.

robbery. I feel both died rather needlessly."

Dr. James I. McCord, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, selected two symbols for the bible attachment.

One was an early symbol of Christianity, a boat bearing a cross over waves. The modern symbol was a bible with earth and moon orbiting around it and the words, "God's Word for a New Age."

ALTHOUGH many participants chose family and friends for the honor roll, McCord's list included Jesus, Socrates, Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, and Harry Truman; Albert Einstein, Martin Luther King, consumer crusader Ralph Nader, the World Council of Churches and the Roman Catholic Church.

The Apollo 14 flight also carried a 25-gram packet containing 100 microfilms of the King James version of the bible in the Antares lunar lander. A similar packet of 200 was carried in the command module, Kitty Hawk.

The 300 "bibles" are being distributed to dignitaries and friends with dedicatory letters signed by Mitchell, Stout said.

Pilots' errors frequent

HAMILTON AFB, Calif.

(UPI) — If past experience is a guide, one out of every 25 of the nation's civilian aircraft — not to be confused with commercial aircraft — will be involved in an accident this year.

"It's not that flying has to be dangerous," said Richard G. Daugherty, California Department of Aeronautics consultant. "It's just that a lot of idiots make it so."

Dougherty estimates 75 per cent of private plane accidents are caused by pilot error, and other experts generally agree.

"A lot of the general aviation pilots feel they can fly one or two hours a month and maintain their proficiency," said Maj. Carol M. Kertson of the Western Rescue Coordination Center at Hamilton AFB. "But it just isn't true."

NATIONWIDE there are 126,000 non-military planes, mostly private pleasure craft, and each year about 5,000 of them report a serious accident causing substantial damage. About 1,200 persons die in the accidents.

In California, 42 aircraft currently are missing with 86 persons aboard. So many known old wrecks, 560, are lying around the countryside that in a 150-square mile area east of Los Angeles, searchers in the air can't pick an old one from a new one.

Dougherty told of a physician pilot who took up a friend when the gas tank was nearly empty, and both were killed. Two or three California crashes a month, he said, result from "fuel exhaustion."

PROBABLY the most common kind of pilot error is to take a chance in bad weather. Last December, Maj. Kertson says, a man warned about the weather took off from Paso Robles, saying he "would sneak through." He and his passenger haven't been seen since.

August, when the most people are flying, is the worst month for air crashes, but the bad weather of the winter is the worst season for Western Air Rescue coordination Center.

The center is one of three Air Force facilities in the nation coordinating search activities. In the eight Western states covered by the center 3,000 "incidents" occur annually.

IN ABOUT 250 cases a year, an incident turns into a search. Most are for missing planes, and some involve persons lost on the ground.

If a plane is more than 90 minutes overdue, an Air Force C130 with a crew of 10, including pararescue specialists, takes off from Hamilton for a quick inspection of the missing craft's flight path.

A C130, a four-engine turboprop, is kept "in a cocked position" at all times, ready to be airborne in a half hour. Weather and daylight permitting, a C130 on the hunt typically is joined in a few hours by up to 20 Civil Air Patrol craft.

Searches for missing planes, Maj. Kertson said, often are handicapped because one-third of the kind of pilots who crack up hadn't bothered to file flight plans before takeoff.

KERTSON EXPECTS to be helped by a new California requirement, also proposed nationally, that all planes carry emergency locator transmitters. In a crash the radio transmitters automatically emit beeps which the Air Force can locate.

"But what we need more than anything else," said Ivan Stracener, local chief of the U.S. Bureau of Aviation Safety, "is more education of pilots. We have far more accidents than we should."

Adm. Zumwalt to be guest of honor at L.B. banquet

Adm. Elmo R. Zumwalt Jr., chief of naval operations, will be guest of honor and speaker for the Long Beach Armed Services YMCA's 35th annual banquet.

The fete will be Wednesday night, May 12 in Long Beach Naval Station's sparkling new enlisted Club Mariner.

Long Beach Congressman Craig Hosmer was instrumental in Adm. Zumwalt's acceptance of the invitation and notified local officials Saturday of the admiral's acceptance. "It will be a homecoming for him," Rep. Hosmer said. "He attended Rutherford Preparatory School in Long Beach before going to the Naval Academy."

"The admiral's keen interest in the enlisted man in today's Navy makes it a natural for him to be in Long Beach for the Y's annual banquet."

"The work, programs and goals of the Y and its civilian committee of management have long been recognized as superior by top Navy officials," Rep. Hosmer added.

Loren McCannon, management committee chairman, and Bob Farnham, expressed "delight" with Rep. Hosmer's announcement.

Adm. Zumwalt, 49, has been dubbed the "enlisted man's admiral" since taking over the Navy's top job Aug. 1, 1970 — jumping 33 seniors when President Nixon designated him.

His now famous directives, or "Z-Grams," have seen sweeping changes in the Navy — all people-oriented. Results have shown already as first term retention rates have increased from 9 to 14 percent since his "Z-Grams" began.

Capt. Charles E. Stasny, Naval Station commander, made Club Mariner available. It can seat almost 1,000 persons for a banquet.

ADM. ELMO ZUMWALT To Speak Here

The Armed Services Y has been operating since 1936 and for the past 10 years at its 101 S. Magnolia Ave. facility.

Capt. (rel.) Mort Lytle, is banquet chairman, and said Saturday he will have an announcement on further banquet details.

He is a former Naval Station commander and now assistant administrator at Pacific Hospital.

"You can bet we will have more enlisted participation this year," Capt. Lytle said.

PROUD OF 220 KINOldest Russian still chops wood at 165

By PETER J. SHAW

MOSCOW (UPI) — The man doctors recognize as the oldest person in the Soviet Union still chops wood at his claimed age of 165 because "I am convinced an idler cannot live long."

Shirali Mislomov, declared dean of the nation's nearly 22,000 centenarians by the 1970 census, said in an interview with a Soviet magazine that his 220 family members keep him happy.

"Wretched indeed is a man who lives alone, by himself," the retired shepherd said.

"When I was born, my father planted a walnut tree on the rise by our tent. May my son live as long as this tree," he said. The tree grew strong, its branches rose to the sky . . .

"But one day the tree was destroyed. Nearly, a forest still rustles even to this day. The tree perished because it was alone. In the same way, a man cannot grow alone."

Mislomov was quoted in Soviet Literature, monthly magazine of the Soviet Writers Union, which said it interviewed him at his life-long home in Barzav, Azerbaijan. Most of his offspring also reside in the mountain village 6,000 feet high in the Caucasus, the area known as "The Land of Longevity."

The magazine said Mislomov — "his hands seem carved from the roots of an old tree" — retired on a pension three years ago.

He not only still chops wood, it said, but "digs around trees in an orchard which he has replanted several times in his lifetime."

Mislomov's eyes are faded with time, like blind clouded windows, but these eyes are laughing at naive people who are convinced life at 165 is a heavy burden," the magazine said.

Plan seen releasing $12 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Connecticut freshmen representatives announced Saturday they plan to offer a resolution to the House Democratic Caucus demanding that President Nixon release $12 billion in impounded funds.

"At a time of unacceptable high unemployment, the freezing of these funds for urban renewal, mass transit, water and sewerage facilities, and other necessary programs is unconscionable," they said in a joint statement.

Rep. Ella T. Grasso and William R. Cotter said they would present the resolution at the caucus' April 21 meeting.

"WE ARE hopeful that our efforts will encourage the President to order these funds released," they said. "After all, the Congress passed these appropriations and the President signed the bills."

"If the Bureau of Management and Budget is allowed to exercise what is in effect an item veto there is little reason to have congressional action at all," they said.

The Connecticut lawmakers said, "It is incomprehensible to us how the administration can be drumming up support for revenue sharing with governors and mayors . . . and then deny them the revenues Congress has already directed to be shared with states and cities."

Municipal elections to test Chilean socialism

By MATTHEW T. KENNY

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — An early "judgment day" for President Salvador Allende and his Marxist-oriented government is coming on Sunday, April 4, five months after he took office.

The test will come in nationwide municipal elections which will also give an indication of how far — and how fast — Allende can push Chile down "the road to socialism" before the next scheduled congressional elections in 1973.

Because Allende is the first elected Marxist president in Chile, and in the hemisphere, the usually hum-drum municipal elections five months after he took office have assumed major importance here as an indication of how he is doing.

THERE ARE 3,160 candidates running for the 1,653 posts of alderman that are at stake throughout the nation. Also to be filled is the Senate seat Allende left vacant when he assumed the presidency last Nov. 3.

Although he won the presidential elections last Sept. 4, Allende received only 36 per cent of the popular vote. His plurality — or margin of victory — was a mere 1.4 per cent.

His victory in a three-way race came when the non-Marxist majority of Chileans divided their votes between rightist independent Jorge Alessandri and Christian Democrat Radomiro Tomic.

As stunning as it was — putting a Marxist into power for a scheduled six year term — Allende's narrow triumph lacked the stamp of overwhelming approval so important to a president who said he would destroy the "economic right," completely revamp Chile's social structures and begin the nation's conversion into a Socialist state.

Although the municipal election are for aldermen, they afford Allende a chance to get quick additional at-the-polls political authority — assuming the government party candidates win substantially.

A win of 51 per cent would enable the 62-year-old president to claim a clear-cut "popular mandate" at home and to reap prestige abroad, political observers agree.

MOST observers believe the government parties have a "good" chance to do well in the aggregate, and that Allende's 36 per cent showing in the presidential race will increase.

Allende — a close friend of Cuba's Fidel Castro — is personally optimistic

JOBLESS TO WORK ON ECOLOGY PROBLEMS

Moonport area colleges retrain space workers

By AL ROSSITER JR.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)

— Three moonport area colleges have teamed up in a unique project to retrain unemployed space workers and put them to work solving some of the problems man is creating here on earth.

The idea is to counter the surge in joblessness resulting from the slowdown in the space program and meet the demand for more skilled engineers and technicians in the growing drive to attack pollution and save the environment.

The project is called RETRO, for regional environmental training and research organization. Not only do its planners want to alleviate some of the unemployment problems in space-oriented Brevard county, but they want to turn it into a practical, problem-solving environmental research center for the southeastern United States.

RETRO IS THE brainchild of Rep. Lou Frey, R-

Fla. His central Florida district includes Cape Kennedy, where 21,000 jobs have been eliminated during the past four years from a peak employment of 52,000 at National Aeronautics and Space Administration and Air Force facilities.

Three colleges within a 35-mile radius of the spaceport agreed Feb. 2 to undertake the project. Florida Institute of Technology and Brevard Community College formed a consortium to offer a complete range of short-term courses, from the non-degree operator level through the graduate professional engineering level.

They proposed spending as much as $16.6 million in federal education and living allowance funds over a two-year period to retrain up to 3,000 aerospace operators, technicians, engineers and scientists in environmental and related fields.

"WE KNOW WE'RE not going to solve the unemployment problems of everybody in Brevard," said Walter J. Gilfilen, preliminary coordinator of the young project. "We don't intend to. But we expect to take an awful big chunk out of the problem."

"There's a mushrooming environmental manpower need," he said in an interview in his office at the Brevard Community College, 17 miles west of the Cape's launch pads. "A lot of people are going to be looking for help, and they've already talked to us. This need is coming on quite rapidly."

Frey said many federal government officials he has consulted believe his program may serve as a model for similar centers in other pockets of aerospace unemployment.

A month after its conception, RETRO won a commitment of $90,000 in planning funds from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. On March 11, the Environmental Protection Agency agreed to grant $120,000 to launch the training phase.

GILFILLEN SAID detailed planning should be completed this spring. It will find out how many surplus space workers are interested and what their qualifications are. It will pinpoint the jobs available and the skills needed to fill them and it will design courses to meet the employment opportunities. Then specific financing requests will be presented to government agencies.

Unlike some retraining programs, RETRO plans to find jobs for the people as soon as they are prepared to tackle the problems of the environment. Their training may take anywhere from 90 days to two years and RETRO may be able to match the qualifications of some space workers with environmental jobs without extra preparation.

Viet war blamed on draft law

SANTA CRUZ (UPI) — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Saturday that if it were not for the draft, Americans would not be in Vietnam today.

Cranston, who is backing the creation of an all volunteer army, opposes extending the draft when the present law expires June 30.

"It is the continued presence of 322,000 Americans in Vietnam that is preventing President Nixon from terminating the American involvement more rapidly," he said in a speech prepared for a Democratic dinner.

"It was the easy availability of virtually unlimited numbers of men," Cranston said, "who could be pressed into military service merely by raising the draft call that enabled President Johnson to escalate the fighting in Southeast Asia without having to ask the permission of Congress."

CRANSTON said Defense Department studies show the all-volunteer army is "both obtainable and desirable."

"They show convincingly that a volunteer army will neither undermine national security nor create a poor black army," he said.

Cranston also said the draft "increases the risk for those young Americans who do go to Southeast Asia."

"Because of the two year limit on draftee service," he said, "draftees are hurried into combat after a short training period and then, if they survive, are retired from combat at just about the time when they've learned to take care of themselves under fire — only to be replaced by more raw, inexperienced draftees."

"Since World War II, the draft has become a bad habit of political convenience that needs to be broken before it further jeopardizes our freedom," he said.

$3 MILLION RISK

Gambling grandma bets all on Reno casino

By RUSSELL NIELSEN

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Jessie Beck, Nevada's "gambling grandmother," has put up $3 million in the biggest gamble of her life.

After 32 years in the business, the soft-spoken, white-haired Mrs. Beck could have retired in luxury. Instead she bought the Riverside hotel-casino.

Once the "in place" for divorcees and movie stars, the Riverside fell on hard times as it aged in the shadow of new resorts and closed three years ago.

Mrs. Beck knows the old tradition of professional gambling that once a casino has "burned out," or closed, it never comes back. Moreover, as the first woman owner-operator of a major casino, she will have to compete against such industry giants as William Harrah and Howard Hughes.

"IT'S THE biggest gamble of my life, but one I intend to win," she said.

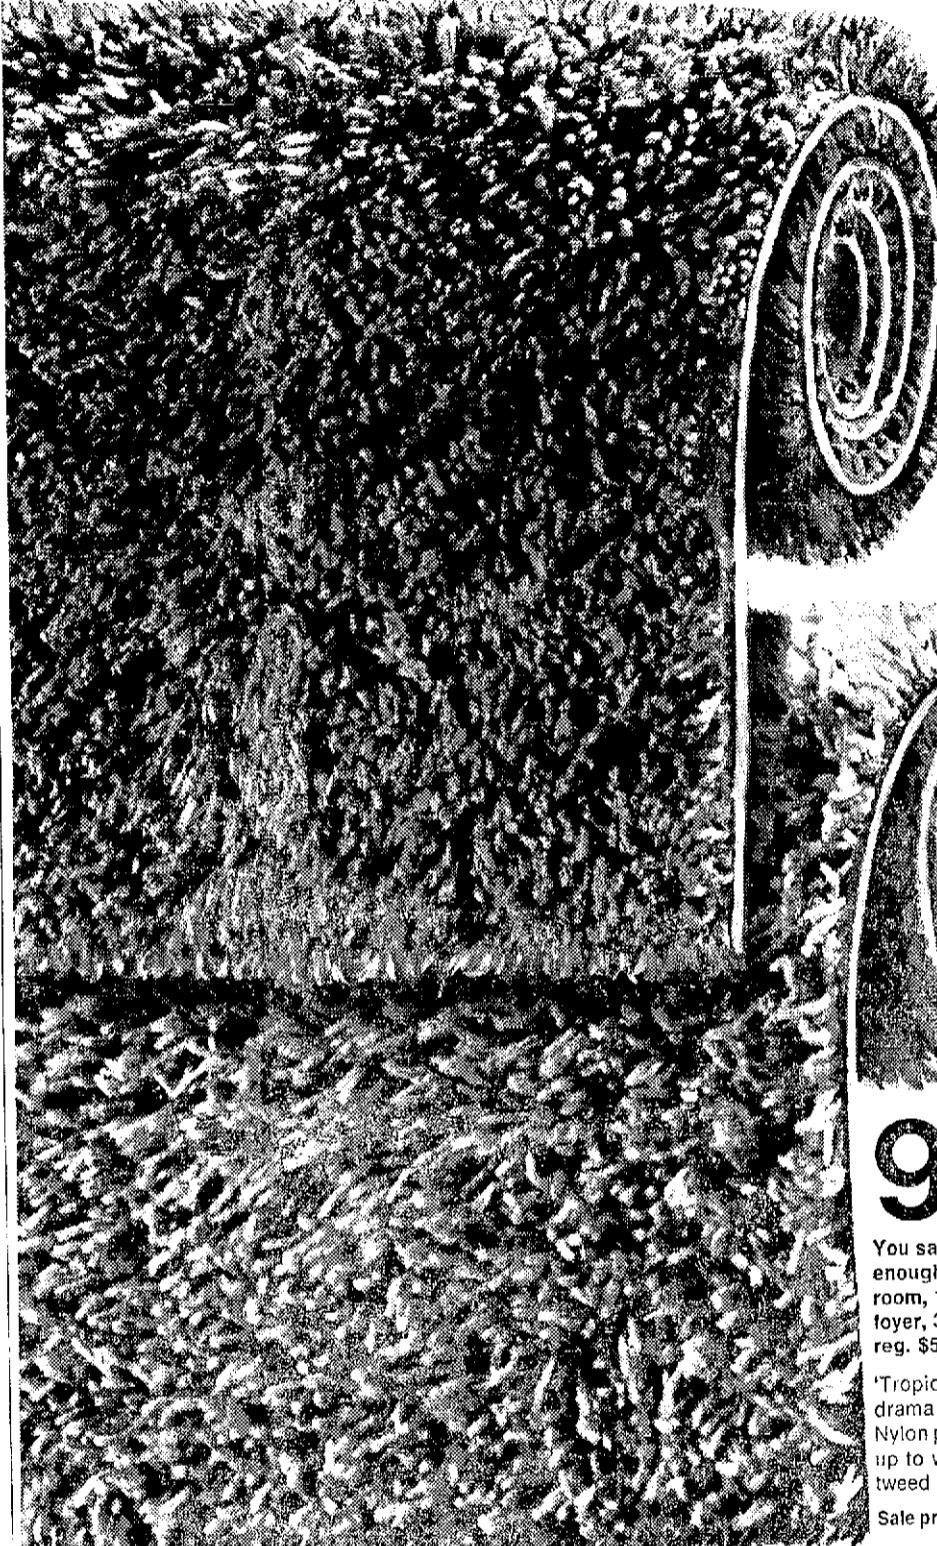

Hughes was largely responsible for her decision to buy the red brick hotel on the bank of the Truckee river. Since the death of her husband in 1954, she and her son had owned and operated the keno concession in Harolds Club, a few blocks down "casino row." When Hughes acquired the Pioneer casino in 1970, the billionaire's agents claimed the Keno game was included. She objected, and there were negotiations which resulted in her getting her price, but she was out of business.

For a short time, she enjoyed her free time. She spent much of it on her hobby of writing to servicemen overseas. That started in 1965 with a letter to one of her "Keno boys" and expanded to such an extent she eventually received a defense department civilian award. But she hadn't been retired long before she missed her casino life.

Dam sign of quake's vast force

SYLMAR (UPI) — The tremendous destructive force of the killer earthquake that jolted the San Fernando Valley last Feb. 9 stood revealed Saturday in awesome detail with the draining of the Van Norman Lake's reservoir near here.

Some cracks in the dam that formed the reservoir and a few signs of buckled concrete were visible the day the tremor struck, killing 64 persons, but only after the lake was pumped dry was the full damage exposed.

See Gilbert Bailey's story "The Big Quake—It may be a Lot Worse Next Time" in Southland Sunday Magazine.

Pumping began a few hours after the quake as workers fought to lower the lake level so 80,000 persons living below could return to their homes. For a time, authorities feared the dam would break, unleashing millions of gallons of water into the predominantly residential area. It was damaged so badly the water was pumped out.

Now, with mud still in the bottom of the lake, engineers are studying the tumbled concrete towers, crumpled slabs, buckled catwalks and pretzel-like steel reinforcing in hopes of learning more about earthquakes. Their knowledge will be used when the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power rebuilds Van Norman Lake Reservoir.

"IT WILL take at least a year for all information to be in, evaluated and a final decision made," said Gerald A. Wyss, assistant chief engineer for the department.

Study is being made jointly by the city and state and Wyss said the new dam "will be rebuilt in the same general area within two years of completion of the study."

The original dam was built in 1916 at a cost of less than $1 million to form an emergency storage area for the Los Angeles water system.

THIS IS WHAT EARTHQUAKE DID

An engineer for the Los Angeles Department of Water and Power inspects a collapsed tower and other damage at the Van Norman Lakes Reservoir near Sylmar which was exposed Saturday with the last draining of the lakes.

TORN APART BY QUAKE

Much of the concrete facing of the earth fill dam that formed the Van Norman reservoir lies in ruins as a result of the Feb. 9 quake. Engineers will spend the next year studying the damage, then apply the knowledge to rebuilding the reservoir.

Six Persons Hanged in Pretoria Prison

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Six persons were hanged last week in Pretoria prison, a senior spokesman for the Pretoria Supreme court said today.

The spokesman declined to disclose the names of the persons executed, but said one of them was a colored man convicted of criminally assaulting a white infant.

Legal experts condemned the lack of information surrounding the hangings. Dr. Barend Van Niekerk, senior law lecturer at the University of Witwatersrand, said South Africa's Prisons Act "with all its Draconian threats throws a complete pall of silence over prisons which in every other country — apart from Communist states — is regarded as subject legitimate public concern."

Prof. Sybrand Strauss, University of South Africa law professor, said it is in the "interest of public and state that details of executions be made known. As long as we continue to hide this information we are feeding our enemies aboard with ammunition."

Wiseman moved for summary dismissal of the Scriptress suit.

Judge Peckham refused and scheduled further pre-trial hearings for June 24.

Red Cross slates meeting for volunteers' orientation

The Long Beach Red Cross will hold an orientation for new volunteers at the Chapter House, 319 W. Broadway on Saturday, Mrs. Max E. Nichols, chairman of volunteers announced Saturday.

"Our orientation gives the new volunteer a brief introduction into Red Cross history and a detailed explanation of the volunteer's role in the various Red Cross programs," said Mrs. Nichols.

The Long Beach chapter has approximately 1,000 volunteers serving the greater Long Beach area. "Our volunteers are the very heart of Red Cross," said Mrs. Nichols. "The national ratio of volunteers to professional staff is 150 to 1, but in Long Beach we have approximately 165 volunteers to each staff member."

"You don't have to be wealthy to own choice resort property in the Palm Springs area."

Leon Ames popular television, radio and movie star

I'm a booster of the Palm Springs way of life. I know. People come to this sunny resort land prepared for dry, warm air and relaxed living. But they soon find more. Much more.

Like me, they learn that Palm Springs is a place where things happen. And, even though its resort reputation attracts 1,500,000 visitors annually, its future is barely tapped.

Looking around, you can understand why Palm Springs has become the playground for celebrities and presidents. Its beautiful weather, combined with superb golf courses, magnificent scenery and lush date and citrus groves, makes it the most unusual desert spa in the world. Yet you don't have to be rich to own choice property in the Palm Springs area. Not any more!

Yes, you can own your own mobile home estate, valuable developed land right in the heart of Golfland, U.S.A.—just 12 miles from Palm Springs City Hall—for as little as $5750 cash. Or you may arrange convenient pay-as-you-enjoy terms.

Ground has been broken on these exceptional mobile home estates—and construction is underway, along with the neighboring new Eisenhower Medical Center.*

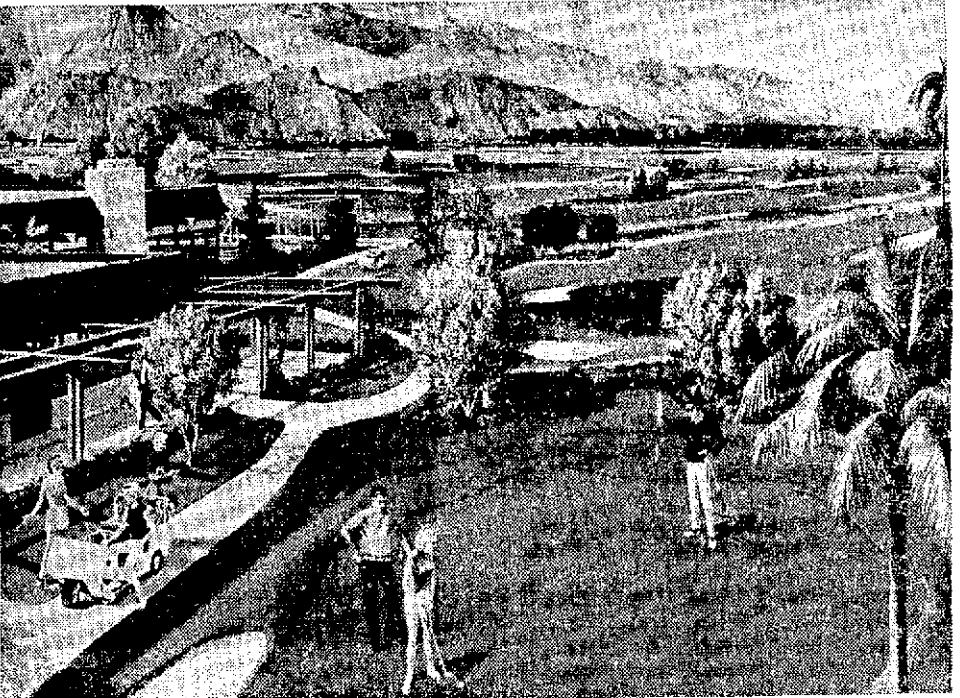

Here, just 1 1/4 miles east of Bob Hope Drive on Country Club Drive, we're putting in an 18-hole private golf course—a big clubhouse and recreation center—bonded underground utilities—handsomely landscaped grounds. All behind guarded gates.*

Now, during development stages, is a wise time to make your choice of mobile home estates—before demand eliminates the best sites.

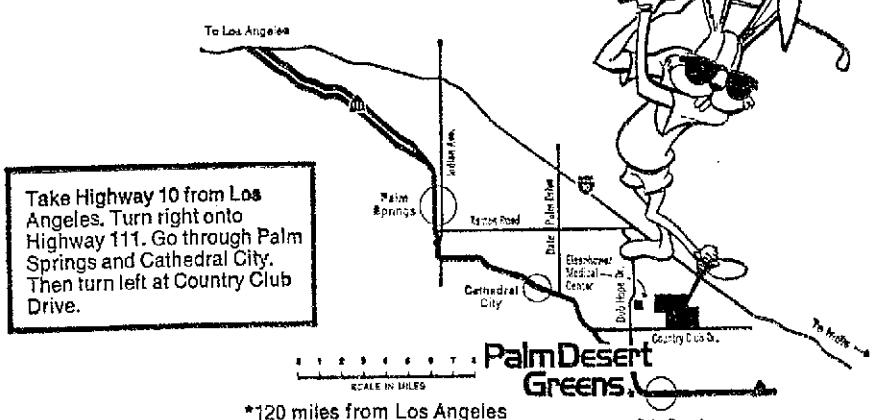

Come out to meet the fine people who conceived Palm Desert Greens, members of the Avland Development Company, (a subsidiary of AVCO Community Developers Inc.) and PR Realty Corp. (a subsidiary of the Paul Revere Life Insurance Company). Here are folks with an established and respected name in community development. Their other activities include Carte Blanche Credit Cards, Paul Revere Life Insurance, Embassy Films, and the new towns of Laguna Niguel and Rancho Bernardo. Good company to be in! Visit Palm Desert Greens, and discuss its prospects. Do it now, while selection is at its best—prices at their early low. Call for details, or mail the coupon for more information. I'll be looking for you!

DOWN TO EARTHFreeways shaped for suburbaniteBy GILBERT BAILEY
Contributing Editor

Freeways do more than just create pollution, according to a University of California expert in the geography of transportation.

"Over the years the freeway program that was shaped for the prosperous suburbanite has begun to exact a cost not from its originators but rather from the relatively poor who came to occupy the central-area housing," said Professor James E. Vance Saturday at the 2nd annual California Transportation and Public Works Conference held at UCLA.

"So long as the poor have to live where they do in the city, the simple freeway solution cannot avoid being socially regressive in its costs," he added.

Vance, who is the author of a Bay Area study on growth, did not totally knock the freeways.

"They provide most of us a very pleasant lifestyle under which we can live in the traditional California way with space, sunlight and openness," he said.

From the first California cities have been shaped along environmental lines, favoring openness and urban fringe living, and thus favoring the immigration of middle-class citizens, speculators rather than homesteaders, he added.

And this shape of California cities was aided by the development of interurban electric trolley cars, which provided better service for Los Angeles than mass transit did for other cities, according to Vance. Freeways were developed to supplement the trolley system.

"Unfortunately, freeways became a panacea and there began to be arguments of equity advanced by land owners at the edge of the city and even well within the countryside," he explained.

"I do not want to suggest that there are not very good traffic reasons for some of the freeways that were built; I do want to suggest that they were not always built for traffic reasons alone, or even primarily," he added.

Vance was not kind to the Bay Area Rapid Transit District's system now under construction.

"Careful analysis of its route planning and objectives showed that it sought to care for the commuting of the financial district workers of San Francisco and little else. Thus it is grey-flannel suit transit, such as the freeways have often been, not that for the masses."

The U.C. professor argues for a more balanced transit program, and then added that the defeat of Proposition 18 on last year's California ballot may in the long run do more harm than good for the freeway cause.

"By fixing the state policy of transportation development in a simplistic mold it made certain that all subsequent failings will be thought the fault of freeways, and it encouraged consumerism in transportation," he said.

But he listed something which he termed "far more tragic."

"The evidence it furnished that California has become an old culture—conservative, rigid, simplistic and self-satisfied."

Vance's comments have a number of applications to the Los Angeles Basin.

It raises questions about the reasons for some of the proposed new freeways in particular the Pacific Coast Freeway.

It points up the need for a transportation service for the poor, the ones who need it most.

And it points up the need for a balanced transportation system, one which will serve both people and the environment.

Southern California is supposed to be the home of the new culture. Yet it was Southern California which defeated Proposition 18.

Perhaps, there is still time here to find new and better answers.

White coed attacks Black student union for race bias

WAYNE, N.J. — A coed at William Paterson College in Wayne has charged the school's Black Student Union with refusing to accept her as a member because she is white.

Mrs. Laura Flannery added she was a follower of the principles of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., and felt this was a way she could work for integration.

James H. Blair, director of the Civil Rights Division, set a conference on the complaint for Monday at the agency's Patterson office. Charged in the complaint are Dr. James K. Olson, president of William Paterson College, and the BSU and its officers.

Dewey leaves bulk of estate to sons

NEW YORK — The late Thomas E. Dewey left the bulk of his estate, estimated at more than $1 million, to his two sons, according to his will filed for probate last week in Manhattan Surrogate's Court.

The former New York governor died in Florida on March 16, at age 61. He left $115,000 in bequests.

The sons, Thomas E. Dewey Jr., and John Martin Dewey, share equally in Dattlemere Farm, Pawling, N.Y., given to them in trust.

Russ plan testsof Atlantic Ocean

BORDEAUX, France — Soviet scientists on a visit here announced plans to place specially equipped buoys in the Atlantic Ocean to transmit data about the temperature and salinity of the sea and energy transfer between the atmosphere and the ocean.

They said dozens of the buoys are currently being tested in the Black Sea.

Texas ranchers keep faith in rainmaker

ASPERMONT, Tex. (UPI) — Maj. Homer Berry wants to bring rain to West Texas. He stands to be damned if he doesn't and jailed if he does.

At one time, a cartel of ranchers offered him $10,000 to make five inches of rain in 30 days for Stonewall County. It only rained .69 of an inch during that month but the ranchers kept the faith. If not all their money, in Berry.

They are now offering him $1,200 for rain — any rain.

"We've got to try something," rancher Charles Abernathy, Berry's most loyal supporter, said. "If we don't get some rain we can't feed our cattle and if we can't feed our cattle, pretty soon we can't feed our children."

But Texas has a law prohibiting anyone from tampering with the weather without a permit. The Water Development Board refused to issue Berry a permit on Feb. 24 and last week it informed the would-be rainmaker he could be jailed for 10 days and fined between $100 and $1,000 if he tried to bring rain.

"They're picking on the major because he doesn't have a lot of professional equipment and all that stuff," Abernathy said.

Berry's technique involves soaking charcoal briquets in some special chemical formula and then lighting the charcoal to "smoke the rain out of the clouds." He drives a red pickup truck which hauls the trailer which carries his charcoal-smoking pot throughout Stonewall County.

Berry, meanwhile, has returned to his home in Little Rock, Ark., because of the threat presented by the Water Development Board.

"The board wants to lock me up for fighting the drought," Berry said. "I'd get on the bus and come back tomorrow but they won't give me a permit and they won't let me make rain."

Laments Abernathy: "It's a darn shame. That's all, a darn shame."

Bill would bar tax consultants from selling files

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., said Saturday he will introduce legislation to preserve the confidentiality of information taxpayers give persons for preparation of their income tax returns.

Mathias, who planned to introduce his bill Monday, said the measure would require the consent of the taxpayer before a tax preparer could use information in the return for any purpose whatsoever.

"Many income tax preparation firms and services are beginning to move into other fields, such as the selling of mutual funds, insurance and other financial services, and are using for these marketing purposes the detailed knowledge of their customers gleaned in the course of preparing income tax returns," Mathias said in a statement.

"There is no federal law that presently prohibits the unauthorized use by private tax form preparers of disclosing contents of a tax return."

"It is both ludicrous and alarming to have the Internal Revenue Service holding a tax return in strict secrecy while private firms are shipping and selling the same information all over the country without the taxpayers' knowledge or consent. Yet this is all too possible today," Mathias said.

Nearly half of the 75 million federal tax returns filed each year are prepared by someone other than the taxpayer, Mathias estimated.

He also cited reports that one company, H & R Block, would handle almost 10 per cent of all returns filed this year. He said he was alarmed that this firm had announced plans to permit its customers list to be used by a subsidiary.

Profile of 14 school board candidates

To make the task of judging the candidates in the current school board race a little easier before election day, April 2, the Independent Press-Telegram is running sketches of all 14 candidates. (There were 18 originally, but four dropped out of the race last week.)

The sketches are based on the candidates' response to 28 questions and include some biographical data.

There's no effort to favor one candidate or another. The sketches, or summaries, are based on the candidates' own efforts: the reflection and thought they put into their answers and the originality of their replies.

The summaries, of course, are not complete. They represent, at best, a digest of the candidates' views, and, it is hoped, the core of their educational philosophy.

To make things interesting, and to counter the long-standing discrimination felt by those whose names start at the end of the alphabet, the summaries are being run in reverse alphabetical order.

In all those years we admire the many good aspects of American education, but on the other hand we became aware that some changes are badly needed in the present California system," he says.

Among Vandermedden's suggested curriculum changes is a proposal to curtail physical education classes from five a week to three. He would also ban the construction of sports stadiums for individual schools in the belief that they can more effectively be shared among different schools. He would put greater stress on vocational education. "I want to explore if serious vocational training can start at the age of 15. Lots of boys would be happy and it may even cut down on drug abuse."

FISCAL RUMORS BECOME REALITIES

CSLB reacts to Reagan's budget squeeze

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

The stringent nature of Gov. Reagan's budget proposals for higher education is beginning to strike home at California State College at Long Beach.

For more than a month, the state budget has been a prime discussion topic at the campus.

But last week, scare stories about the budget became realities as the first mandates to begin girding against a lean year filtered down to the campus — and talk turned to irate activity.

On Wednesday, the campus chapter of United Professors of California, representing approximately 230 faculty members, issued a toughly worded series of demands at a general faculty meeting.

"Having lost cost-of-living pay increases, sabbatical and research leaves, tenure rights, and fair and open grievance channels, the faculty is still limping along, trying to make do with half-measures that make the 'staffing formula' almost livable," the bulletin stated.

"Now, even those measures, enacted in self-defense, are being cut out," it read.

Chief among UPC demands of the Cal State-Long Beach administration was the call for consultation over budget-problem solutions with both faculty and students.

(President Stephen Horn's administration drew UPC's wrath after a series of guidelines were received by school deans showing the number of courses — and faculty positions — each school might lose.

(The UPC bulletin also noted the Council of the School of Letters and Science unanimously adopted a resolution urging all the school's department chairmen to support Dean Hiden Cox "in refusing to comply with the guidelines.")

Friday, the college's Academic (Faculty) Senate followed UPC's lead, adopting a softer resolution calling upon the college administration "to secure needed budgetary augmentations and needed flexibility in the use of funds allocated to the college."

But the vanguard in the fight for a bigger budget may have surfaced from among student ranks in the college's Education Department.

That department, in which prospective teachers study instruction techniques and take field study as teaching assistants in community schools, faces an across-the-board 10 per cent cut specified for all state colleges in the governor's budget proposal.

When the cutback guidelines reached that department last week, they touched off a rash of rumors:

— That 98 of 306 students scheduled to enter the elementary teachers' credentialing program next fall would be turned away;

— And that those 98 students would be selected from the group by a simple lottery, even though all 306 have spent four years in college preparing for the credentialing program.

The rumors spurred students in elementary education to begin circulating a petition calling for President Horn's office to explore "alternative measures."

According to an elementary education official at CSLB, the rumors are wrong only in that the controversial guidelines are speculative suggestions rather than orders to be acted upon.

"The guidelines are only data for the purposes of discussion," said Dr. Leland Perry, associate dean of professional services in the School of Education.

Perry explained the guidelines were drawn up by Dr. Leonard Towner, dean of academic planning, to assist school deans and department chairmen in deciding how to use their resources if the budget proposals are enacted without modification.

"There is no decision to cut elementary education to 200 students next fall," said Perry. But, he added, unless the Legislature votes to fatten the budget, such a decision is likely to be made.

Perry confirmed the lottery system was being considered by Education Department officials, but added: "What in the world do you do without just folding up the program? What way is fair?"

Besides holding the potential to cast adult elementary-education students, proposed fund cuts could destroy much more of the teaching program's effectiveness, Perry explained.

One of many complex side-effects of the Education Department cuts would include strict adherence by faculty members to a "workload formula" — which means no professor may teach more than 12 class units.

Generally, that would mean a professor teaching four three-unit courses was maintaining the mandatory workload.

But in the Educational Department, according to Perry, professors often serve more as tutors, advising student teachers as they progress through their field experience.

The State Department of Finance has designated such tutoring as "S-courses," Perry said — and also has dictated that they be eliminated from the education programs of the State Colleges.

Such tutoring is essential, Perry stressed. And, since S-courses carry one or more units of credit for professors, many times professors actually carry heavier workloads than the mandatory 12-unit load.

"Hell, we've been taking overloads in education for years," said Perry. "It's part of our life around here."

"So what can you tell the students?" he asked. "One girl came into my office last week worried that she wouldn't be allowed to student-teach next year."

She sat there and cried and cried and cried.

"You've really got to feel sorry for these people who've spent four years preparing for something, to find out that we can't afford to allow them to continue," said Perry.

"And all this only pertains to the students who want to become elementary school teachers," the official added. "Secondary education is even worse off."

popular sports figure Long Beach has ever known.

His parents moved to nearby Gilroy when Joe was eight months old and there Rodgers spent his early years until the death of his family. Then it was an orphanage in Watsonville where he received his early education. He picked prunes and saved money for when he would be on his own.

His next stop was Oakland, and then south to Huntington Beach where he soon worked his way up through the oil field into an executive sales position with the Republic Supply Co.

He bought small oil wells and became an independent producer while holding his other position.

Then it was western sales manager for Continental Enso, and then Youngstown Kitchens, retiring in 1965.

He went back to Republic and remained there until August of 1966 when he suffered the first of two strokes from which he never recovered.

Having played shortstop for many industrial teams, Joe joined the Huntington Beach Oilers in 1933 and the Oilers became the pacesetters of major league softball in Southern California. Later he moved to Long Beach and the Oilers became the Red Meairs, now managing the Nitehawks in the Rodgers tradition was a member of the old Hawks when they traveled to New Bedford, Ill., in 1955 to win their first title.

Clint Herron, Nitehawk coach today played third base and was named All-American 20 times.

In addition to the Virginia Country Club, Rodgers was a member of the Elks Club, the Long Beach Rotary Club and active in Boys club work.

He is survived by his wife, Mildred; a son, Joe Jr.; two daughters, Mildred and Penny, and eight grandchildren.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Dilday Long Beach Chapel, 242 Redondo Ave. Friends may call after 5 p.m. today.

Finally, came a tip. A search of a suburban neighborhood turned up the missing girl, working as a babysitter.

For two agonizing weeks, they didn't know.

They cringed at every news story about young girls being the victims of rape and murder.

They learned that it is happening all the time.

From innumerable families in the area, teen-age children have "dropped out" into a vagabond sub-strata of society. Many go the drug route, living in rags and squalor, wandering from place to place, subsisting on help from others in like circumstances and often on thievery.

Police get reports from families of so many cases they can't keep anything like an effective search going.

IN MANY cases, the families of the missing youngsters have no idea if they are living or dead.

So it was with the people in the case I'm relating.

Needed for these visiting Mexican youngsters are 70 family homes in the general area, including L.B.

Two children will spend one night in each home.

There's an opportunity in international warmth. It interested me to Martha Avilar, housing chairman, at 438-6842 or write to 5787 South St., Lakewood 90713.

He and his family live at 9343 Florence Ave.

LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY, MARCH 26, 1972

In the interests of justice

Grumbling about life's problems. Hamlet listed among them "the pangs of dispriz'd love, the law's delay, the insolence of office and the spurns that patient merit of the unworthy takes."

Now Assemblyman James A. Hayes of Long Beach and a committee of Los Angeles County Superior Court judges propose solutions to one of Hamlet's worries.

WE DON'T LIKE to seem glum about their prospects of ending "the law's delay," but we have just the faintest feeling that the problem is about as permanent as unrequited love, arrogant public officials and the spurning of merit in favor of mediocrity.

Even so, it is worth working on, and the judges and the assemblyman have some ideas that the legislature and the people of California ought to look at closely.

The assemblyman's are less far-reaching in some respects and more radical in other, but they strike us as practical and useful.

THE HAYES PROPOSAL would end the justice court and municipal court system and give all trial chores to the superior courts. The big advantage would come in criminal cases where motions based on the same law and the same facts are now argued in both a lower court and in the superior court. The Hayes plan would eliminate this repetition.

As an additional benefit, an $80 million annual saving is claimed for the plan by its author.

The Los Angeles Superior Court judges oppose that restructuring of the court system, but they have suggested a massive court reform plan of their own. Its most drastic proposal is the elimination of jury trials in civil cases, or at least in automobile accident cases.

That would save money and time in really huge chunks.

IT WOULD ELIMINATE the time in choosing a jury. It would cut the time spent in presenting evidence. It would eliminate or reduce the time spent in final arguments. It would eliminate the time the judge spends deciding on and delivering instructions on the law. It would cut the time needed to reach a decision, for the judge can reach a decision consulting his notes and his lawbooks while jurors must consult each other. And it would eliminate the need for new trials because jurors were unable to agree.

There is no doubt, then, that the judges have figured out a way to wipe out a fair amount of "the law's delay."

It can't be put into effect without changing the California Constitution, however, and we think Californians will want to hear thorough discussions of the subject before they make up their minds.

THE CIVIL TRIAL jury has been a part of the American system since colonial times, although waivers of jury trials have become more and more frequent. Jurors bring varying backgrounds to the court. Because they are not insulated from the rough and tumble of the world, they may be better able to judge a witness's truthfulness than some judges are. They may be less hardened to misery and therefore more generous—and properly so—to the victims of others' negligence. Finally, the law may be too important to be left to lawyers and judges.

Other recommendations by the Los Angeles judges are less controversial. Designed to speed the handling of divorce cases, criminal matters and juvenile proceedings, most are technical in nature. The only one that would require a constitutional amendment would reduce the number of jurors in all criminal trials except capital cases.

All should have speedy legislative consideration. The legislature and the citizens of this county and state can be grateful that these judges—in the first such effort anywhere in the nation—have proposed machinery for implementing Chief Justice Burger's ideal of a court system that is both swift and just.

traits with various styles of beards—reverse deflation to raise the hair and hawks of the conservative Orange County voter.

The GOP's chin doodling, plus a financially rich campaign, failed to defeat Cory. So Cory grew a beard. He wore it at a recent fund raising dinner at the Century Plaza. The Plaza represents a sort of commuter's Disneyland where hard-pressed Orange County Democratic politicians may find asylum for an evening.

There they may dance, dine and democratize several leagues away from the Wal-Mart Knott farm and end up without berries on their face.

THE ASPECT of a bearded Democrat winning anything in Orange County overwhelmed Cory's dinner colleagues. But Bob Moretti, speaker of the Assembly, figured out how the beard could sell in Orange: "He's simply dressing Old Testament style!"

Charles O'Brien, citizen and former state deputy attorney general, said it occurred to him the analogy should have been to Lazarus.

Moretti continued the game archly: "This wine, you know, was water earlier this evening!"

Short of the parable of the leaven, Moretti's speeches are the most hyperbolic rattling around today. He deals in "nths."

Given citizen cooperation, Moretti said, "I can promise you the best damn legislative body in this country."

On the premise that it takes boldness and confidence and enthusiasm and belief in the team to accomplish great ends, Moretti's prophecies may come true.

How sad, sadder, saddest that nobody will be around to be surprised.

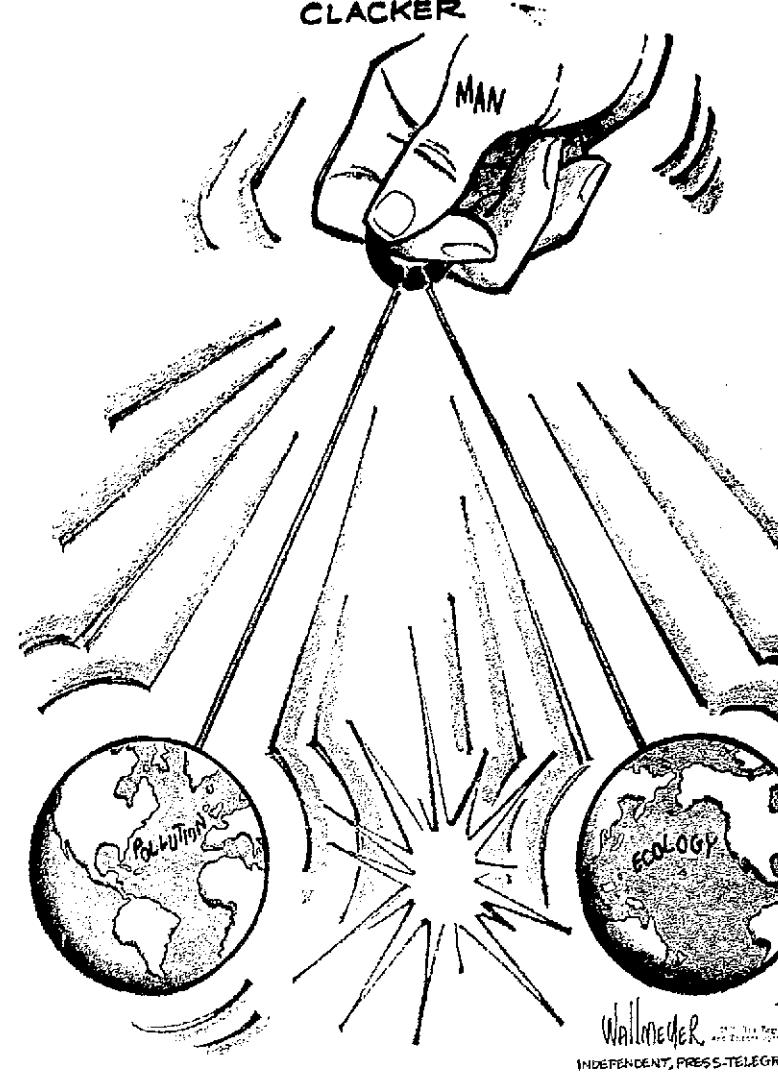

FOR MANY YEARS, withholding was offered as a partial solution to both problems. The cash problem would be met, in part, because the income taxes would be flowing into the treasury in a regular stream instead of the occasional spurt.

FOR SOME YEARS, California has been heading for a fiscal crisis. The crisis was of two parts.

First, there was not enough money coming in in relation to the money being spent.

Second, although governmental expenditures were fairly regular, the money which was coming in came in in spurts, when taxes were collected, which left the treasury embarrassingly bare at times. This is called the cash flow problem.

Politicians don't always like to do that.

For instance, if a person's house is on fire, a person would normally be inclined to turn the water hose on the flames in an effort to put them out.

The politician who fancies himself prudent might, however, first wish to contemplate the impact on the water supply. During such contemplation, of course, the house continues burning.

Don't say "you CAN'T be." I AM!

Mau-mauing the pros

There is a hilarious account, in "Radical Chic and Mau-Mauing the Flak Catchers," by Tom Wolfe (Farar, Straus & Giroux), of the black game of "mau-mauing," more commonly known as confrontation.

In recent years Negroes made two important discoveries about whites.

S. I. HAYAKAWA
President, San Francisco State College

First they discovered white liberal guilt, and how easily it can be exploited to Negro advantage.

Secondly, as Wolfe writes, "Black people began to realize for the first time that the white man . . . had a deep dark Tarzan mumbo jumbo voodoo fear of the black man's masculinity. This was a revelation. For 200 years . . . mothers had been raising their sons to be meek, to be mild, to check their manhood at the front door in all things that had to do with white people, for fear of incurring the wrath of the Man. The Man was the white man. He was the only man. And now, when you got him up close and growled, this all-powerful superior animal turned out to be terrified. You could read it in his face."

HENCE THE mau-mau tactics. Hence the practice of descending on white officials in delegations of 25 or more, scaring the wits out of them: "If you were outrageous enough, if you could shake up the bureaucrats so bad their eyes froze into iceballs . . . they knew you were the real goods. They knew you were the right studs to give the poverty grants and community organizing jobs to."

The blacks got their instructions from their own self-taught masters at the game. Wolfe quotes one of them: "Now don't forget. When you go downtown, y'all wear ghetto rags . . . see . . . Don't go down there with your Italian silk jerseys on and your brown suede and green alligator shoes and your Harry Belafonte shirts . . . You wear combat fatigues . . . and your shades . . . You go down with your hair stickin' out and attin' up! Looking wild!"

Thus one "militant" organization after another got dramatic news and television coverage. Black "leaders" were created overnight, funds were found by poverty officials and foundations for programs — community organization, manpower training, job counseling, whatnot.

NO MATTER THAT little that was supposed to get done by these programs ever got done. To the mau-mau player the important thing was to get hired on a program so that as "counselor" or "coordinator" or "consultant" he could continue to hang around the streets, but with lofty status as well as a good salary.

Meanwhile authentic and responsible Negro organizations with decades of experience in education, job training, neighborhood service and the like are left out in the cold, waiting in vain for supplementary funds — or even 30 seconds of attention on TV news.

But they don't get it. They don't really represent the ghetto blacks, say the TV people, taking the mau-mau's word for it. White bureaucrats say likewise. Such is the unconscious racial condescension of many white liberals. If a black man dresses soberly and talks reasonably, he cannot really be representative of his people!

Tom Wolfe's essay, based on San Francisco experience, throws much light on the strike at our college in the winter of 1968-69. So does another book, "Blow It Up! The Black Student Revolt at San Francisco State College and the Emergence of Dr. Dikran Karagutianian" by Dikran Karagutianian (Gambit, Inc.).

"Blow It Up!" provides ample evidence that the strike at San Francisco State, far from being a demand for educational reform, for Black Studies, for more generous admission policies towards black students (all of which had been granted by my predecessors), was in actuality a clear case of mau-mauing for everything

L. A. C. SAYS

Kind of country they return to

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

The following is a letter just received from one of our soldiers stationed in West Germany for the past three years. The concern expressed is — I believe — typical of the great majority of our servicemen spread around the world. My reply to him follows his letter.

WHETHER OR NOT you find this letter important enough to publish is up to you. My folks and I moved to Long Beach about 1960, so I do feel that California is my home. I am now serving in the Army in Germany. I came here in 1968.

Until coming here I was unaware of a lot of things that seemed to be going on at home. The burning of some Los Angeles sector not too long ago kind of got me thinking first what kind of a place I was coming home to. I want to come home to live my life and help others if I can. I don't want to find a battleground of stupid people trying to kill each other. I think it's about time Americans took the time out to see what is really going on around them and not turn their heads because it hurts to see the truth. I am supposed to be serving to protect my country. How in the world can I have peace of mind with my job here when my own country is falling apart inside itself? I wonder just what it will take for the American public to realize if they keep going the way they are that someday the hammer and sickle will be flying on all the flagpoles.

Ask people to stop and think once, get out of the everyday rut they put themselves in and give a little of their time, effort and love, where and when it is needed. I want to come home to home, not a wasteland of hate, and prejudice, or people who feel sorry for themselves because they didn't make an extra buck. It is going to have to come about some day or there will be no more America.

FORGIVE ME if this letter hurts anyone or offends you, but somehow people are going to have to wake up sooner or later to survive. I am 20 years old, white and a little ashamed of my country. Thank you. Frank J. Webb.

My dear Frank: I am very glad to print your letter because I am convinced it not only expresses the concern of all but a few overseas servicemen but also the concern of the great majority of young and older people here at home. I personally am greatly concerned and feel the same way. But — Frank — I am old enough to be your grandfather and have lived through many crisis periods in our country. Each such period seems worse than anything we have experienced before. But our society

Caboose hooks onto western romance

The railroads built America, but in the beginning they were seen as a threat to the nation.

In the year of his inauguration the seventh president of the United States received in January of 1829 the following letter (a copy of which was sent to this column some months ago through the courtesy of Marshall Craig) from the man who would succeed him in the White House eight years later:

PRESIDENT ANDREW JACKSON
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. President:

The canal system of this country is being threatened by a new form of transportation known as railroads. The federal government must preserve the canals for the following reasons:

1. If canal boats are supplanted by railroads, serious unemployment will result. Captains, cooks, drivers, passengers, repair men, and lock tenders will be left without means of livelihood, not to mention the numerous farmers now employed in growing hay for the horses.

2. Boat builders would suffer, and towline, whip and harness makers would be left destitute.

3. Canal boats are absolutely essential to the defense of the United States. In event of the expected trouble with England, the Erie Canal would be the only means by which we could ever move the supplies so vital to waging modern war.

For the above mentioned reasons the government should create an Interstate Commerce Commission to protect the American people from the evils of railroads, and to preserve the canals for posterity. As you may know, Mr. President, railroad carriages are pulled at the enormous speed of 15 miles per hour by engines, which in addition to endangering the life and limb of passengers, roar and snort their way through the country side, setting fire to the crops, scaring the livestock, and frightening women and children. The Almighty certainly never intended that people should travel at such breakneck speed.

Respectfully yours,
MARTIN VAN BUREN
Governor of New York

AS AMERICA followed its western star into the frontier the roar and snort of the engines became music to the ears of the emigrants settling the towns along the right-of-ways. From the eastern seaboard to the West Coast the majesty of plains and mountains was matched by a symphony of railroad names that conjured the haunting whistles of freights laboring up the grades of the Continental Divide and the thundering rush of express trains.

Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe; Baltimore & Ohio; Chesapeake and Ohio; Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific; Rock Island; Lackawanna; Denver and Rio Grande Western; Lehigh Valley; Louisville and Nashville; Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie; Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis; New York Central; Nickel Plate; Norfolk and Western; Northern Pacific; Union Pacific; Southern Pacific; Texas and Pacific; Western Pacific; Seaboard, Florida East Coast; Wabash . . .

AND NOW THE MAGIC is fading fast. The new government-sponsored National Passenger Railroad Corp. has announced it will operate only about half as many trains as the private rail companies are now running. The national routes will combine the tracks of the various railroads and the identity of the grand names will be lost in a title that surely must have been invented by a computer.

Railpax.

Will Lake Pend Oreille look the same from a Railpax car as it did from Great Northern's Pullman called Kootenai? Surely the poet of locomotion, Thomas Wolfe, will come back to haunt you. Railpax. His ghost will come riding in, right on time, in a dome car of the Empire Builder.

Railpax was drawn up by white collar men with adding machines instead of by surveyors in boots and bandanas, so the Railpaxers couldn't possibly understand the thrill of a freckled lad in American Falls, Idaho, watching the Portland Rose pull in. Or dining forty miles from Omaha on the Hiawatha — ham, yams and pineapple pie with a wedge of pimento cheese, all for a dollar. Or watching Clark Gable board the Chief.

There were luxuries. Baltimore & Ohio's Capital Limited had a barber, valet and maid aboard. But what Railpax is forgetting is that passenger trains didn't carry all of the passengers. Charley, for instance.

MY FRIEND CHARLEY was a cowhand and one summer he rode in the caboose of a Union Pacific cattle train all the way from western Nebraska to the stockyards in Chicago. The stockmen rode free so they could make sure the cattle were watered at the stops.

On the way home Charley stopped off to see me. I will never confuse Charley with John Wayne. Have you ever shared a bed with a man whose principal roommates have been heifers and steers for ten days?

While he was at our house Charley received a package from Sears Roebuck and Co., which turned out to be a suit he had ordered by mail. Since he wore a tux he had ordered one pantleg two inches longer than the other. Charley put on the suit and said "Damn!" The people at Sears Roebuck had become confused. One of Charley's pantlegs was four inches shorter than the other.

THE CABOOSE WAS, however, part of the romantic legend of the West. The Virginian, of Owen Wister's novel of the same name, rode one from Omaha to Wyoming, where he and a pretty school marm and a villian named Trampas figured in the classic model of the western novel. And when Trampas called him an S.O.B. the Virginian growled: "When you say that — smile!" The Virginian wouldn't let anybody but a true friend call him an S.O.B. Later he and Trampas had a shootout that would have done credit to Gary Cooper.

Is Railpax making an allowance for hoboes? It may surprise the statisticians to learn that a boxcar leaving Minneapolis empty may unload a dozen 'bos three miles east of Sioux City. How do you put that in a computer?

SENATOR SOAPER SAYS

COEDUCATIONAL dormitories are being suggested so the boy and girl students can exchange ideas. We can imagine one of the coeds opening the dialogue with, "What's the big idea?"

IT'S ALWAYS a moving moment when some superstar or sport quits the game and his number is retired. A friend leaves an office where he has worked 40 years and they are retiring his coffee cup.

YOUNGER PEOPLE today are undoubtedly puzzled as to how the poets of yore were able to sit close enough to a flowing stream to be inspired without gagging.

A BRITISH psychiatrist says that the steady, home-keeping husband is the type most likely to desert the family. Just another little item to put on the kitchen bulletin board.

APPEAL FOR PW HELP

Frishman to address clubs

By CHARLES HINCH
Staff Writer

Six Long Beach civic clubs will hold their first interclub meeting at noon Friday, in the International Ballroom of the Lafayette Hotel.

Lt. Robert F. Frishman, a Long Beach navy pilot and president of Concern for Prisoners of War, Inc., will be the speaker. Lt. Frishman was a prisoner of the North Vietnamese for 683 days in 1967-69.

His organization is based in San Diego and has branch offices in Tustin and Los Angeles. All who serve are volunteers who work without pay.

Clubs to attend include Downtown Lions; Long Beach Rotary; Downtown Kiwanis; Downtown Optimists; the Exchange and Soroptimist.

Vito N. Romans, organizer of the meeting, said the event would become an annual one and that a different club each year can serve as host.

The last major effort of Lt. Frishman's organization was the collection and transportation of petitions and letters expressing American concern about the welfare of Vietnamese PWs. The documents bore 26 million signatures.

At present, Frishman said in a letter to James P. Zarites, president of the Downtown Lions Club, "funds are desperately needed."

"Frankly speaking, we do not have enough people available to go throughout each state to show others how they can help."

"We are now organizing a nationwide newspaper which will disseminate in-

Luncheon will honor 14-year CSLB counselor

Mrs. Viola A. Spicer, retiring after 14 years as a placement counselor at California State College, Long Beach, will be honored at a luncheon Friday at the Golden Sails Restaurant, college officials have announced.

Mrs. Spicer will retire Saturday according to H. Edward Babbush, director of career planning and placement at the college. Since 1957, she has counseled graduating seniors planning to enter business, industry or government work.

Persons interested in attending the luncheon, scheduled from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., are requested to contact Mary Toma in the office of career planning and placement, Babbush said.

The new queen, 21, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin E. Jordan, 424 E. 52nd St., Long Beach. She has been an accounting technician for the past four years.

Queen Karen's princesses are Perci Hall and Mary Lou Malabicky.

Chicanos cry 'fraud' in CSLB student election

Charges of "fraudulent" polling procedures have cast the election for next year's student officers at California State College, Long Beach, into confusion.

A recount of votes is scheduled today, he said.

Shainline indicated he counseled MECHA leaders to contest the election through college channels in talks Saturday morning.

MECHA spokesmen said vote-counting, which ended early Saturday, disclosed marked differences in voting trends between ballots removed from official boxes and those cast later which remained in the locked boxes until 6 p.m. Friday, when counting began.

The election results being contested would bring into office Jan Shrontz as associated students vice president and Rich Robinzon as treasurer.

In the race for student body president, a runoff election would be called for Chris Christofferson, top vote-getter, and Hector Carreon, according to Shainline, because no candidate received a clear majority.

Carreon ran for office with MECHA support, along with vice presidential candidate Alexander Reveles and several students seeking senate seals.

Profiles of L.B. school board candidates from Z to B

SMITH

Walter E. Smith is a business executive (Philco-Ford Corp.) who collects rare books — primarily 19th century English prose fiction — reads extensively and occasionally writes poetry. A magna cum laude graduate of California State College at Long Beach and the father of three children attending Kettering Elementary School, he and his wife Fran have lived in Long Beach since 1955.

At 40, Smith is still a student. "I have taken various courses and seminars at local colleges and universities every year since I began college in 1954," he says. If elected to the board, he would "inject improved concepts into our administration wherever possible and strive to develop a uniform and cohesive administration that is dedicated to the goals of education and the ideals of democracy." Toward that end, he believes a board member "should do everything within his authority to reduce costs through better planning, organization, monitoring and controlling the educational system."

SMITH BELIEVES the opinions and recommendations of teachers should be weighted seriously in the establishment of curricula and the making of important policy decisions in the district. He also feels the board should listen to other groups associated with or concerned with education in the community. He doesn't believe teachers' salaries should necessarily be higher, "but I think sal-helped and cannot be expected to pursue their studies until they are rehabilitated."

POLLCHIK

Howard J. Pollchik, 6109 Peabody St., is married, has two children and is working toward a Ph.D. in economics at UCLA. He's a budget analyst with McDonnell Douglas Corp. and teaches a course at Long Beach City College. Pollchik doesn't think the taxpayer is getting his money's worth from the present board. The board, he feels, isn't giving the district administration the guidance it needs to spend school money in the most efficient manner. He says the board and the administration could have avoided the recent tax override by more effectively utilizing the district's teaching staff, thus saving huge sums of money.

He

also thinks the board and the administration could have made wiser cuts in the budget before the override. "I wouldn't have cut back on classes, increased their size and reduced the number of subjects offered," he says. Having said this, Pollchik adds that the school board is doing a good job otherwise, and that Long Beach has "good quality schools."

HE WONDERS whether we should insist that every youngster complete four years of high school. Perhaps we should make "functional literacy" the test of graduation, he declares. "Is it necessary to send a youngster to high school for four years? You give him three years of English, two of social studies, three or four years of physical education and then you try to find something to occupy him?" As a result, many students turn off education. "These are the kids who drop out, who cause trouble, or who just sit and stay," he says.

ing fundamentals. He likes the ungraded classroom, in which a youngster can move up to the next level of education once he's mastered certain skills. "The child can take as long as he requires this way. You can't force kids to learn. They must do it themselves," Pollchik is critical of the way the recent override campaign was run. He says the district was guilty of using school time and equipment and of subtly coercing some teachers into campaigning for the override.

PAUL

Marie Paul has 25 years of experience in the field of teaching, 20 of them in Long Beach. Retired from the profession, she is now a housewife and author. She has two children, both products of the Long Beach school system. Among her honors is a medal from the Freedoms Forge.

She's running for a school board seat because she wants "to help decide how funds are spent so that the board buys materials and services taxpayers consider worth buying, that teachers want to use, that parents hope to see in use and students need. It is important," she declares, "to get the best value for the dollar spent and cut out frills." In this connection, she recommends abolition of what she calls "self-enhancing education and similar-type attempts to engineer the development of social attitudes."

Mrs. Paul questions whether funds have been

PICK THE TOP STARS & FILM of '70

What was your favorite picture of the year? Which actor/actress gave the best performance? Here's a chance for you to make your opinions known . . . and count too! The Movieland Wax Museum, Buena Park, along with the Independent, Press-Telegram and more than 30 other newspapers across the country is sponsoring the first annual Stars-Hall-of-Fame National Poll. This is the first time on a national scale that you, the theatre goer, will be able to voice publicly your opinions for best actor, actress, and film of the year.

All you do is fill out the ballot below and mail it to us. The deadline for getting your entry in is midnight, March 31. The national poll winners will be announced April 7 — a week before Academy Award Hollywood "Oscar" awards are revealed. Favorites selected by the voters in this poll will be cast in wax and the effigies enshrined in a new section of the Movieland Wax Museum.

The individual who best tells why he selected his favorite movie as the best in 1970 (in 25 words or less) will be the honored guest at the first annual Stars Hall of Fame Awards Dinner, to be held in the film capital and win a week's vacation for two in either Mexico or Honolulu!

So send in your ballot today . . . make your opinions known . . . and you may end up enjoying some of the good life . . . like a star!

Speed Reading class will also begin Monday with a free demonstration to be offered at the Y at 7:30 p.m. March 29.

Information on classes can be obtained from the Los Cerritos YMCA office.

Science fair at Aloha high

The second annual science fair at the Aloha School in Lakewood has been scheduled for April 27 according to Principal Helen Brandley.

Purpose of the fair is to encourage pupils to exhibit science projects which they have made themselves and which demonstrate their interest and skills in science.

Each project entered will be judged for creative ability, scientific thought, thoroughness, clarity and dramatic value. The displays will be open for public viewing in the school cafeteria, 11737 E. 214 St., starting at 7 p.m.

Barbed wire buffs to show 300 rare links

Barbed wire which helped win the west will be shown April 3 at Costa Mesa, when the California Barbed Wire Collectors' Association holds its spring meeting.

The event, always an open-to-the-public show, will be at South Coast Plaza, according to Ellwyn M. Carlson of Porterville, corresponding secretary of the association.

He said that more than 300 weaves of wire will be shown at the Costa Mesa exhibit. From 1867, when the U.S. began patenting barbed wire, 447 varieties were developed.

Much of the wire is rare: a link may bring up to $100 for an 18-inch length, the "standard" size favored by collectors.

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

Fairbanks tycoon, successful actor

NEW YORK — "My stepmother allowed me to give a party in Pickfair, the first one in a long time," Douglas Fairbanks said.

He spoke, of course, of Mary Pickford, now 77, who seldom leaves her upstairs room but occasionally invites somebody up.

"Pearl Bailey was the only one asked up," Doug Jr. said as he lit a cigarette and extended a well-shod foot in his hotel suite in the East 60s. There was a red flower in his lapel. His hair had just the right amount of gray at the temples. He was lean-hipped and tall and yet never congeited nor bratty, as we asked him what he had decided to do with his life now that he's a tycoon but again a successful actor.

"This 'COMMERCE,'" he said — a word seldom heard any more from business — "is more reliable but not as gratifying to the spirit . . ."

"Somebody said I am a walking conglomerate and a Renaissance man. It sounds very romantic but what they mean is I have a lot of fingers in a lot of different pies."

"Now" — he had brought a drink for us and was sipping — "I decided to get out of acting when old friends I knew came to me and asked for a day's work as an extra. There but for the grace of God go I!"

"You see, I am not that dedicated."

LARRY OLIVIER and Vivian Leigh were once quite broke. Suddenly they got an offer of a big movie that would solve ALL their problems.

"At the same time they had an offer to do Shakespeare at Stratford — no star billing — top pay 60 pounds a week. They felt it their duty to take it instead of the movie. I could never do it myself though I admire it in others. No, I'm not that dedicated."

And so he's in real estate, fountain pens and lighters, banking, a hotel in India, "mining in Canada," chain stores; he's a consultant and many times a director, with offices on Fifth Ave. and in London — and when he agreed to do "My Fair Lady" and "The Pleasure of His Company" on the road, they had to give him an office as well as a dressing room.

Now that he'd returned to acting, would he stay? "I'm not even sure I've returned. Do you understand a concert pianist? He plays for the sheer pleasure of playing, of hearing even if there's nobody listening . . . I would like to have done these shows even if they were flops."

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR. walked down to Fifth Av. He was going to have a steam bath at the Knickerbocker Club. He and his family had had a second home in London for four generations. He would be going back to Kensington to a home well known to the British Royal Family.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: It must be wonderful to be J. Paul Getty, sighs Bob Orben — to read that good times are coming back, and never know they left.

WISH I'D SAID THAT:

Henny Youngman discussed the higher cab fares: "People used to take taxis—now taxis are taking people."

R E M E M B E R E D QUOTE: Fanny Hurst said it long before Women's Lib: "A woman has to be twice as good as a man to go half as far."

EARL'S PEARLS: Jack McCarthy of WPI says he asked his barber, "do you have anything for gray hair?" and the barber answered, "Only the greatest respect."

Taffy Tuttle's date boasted that he owned a Utrillo, a Monet and a Picasso. "That's showing off," Taffy protested. "Why would anybody want three foreign cars?" That's Earl, brother.

Capsule views of 14 L.B. school board candidates cent Save Our Schools campaign for a tax override. Born and raised in Long Beach and a product of its schools, he is married and has two daughters in the public school system.

He admits he doesn't have all the answers to the problems in education. His philosophy is an evolving one, he indicates, although it carries the conviction that "sound business practices must be followed" in the running of a modern school system. It would be easy, says Gray, to put forth pet projects for improving education, "but since we are dealing with taxpayer funds, I feel it mandatory to study such changes before implementation." Frankly, he adds, "I feel I would have to serve on the board for a reasonable length of time before I would feel competent to suggest changes in the education program."

GRAY FEELS the Board of Education should tap all sources of information and opinion in its search for answers — the community at large, parents, teachers and students. He also advocates expanded vocational education in the system, and suggests that flexibility is the key to good teaching.

Does he believe students and minority groups are adequately represented on the board? It's important to remember, he replies, that the board is elected to represent the total community, "not just ethnic or pressure groups. Let's not forget that what we should be achieving is the best education for everyone: minorities, students, teachers, parents . . ." Moreover, he points to the various special and compensatory education programs that have helped the culturally deprived student in the system.

GOTTLIEB

Arthur Gottlieb, 41, an attorney and father of four, has lived here since 1946. He's a board member of the Youth Action Corps and the Free Clinic, serves on the ad hoc committee on draft counseling in the high schools and is a former chairman of the Long Beach chapter of the ACLU. He's also affiliated with Friends of the Library, Museum Associates, the Long Beach Bar Association and the United Nations Association. Gottlieb says he looks forward "to the time when the Board of Education is not a part of the 'establishment' as that word has been used in its most disparaging context by so many people who feel they are (no) longer represented by elected officials." He would also like to see a time when a 5-0 vote on the board is "the result of independent thought, not merely a rubber stamp inked by (the) school administrator; when teachers can take pride in independent thought . . . when our board helps students to understand the anguish and terror of our time, and encourages them in their desire for dialogue (and) for participation in decisions affecting them . . ."

Gottlieb would give teachers a collective voice in decision-making. He also feels their pay should be commensurate with other important service professions. The board can serve students, he declares, by tuning into their views "on relevant curriculum, on enrichment courses, on student rights, on the drug scene, and on their feelings about communication difficulties with administration." As for student rights, "students don't need more rights; they need to be secured in the rights they already have." Gottlieb denounces the policy of expelling students for drug abuse. "Combating drug abuse takes more ingenuity than tossing a child out of school," he says. The solution may indeed be more schooling, not less. "We're dealing with someone's child, not Pavlov's dog."

The attorney says Long Beach has a sizable Chicano community that is rightfully proud of its heritage and has "a need if not a right" to bilingual education. Moreover, the black ghetto dialect should also be regarded as a second language that requires some form of accommodation in the schools. Gottlieb doesn't think more and more money is necessarily the answer to the school's problems. "The need is not for more spending, but for more support for innovation in the classroom." Nor is he enamored of letter grading. In certain types of courses, he'd prefer to see pass-fail; in others no grade at all, merely credit. He would, however, make grades optional for those who want them.

What changes would he like to see in the system's education program? In the short run, "restoration of the full eight-class day . . . reinstatement of many more electives . . . reduced class size, expanded City College programs for high school student participation and for adults seeking vocational skills." In the long run, "a 12-month school year, day and night use of facilities for school updating, updating of all text materials to reflect current world conditions, bilingual texts."

CRAWFORD

James M. Crawford's father was a former Long Beach public school principal. Crawford himself is a dentist who has been active in civic affairs for a number of years. An incumbent in the election, he won a seat on the board in 1963 and has served continuously since then. Eight years on the panel, in fact, have given him an invaluable experience, he says, and good reason to serve again.

Crawford is married and has three children, and has been a resident of the city since 1925. Like his fellow incumbent, Jerald Jacobs, he doesn't feel the school district is perfect in every detail. What is? But he does feel it has chalked up an enviable record. "The present board," he declares, "has an excellent scoring average and has worked diligently to develop a superior program for our children at the lowest cost possible."

He emphatically disagrees with those who label the board a rubber stamp for the school district administration. "We . . . make our own policy decisions," he says, adding that the trustees only look to the administrative staff for factual data on which to base those decisions. He says is an absence of communication between the board and the community at large. "The board simply sits in its majesty in silence, protected by procedure, unchallenged, unmuffled. Certainly the remedy is available: Meet and speak with the public at varied areas in the city during hours convenient to working people, and in an atmosphere of openness and trust."

Gottlieb would give teachers a collective voice in decision-making. He also feels their pay should be commensurate with other important service professions. The board can serve students, he de-teaches courses on community organization and on the Chicano in the Penal System at California State College at Long Beach, where he's an assistant professor in the Chicano studies department.

Vazquez, 21, is a student at the college and head of the Chicano student organization on campus called MECHA — Movimiento el Estudiantil Chicano de Aztlán. He's also a member of the board of directors of the city's antipoverty agency, the Commission on Economic Opportunities.

ARMANDO VAZQUEZ

Casares, 30, is married and the father of five children, all of them going to Long Beach public schools. He sits on the advisory board of the East Long Beach Neighborhood Center and is also a member of the board of directors of the antipoverty agency. He is also executive director of Congreso de la Raza Unida in Long Beach.

THE THREE of them would like to see education lifted out of its traditional mold and made into a broad-gauged community affair. What is education after all? asks Lopez. "Do you get it only in the classroom? No. You pick it up at home, at work and in the street, too." He and his fellow candidates would like to see all elements of the Long Beach community involved in education. They'd utilize senior citizens as teaching aides and tutors; they'd throw open the school system to heads of households who want to further their educations, at the same time making sure that the system provides child care services for those who need them. They'd also have consumer education taught extensively in the system. They'd make neighborhood centers extensions of the schools, and they'd give drug education an important place in the curriculum.

The three men say they'd like to see the cultural backgrounds and contributions of ethnic groups treated seriously in the school curriculum. For years, they declare, the Mexicano child has been bent out of shape by an irrelevant education because the schools have ignored or suppressed at least half the child's cul-

The educator thinks the school district is over-staffed administratively, and doesn't believe the tax override was necessary. Nor does he have complete faith in the current board, which, in his words, "is receptive to administrators but not to the community or teachers. I think the incumbent candidates are pawns of the administration," he asserts. He says a good board would make it more accessible to the public and teachers. And "this is not true of current board members," he adds.

He believes common sense should govern the district's policy toward drug offenders. "If a child is caught once experimenting with marijuana, it would be folly to interrupt his education," he declares. "If, on the other hand, drugs have become a habit or addiction, the public schools are not the place to handle the problem," he says.

CHICANOS

Jose Lopez, Armando Vazquez and Jose Casares are running as a slate, and their positions are essentially a composite of their separate views. Lopez, 30, they say, By Mexicano, they mean someone of Mexican ancestry. "We don't look at our people as separate from the people in Mexico," explains Vazquez, but as a part of the Mexican people that has been suppressed. The Chicano movement, in their view, represents a renaissance of Mexican pride and culture in this country.

THE MONOLINGUAL school system in the United States, they say, has destroyed the Mexicano child's identity. "In school," explains Vazquez, "we're told George Washington is our forefather, while at home we're told Benito Juarez and Emiliano Zapata. In school, in fact, Juarez and Zapata are bandits."

"In school, we're John at home, Juan," Gradually, he says, the system has torn the Mexican's child away from his ancestral culture.

Yet there's nothing wrong with being bilingual and bicultural, says Vazquez. A second language should be an asset, not a social embarrassment. If the schools are beginning to recognize this, they're doing much too little about it, the three of them say. Moreover, they point out, a bilingual approach to the education of Mexicano children is little more than a form of academic dietitism if the youngsters aren't also given a full and sympathetic appreciation of their Mexican background and culture.

Lopez, incidentally, is firmly opposed to the letter-grading system, which he feels is destructive of many students. It's not only affecting Chicano students adversely, he says, but others, as well. "I would prefer the 10-point system, in which students are graded for attendance, effort, work, etc. Under the 10-point system, the youngster is running against himself, not others. You defeat many slow starters, for example, by comparing them to others," he says.

BOWMAN

Frank Bowman, 41, has lived in Long Beach since 1957 and has a long record of community involvement. Director of housing at California State College at Long Beach, he has served with the YMCA, the Exchange Club, the Community Chest and the Mayor's Committee on Community Improvement. Married and the father of two daughters, Bowman has been a strong and imaginative advocate of improved and expanded vocational education in the schools.

"Just to say we have 6,000 students enrolled in vocational education is no proof of the quality of the courses they're taking," he says. "The proof of the pudding is in how many of these young people can find employment outside of high school. One of the

RALPH GRIERSON

Premiere of Ives' symphony

BY DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

Charles Ives' Fourth Symphony, on a bill with two Bach concertos, is receiving its Southland premiere this weekend, courtesy of the Los Angeles Philharmonic and guest conductor Lawrence Foster.

As heard at the second presentation, Friday night, this Ives-Bach program drew a sizable and a typical Philharmonic audience to the Pavilion at The Music Center. Though the orchestra's playing in the first half was blemished, the premiered work on the second half made the evening worthwhile.

Lawrence Foster is, as always, a persuasive lysonian. With the help of the Philharmonic's associate conductor, Gerhard Samuel, who took charge of those inner workings requiring an extra leader, Foster held in fluent control the Fourth's expansive apparatus, and the piece made its points.

Ives' Fourth is, for the uninitiated, a stunning event. Its grating textures, multiple juxtapositions, dissonant atmosphere, and bald quotations assault the listener most ungentlely. Underneath the iconoclasm, however, one finds, with repeated exposures, that individuality and purposefulness that have earned this most original and most American of composers his following. This is music of strength and compulsion, as well as of wit and irony. It demands a permanent place in the repertory.

AMONG ALL the assisting forces, one ought to mention pianists John Ritter, Shibley Boyes, and Leonard Stein, organist Owen Brady, and some 22 singers sent over from the Master Chorale. Every one seemed to be right on top of his task.

On the program's first half, harpsichordists Malcolm Hamilton and Ralph Grierson, neatly accompanied by Foster and a reduced orchestra, offered Bach's C Major Concerto for two harpsichords.

These keyboardists make a strangely unbalanced duo, for Hamilton's direct, elegant, and stylish playing is but weakly matched by Grierson's bland seconding. But the rude surprise of this performance was that the sound of both harpsichords was unkindly swallowed up in the open spaces of the Pavilion. I shouldn't blame the soloists, nor certainly not Foster and the mini-Philharmonic here assisting; I should blame the program planner, whoever he was, who thought a hall this size could really flatter these fragile instruments.

By way of overtone, Foster led a careful and projected reading of the First Brandenburg Concerto. Sorry to say, it was a reading consistently flawed by erratic, grating, and unfocused intonation. If this is the best cooperation the Philharmonic's winds and strings are willing to give each other, they had better leave Bach to the L.A. Chamber Orchestra.

Princess Anne thrown off horse

ALDERSHOT, England (UPI) — Princess Anne was thrown from a horse Saturday when it shied at a gate in the Cookham Jumping Trials, officials said.

The princess, 20, remounted and finished the round but was disqualified on faults.

JOHN DIXON, Sports Editor

Staff Writer

HOUSTON — Time marches on, as John Wooden demonstrated Saturday.

So does UCLA basketball, as Wooden proved for the fifth consecutive year and the seventh in the last eight.

Right in front of God, a tournament record crowd of 31,675, a national television audience of 25 million and the NCAA rules committee, the UCLA coach showcased one of his pet peeves.

The man who has said repeatedly that the stall is "bad for basketball" employed one in the NCAA championship game at the Astrodome.

Amidst catcalls and debris thrown from spectators and taunts from Villanova players, the Bruins maintained their poise and dispatched the Wildcats, 68-62, to reign again as kings of college basketball.

Wooden, long an advocate of a 30-second clock, readily admitted that "I had that in mind" when he sent the Bruins into a slowdown against Villanova's zone defense 15 minutes after the game started.

"College basketball is ready to go to a clock," said Wooden. "It has been for years. I was hoping they (Villanova) would never come out of the zone defense."

"The rules committee meets after this tournament and I hope the members will give the 30-second clock more thought."

He grinned and muttered: "They won't, though."

UCLA attempted only 49 shots, but made 27, including 8 of 12 in the second half as the Bruins won their

29 points for Patterson

Hero's kin share 'thrill'

HOUSTON — They stood there as a family on the elevated floor of the Astrodome Saturday as UCLA players and fans celebrated their fifth consecutive national collegiate basketball championship.

Father Bob, 65; mother Jean, tall for a woman; son Tim, 6-9½ high school junior, and son Steve, 6-9 and star of the Bruins' 68-62 win over Villanova in the NCAA final.

The Pattersons of Santa Maria were obviously moved by what had transpired — Steve's 29 points in the final game of his college career and another title for the Bruins.

"Oh, gosh, it has to be my greatest thrill," said the elder Patterson. "To come this far to see him play and then to have him come through like that in his final game."

He paused, wiping perspiration from his forehead. "It was just unbelievable."

It was for Steve, too. He had often drawn the wrath of coach John Wooden during his three varsity years for over-sleeping and getting to practice just before or just after starting time.

"I was forcing my shots more than last year."

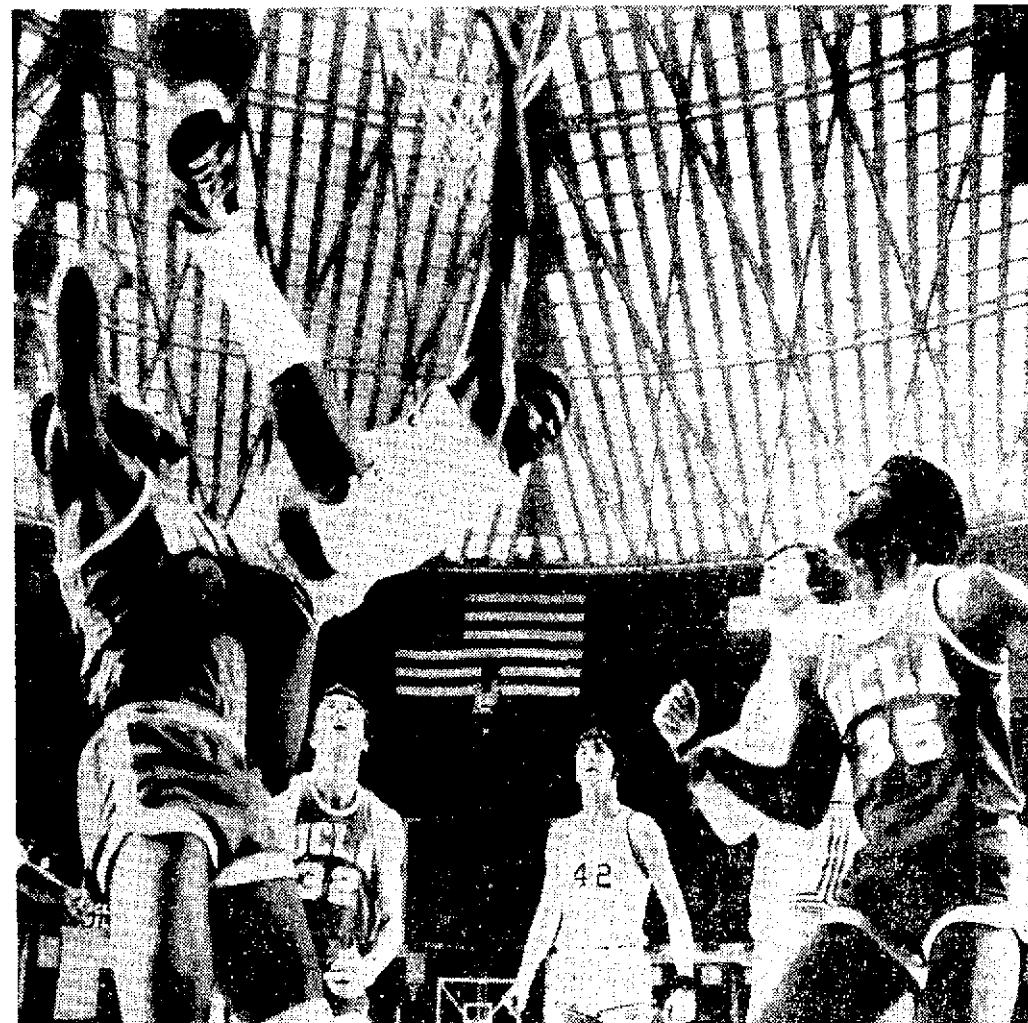

Sidney Wicks and Curtis Rowe had nets cut down from the baskets draped around their necks.

Wicks had injured a toe in Thursday's game and had played, according to Wooden, "with great courage."

"It was a team effort," said Wicks. "The object was to get the ball inside for good percentage shots.

Lefty solves last Angel questions

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS — It's official.

Angel manager Lefty Phillips has his opening-night lineup devised and he can tell you without hesitation the names of the 25 players who will set sail into the 1971 campaign.

The manager was holding court in the press room of the Gene Autry Hotel Saturday night and there were only one or two burning questions to be resolved. So Phillips resolved them.

Most pressing was whether to carry 10 pitchers and three catchers. After a brief consultation with general manager Dick Walsh, Phillips said he would open on the 11-2 scale.

"Besides," Phillips added proudly, "Dick promised me a catcher upon request."

The decision by Phillips prolonged the major league career of Gene Brabender who was sitting perilously on the brink of the minors.

"He hasn't shown me too much this spring," Phillips said, "so I was more than willing to send him down."

Speedway, noon: Figure-eight stocks, Ascot Park, 6:30 p.m.

Sportsmen's Show — Pan Pacific Auditorium, noon to 8 p.m.

Soccer — Long Beach Soccer Club vs. Fullerton, Heartwell Park, 12:30 and 2:30 p.m.

Track — Kansas at UCLA, 1:15 p.m.

Bicycle Racing — Elsinore Velodrome, all day.

Distance Running — 10-mile run, Corona del Mar High School, Newport Beach, 9 a.m.

Auto Racing — Questor Grand Prix, Ontario Motor

These are the 25 Angels who will be natty attired in the club's new uniforms come the night of April 6 and the opening game against Bob Lemon's Kansas City Royals.

Pitchers (11): Clyde Wright, Andy Messersmith, Tom Murphy, Jim Maloney, Rudy May, Mel Queen, Eddie Fisher, Dave LaRoche, Billy Wayne, Lloyd Allen and Brabender.

Catchers (2): Jerry Moses and Jeff Torborg.

Infielders (6): Jim Spencer, Sandy Alomar, Jim Fregosi, Ken McMullen, Syd O'Brien and Chico Ruiz.

Outfielders (6): Alex Johnson, Ken Berry, Tony Conigliaro, Tony Gonzalez, Roger Repoz and Billy Cowan.

Alomar, 2b; O'Brien, 3b; Johnson, LF; Conigliaro, RF; Fregosi, SS; Spencer, IB; Moses, C; Berry, CF; Wright, P.

The mild surprise is O'Brien at third base.

ahead of the established veteran McMullen.

Phillips' decision was not nurtured in haste. McMullen has been complaining of a mild backache in recent days and although X-rays taken Friday proved negative, the manager feels more secure in this state with O'Brien in the lineup.

O'Brien has been the rage of the Angel camp this spring with his steady hitting and his improved fielding posture. He has played at third, short and second and has not been found wanting in any position although, as Phillips reminded, he does not fluster you — he merely does the job.

Wright was given the opening-night pitching assignment for only one reason, but there was no question about its validity.

He won 22 games for

Rosie upsets Billie Jean

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rosemary Casals of San Francisco rallied in the second set to upset top-seeded Billie Jean King of Long Beach, 6-4, 6-4, in the final of the $15,000 Virginia Slims invitational tennis championships Saturday night.

Miss Casals, who had lost six previous final matches to Mrs. King in tournaments on the Virginia Slims tour this year, was down 1-3 in the second set before she ran off four consecutive games. The 23-year-old Californian then held in the 10th game for the victory.

It was only the third defeat for Mrs. King in 29 matches this year. She has won seven of 10 tournaments on the circuit.

In a consolation match, Ann Haydon Jones of England beat Francoise Durr of France, 6-2, 6-4, for third place.

Miss Casals' victory gave her first prize of $5,000, running her 1971 earnings to $22,700 on the tour. Mrs. King got $3,000 to boost her total to $27,750.

Strahler was 13-5 at Spokane and 11 with the Dodgers last year.

"Staff-wise, he ranks among the top five pitchers in the organization," according to Campanis.

Sheep shocks Drumtop

San Luis Rey 'Cap

Lightly regarded Try Sheep closed with a burst of speed in the stretch Saturday to score a head victory in the 20th running of the $20,000 San Luis Rey Handicap on the turf course at Santa Anita as the even-money favorite, Drumtop, finished fourth.

Jockey Fernando Alvarez booted Try Sheep to his $110,40 victory payoff as he ran down Tampa Trouble in the final sixteenth of a mile. Italy's Eaequo was four lengths back in third position while Drumtop was next in the field of 10.

The race was a thriller from start to finish. The winning time of 2:25 for the 1½ miles on the turf was just two seconds off the course and American record set in the same race last year by Fiddle Isle.

In addition to his rich payoff for first, Try Sheep returned $36.40 to place and $16.40 to show.

Tampa Trouble returned $8.20 and $6.20 while Bacucco paid $8.50.

The 5-year-old Drumtop, weighted at 121 and piloted by Laffit Pincay Jr., had won three of her last four races, ranging from Canada to New York, Florida and then here. She put up a game effort against her male rivals. She was in contention all the way but couldn't make it in the final strides through the stretch.

Hill Run, 122, was the second betting choice behind Drumtop but was never a serious threat.

The race started on the hillside portion of the course and Try Sheep bat-

VERO BEACH, Fla. — The Dodgers will announce which 25 players they'll open the season with Monday, the day before heading West for games in Albuquerque and Phoenix against the Giants.

The club has announced a press conference for Monday morning and at that time will reveal which players will leave Dodger town Tuesday morning.

RICH ROBERTSAuto racing's hot heir

"I come from a very well-to-do family . . . but I wince when I see it in print. If I wasn't making money out of racing, I'd have to be doing something else." —Peter Revson.

You've seen the auto racing flick where the good guy is run off the track by the brash upstart, looks him up in the pits for a quick shot in the chops and then they wind up becoming palsies wally partners on that great straightaway of life.

The European sophisticates involved in today's Question Grand Prix might scoff at that stereotyped rowdy image of American race drivers, but it occasionally does happen that way.

Even Peter Revson admits he was a little surprised at himself, though, when he put the slug on Sam Posey during a Trans-Am race at Riverside last year.

"He hit me at the start —bumped me good—trying to bore a hole through the pack. Then on the fourth lap he tried to go inside of me on turn two and there was no room at all. He put me off and put himself off."

Revson is uncomfortable recalling what happened next, when he found Posey in the pits.

"Well, it was just a quick shot sort of thing . . . amounted to very little. I was pretty hot, kind of unusual for me, but still . . ."

The incident seemed out of character for Revson, so to put affairs back into focus he teamed up with Posey to share a ride at Daytona a month later.

PETER REVSON
Competence all that counts

AFTER ALL, such rowdyism could hardly be tolerated by the blueblood of American auto racing, the well-renowned "heir to the Revlon cosmetics fortune," a renown which happens to be untrue.

"I'm not the heir to the Revlon fortune," Peter is quick to point out. "My Uncle Charles is chairman of the board and majority stockholder. My dad Martin was involved with him until 1958 when they split up in business —rather an unfriendly split, at that."

Nevertheless, Revson, now part-owner of a new car dealership in Harbor City, concedes that his father "got out with a certain amount of stock," forcing his son to make the worst of his less-than-humble beginnings.

Peter admits to attending Cornell and Columbia, but adds, "I never did get a degree. I got the auto racing bug when I was 20."

He admits that "I didn't start on dirt tracks," but his family didn't help his racing career, either.

"I actually did it surreptitiously," he says. "I didn't use another name or anything, but I was absent for periods of time when no one knew where I was. My first car cost twenty-two hundred bucks, and I had to scrounge to keep it going."

Also, he would rather win at Indianapolis than anywhere.

"That would be number one," he says with a hunger that money can't satisfy.

HIS ROUGH 'N READY rivals have never made a point about Peter's background.

"It doesn't seem to be relevant to them, he says. "We all worry about each other's competence, that's all. They were concerned of me as a rookie at the speedway, as they would be of any rookie, whether I was competent enough to drive with them, wheel to wheel, on a confined course."

Revson convincingly dismissed the doubts. In his '69 debut at Indy, he started 33rd (last) in the field and was running fifth at the finish.

In the Cal 500 at Ontario last September he was running on the pace when he and leader Al Unser pitted on the same lap. Unser left the pits but conked out on the first turn, Revson started to leave the pits—and his engine died. It took his McLaren crew nine minutes to replace a broken coil.

"Actually," he muses, "I was in first place for about a minute, sitting there. I'd lapped the winner (Jim McEneaney) three times."

Peter figures that, at 32, "my best races are still ahead of me. That's about the peak for most drivers."

He has a distaste for stock car racing, but did the European Grand Prix circuit in 1964 when he first turned pro.

Before that it was country back roads in an old Austin-Healey and an abandoned airstrip in Hawaii where he drove his very first race.

"I was going to school for awhile at the University of Hawaii and there was a sports car club that used to meet once a month on the old Kahuku airstrip on the back side of Oahu.

"We used to go out there and tape up our headlights, pull off the mufflers and just race. It was pretty disorganized but a lot of fun."

TODAY HE'S UP a bit in class. As one of 10 American drivers, he'll be tooling a new Formula A machine owned by, of all people, John Surtees—one of 20 Europeans in the lighter but lower-powered Formula Ones.

Revson will be right at home among the world's best race drivers, simultaneously seeking anonymity for his heritage and recognition for his ability.

"I've learned to live with it," he sighs. "I don't especially like it and I wince when I see it in print, but you press on regardless."

28th consecutive NCAA tournament game.

At the juncture Wooden returned "Beat the Clock" to national television, Steve Patterson had made 15 of his career high 29 points and the Bruins were leading by seven, 39-32.

I didn't believe there was any way Villanova could beat us with a man-to-man defense," explained Wooden. "I was afraid, too, that we might hit a cold spot and miss three or four shots in a row against the zone."

The "cold spot" didn't develop until later. UCLA boosted its lead to 43-32 before the Wildcats sliced it to 45-37 by halftime.

In the second half, however, the Bruins seemed to lose momentum after going ahead by 49-37. The Wildcats didn't get their first point of the second half until 4:59 had elapsed, then started a run at the Bruins that finally drew them within four points, 58-54, with 4:53 remaining.

"Sometimes slowing it down can backfire," admitted Wooden. "I think it did take away our momentum. But I believe we showed good poise."

Chris Ford pounded a fist into this other hand and fumed.

"I never thought UCLA would do such a thing," he said. "I always had a lot of respect for that team. I don't anymore."

Hank Siemontowski said mistakes in the first five minutes, when the Bruin press was chewing up the Wildcats, "hurt us badly."

"I was surprised UCLA slowed it down," he added. "I think maybe it was good strategy, but it surprised me that Coach Wooden would do that in a game on national television."

Porter was bitter. "Big, bad UCLA — slowing it down," he scoffed.

Wicks, held to nine points by the tenacious guarding of Porter and a sore big toe, was more complimentary about Porter.

"He plays like Elvin Hayes," said Sir Sidney.

Villanova coach Jack Kraft didn't seem disturbed by the slowdown.

"We slowed down to bring them out of the zone," he said. "Yeah, we may have lost a little of our momentum, but as long as we win it's all right. We'll take 'em by one point or whatever."

Rowe gave credit for the Bruins' long reign at the top to Wooden.

"He's the best coach on any level of basketball," said Rowe. "He tells us what to do and we execute it. If you want to beat us, you have to play our game."

The Bruins didn't lose their poise, said Henry Bibby, "because we've been in so many close games."

"You get used to it," he said. "We had the lead, they (Villanova) had to catch us."

Although the Bruins lost five of their top six players, Bibby warned the nation about the future.

"I think we'll be back at the NCAA tourney next year," he said. "We play to win at UCLA."

PORTER RECIPIENT OF NCAAW AWARD

HOUSTON — Howard Porter, 6-foot-3 Villanova forward, was chosen the most outstanding player Saturday of the NCAA basketball championships.

Porter and Jim McDaniels of Western Kentucky, the third-place winner, each collected 106 points in the all-star team balloting by sportswriters and sportscasters.

Joining them on the all-tournament team were Hank Siemontowski of Villanova with 91 votes, Steve Patterson of UCLA with 80 and Sidney Wicks of UCLA with 74.

Smith, with NIT most valuable player Bill Chamberlain at his side in the dressing room, was basking out at comments that the 34th tournament was made up of runners-up.

"When you consider how many teams there are across the country, and how many games between them are decided by a point or two . . . then you see how even many of the Villanova, if Providence had won they might have been there and Villanova might have been here."

Villanova lost by six points to UCLA for the NCAA title in Houston Saturday.

"But then, recalling that the Tar Heels were eliminated in the first round a year ago," Smith added, "we're gratified to be back feet. Bibby's free throw made it safer for the Bruins with 1:13 left and Patterson was awarded a basket on a goal-tending call with 38 seconds remaining that took Villanova out of contention.

The Bruins waited until there were only three seconds left before flashing the No. 1 sign and demonstrating their happiness.

Villanova players were outraged over Wooden's slowdown.

At one point in the second half, the Wildcats' Clarence Smith shouted at UCLA's Curtis Rowe: "If you're national champions, play ball."

Rowe appeared unperturbed.

In the dressing room later, Smith amplified on his feelings.

"I didn't expect that of UCLA," he said with obvious anger. "It was a left-handed compliment with a righthanded slap in the face."

"I wish the game could have gone another 10 minutes and I could have hit someone. Then they'd remember us 40 years from now. As it is, they'll just remember us as losers."

Chris Ford pounded a fist into this other hand and fumed.

"I never thought UCLA would do such a thing," he said. "I always had a lot of respect for that team. I don't anymore."

Hank Siemontowski said mistakes in the first five minutes, when the Bruin press was chewing up the Wildcats, "hurt us badly."

"I was surprised UCLA slowed it down," he added. "I think maybe it was good strategy, but it surprised me that Coach Wooden would do that in a game on national television."

Porter was bitter. "Big, bad UCLA — slowing it down," he scoffed.

Wicks, held to nine points by the tenacious guarding of Porter and a sore big toe, was more complimentary about Porter.

"He plays like Elvin Hayes," said Sir Sidney.

Villanova coach Jack Kraft didn't seem disturbed by the slowdown.

"We slowed down to bring them out of the zone," he said. "Yeah, we may have lost a little of our momentum, but as long as we win it's all right. We'll take 'em by one point or whatever."

Rowe gave credit for the Bruins' long reign at the top to Wooden.

"He's the best coach on any level of basketball," said Rowe. "He tells us what to do and we execute it. If you want to beat us, you have to play our game."

Kraft added that the Wildcats went to a man-to-man defense with 15 minutes remaining in the game "because we couldn't catch them with what we were doing."

"I actually think the slowdown helped us get back into the ballgame," he said.

The Villanova coach said both teams were "under-tuned" at the future.

"UCLA plays that great defense and that's what wins," he said. "I don't think we got a fast break all day, which cuts down on our potential. Give UCI-A credit for taking our tempo away."

As Wooden put it, "We can accomplish a lot if no one gets the credit."

European cars quickerAmericans 'don't stand chance' at Ontario today

By ALLEN WOLFE

ONTARIO —

$28,900 Questor Grand Prix today at Ontario Motor Speedway has been called an "international conflict" between the sophisticated European Formula 1 cars and the brute power of American Formula A machines.

Kraft added that the Wildcats went to a man-to-man defense with 15 minutes remaining in the game "because we couldn't catch them with what we were doing."

"It was a surprising thing to do," he said. "but coach Wooden has that right. We were playing for big stakes, you know. It was

'Oh, to be young again!'

Two of the great baseball players of all time were sitting across from each other last month in Phoenix chatting for the last time before they started the 1971 season. Hank Aaron had just been presented a birthday cake after completing his round in the American Airlines Astrojet golf tournament. He was 37.

Willie Mays of the Giants, who was leading the tournament at that point, was kidding him: "Oh, to be young again like you and the other kids."

Willie will be 40 on May 6.

These two living legends have done everything that should be expected of them. They have produced far more than had been anticipated when they were first brought up to the majors in the early 1950s.

They've led their teams to a total of six pennants and three world championships and, individually, they've rewritten the record books many times over. Mays has been named to the All-Star team 17 times, Aaron 16.

The past season they became only the ninth and 10th men in history to reach the 3,000-hit plateau.

The only major individual accomplishment left for both of them is the biggest record of all — the one-time impossible dream, Babe Ruth's career home run mark of 714.

ROGER MARIS PROVED IN 1961 that Ruth's records were vulnerable when he hit 61 home runs. However, this figure in the books is accompanied by an asterisk since Ruth's record was established in a 154-game schedule.

Maries had only 58 homers after 154 games. He hit No. 59 in his 155th game, his 60th in the 159th and the 61st in the 163rd. The teams played a 162-game schedule, but one tie game had to be replayed.

Maries' performance always has been regarded as a fluke since he didn't come close to that kind of output before or after.

Steadiely closing in on Ruth's other coveted mark of 714 career home runs have been Mays and Aaron, currently No. 2 and 3 on the all-time list of home run hitters with 628 and 592.

Preparing himself for his 19th full season in the majors, Mays needs 87 more homers to break the Bambino's mark. Aaron, who should be only the third man to hit 600 after the first month or so of the forthcoming campaign, needs 123.

"How do you feel about getting the record?" we asked Mays.

Breaking out in his famous high, shrill laugh, Willie said, "Here I'm trying to make it through one more year and you're trying to get me to stay for the record."

Turning serious, he explained that "if I quit right now, I'd have enough honors to last me a couple of lifetimes. I'm not going to keep playing just for that record. If I get to the point where I need only about 10 home runs, I might try. But I think I'd hurt myself and the team if I stayed too long. I don't want to be a hanger-on for any record."

"DON'T LET HIM KID YOU, he wants that record as much as I do," Aaron broke in. "If he gets close to it, he'll stick around."

Willie smiled, then pointed to Aaron. "He's gonna pass me," he said. "He'll get between 25 and 30 home runs in each of the next four years and that will put him right there. But they gotta pitch to him!"

Hank nodded, "Yeah, they gotta do that, all right. Getting 714 or maybe even the big one, 715, depends a lot on what kind of years Orlando Cepeda, Rico Carty and the others hitting before and after me have. If they're going good, they'll have to pitch to me. If they're going bad, they can pitch around me. That happened in 1968 when Rico was out with tuberculosis and Joe Torre was hurt. The pitchers worked around me and I was kind of lucky getting as many as 29."

With Carty and Cepeda going good last year, Aaron hit 38.

Mays feels that any chance he might have had to pass the record was lost when he was in the Army in 1952 and '53.

"I was young and strong at the time, and I should have hit maybe 50 and 60 more homers in those two years. That would have put me within 30 or 40 of Ruth and I'd feel pretty confident about setting a new record."

Ruth was 40 when he wound up his career with the old Boston Braves in 1935. He hit just six home runs in a little over a month before hanging 'em up for good after 22 seasons. But he went out with a flourish — smashing three homers in his final game.

AARON ADMITS, "THE HOME RUN RECORD intrigues me. I began to think about it seriously when I got off to my fastest start ever last season, hitting 14 in my first 30 games. It was then I really believed for the first time that I might have a chance at the mark.

"Like Willie says, though, I won't hang around just for the sake of a record — picking up 12 homers one year, maybe eight in another while going from one club to another. I have too much respect for the game of baseball to do that just to chase someone's record.

"But if I stay healthy, I think I've got a pretty good chance." Aaron concedes. "However, when you get older, it takes a lot longer to bounce back from injuries."

"I think I have an advantage playing in Atlanta. It's a good park to hit in and, with the warm weather, I think I'll be less likely to get muscle pulls and things like that which become more common the older you get."

"If I had to play in San Francisco, I'd be in big trouble. I know that has hurt Willie. That wind blowing in from left field keeps a lot of balls in the park . . . and it's so cold you can't get loose."

"The way I feel now, I can go another three or four years playing regularly, barring injuries, of course, and maybe another one or two with a lot of rest. If I haven't got the record then, I may never get it."

Dixon, Odell coach South in 605 all-star football

Wilson High football coach Owen Dixon and Clayton Odell of Bellflower will direct the South team July 9 in the Kiwanis 605 All-Star game at Cerritos College.

Dixon has been the Bruins' head coach since 1964 and has a 46-19-3 record in that span including three firsts, two seconds and two thirds.

Dixon and Odell will be attempting to bring the South its first victory in the series, which will include players from Long Beach high schools for the first time.

Marty McWhinney of El Rancho and Dick Larson of Cantwell had previously been announced as the North coaches.

With Carty and Cepeda going good last year, Aaron hit 38.

'It's great,' she says

Gal behind the coach

By GARY ELLIS

"I probably get more excited sitting in the stands than Len does on the field. I know I get more excited. I watch Len almost as much as I do the game." —Beverly Stewart, wife of Jordan High football coach.

A coach gains fame and glory if he wins. A coach gets booed and maybe the axe if he losses. Yet, regardless of the situation, the coach is in the news.

Some coaches will admit that it is the players that make them successful. Rarely do coaches acknowledge a major factor in their life — their wives.

One can almost picture the image of the poor wife, twisting her dirrag or chewing on her fingernails, while her husband suffers another defeat or scores a stunning victory.

"I think it's great being the wife of a coach. I knew Len (Len Stewart, Jordan football and gymnastics coach) was going to be a coach before we got married," said his wife Beverly.

"I'm always anxious to work with him. I was his scorekeeper in gymnastics and scored for him in baseball. It's like the family saying:

"The family that prays together stays together." We all enjoy sports and we all stay together."

The Stewarts also have a son, Stephen — "he likes to be called Steve" — attending Wilson High, where his father was a standout football guard in the '40s.

"People tease me because my son goes to Wilson and Len coaches at Jordan. I missed several games and one was when Jordan beat Poly. The Wilson people thought I was at Jordan watching the game and the Jordan people thought I was watching my son play at Wilson."

"I've been behind Len all of these years so I thought it was time to cheer for my son. When he graduates I'll switch back to Len. Steve's very proud of his father. He wants his dad to win everything, except when they play Wilson."

You can always tell when two or more coaches get together at a party. Before the night ends the coaches are in the corner diagramming plays.

"When I married Len he was an officer in the Marine Corps. In order to survive in discussions I had to learn two subjects — sports and the Marine Corps.

"I know everything that goes on with him," Beverly continued. "Len keeps me interested. It takes a lot of time to coach but I want him to do a good job and that takes time."

The life of a coach can be very hectic. "My sports interrupt my chores. My doctor only has appointments on Tuesdays and Fridays and that's when Steve plays baseball. I probably won't see the doctor until the summer."

How does a loss affect the family and husband?

"Nobody I know takes out a loss on us. It's always been like that. Len works equally hard in both sports and he takes a loss hard, but he has to come back. He'll just say, 'Well, next week's another game.' He can't afford to take a loss that hard because it will affect next week's performance."

"He's dedicated to the students. He worries more about how the kids will react."

Beverly, whose favorite sport is baseball, even helps the coach. "I like to keep up with his performers — you know, how well so-and-so does his type of thing. I used to dance and once in a while Len will ask me for an ending in a free-exercise routine. I've even given him some things that he puts into a routine."

One thing for sure — Beverly and Len have a steady "routine."

Pitch-hit-throw contest opens

Applications for major league baseball's annual pitch, hit and throw competition for boys ages 9-12 will open Thursday.

Forms may be obtained at Phillips 66 stations.

Boys competing in their respective age groups will advance through local and regional tournaments to the national finals at the All-Star Game in Detroit July 13.

Olivares aiming to regain bantam crown

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

Both principals were waxing eloquent six days before their rubber match Friday night at the Forum where Chucho Castillo defends his world bantam-weight title against fellow Mexican countryman Ruben Olivares, the 23-year-old ex-champ.

Wohlford opens; plenty of trout

Lake Wohlford opened Friday to a "packed house," if I may borrow an expression from the theater, and within minutes after the 6 a.m. start, fishermen were taking trout and bass from boats and from shore.

Shore fishermen were doing almost as well on trout as the boat anglers, but that is the story of Wohlford, which has an excellent shoreline. In fact, the planted trout are acting in such a manner that anglers can eat breakfast at Lake Wohlford Resort, walk down to the rocky shoreline a few hundred feet away, cast Mepps (or similar) spinners far out and usually get a strike, often near shore.

Wohlford, especially in the spring, is one of my favorite lakes. It is natural bass and crappie hatchery. But Earl Losch, who owns the resort, and Jim Burns, general superintendent of the Escondido Mutual Water District, are stocking the lake with beautiful rainbow trout each week.

When I say that Wohlford is my favorite lake, it's because I fished it when my late son was just a small boy. We camped there, caught all the fish we needed. I even caught a crappie that hit the scales at more than four pounds. Don Lee and I—and the crappie—had our picture on the wall of the old store for many years.

CHARLES KUEBLER WAS OPERATING the lake in those days and it was a natural for crappie and bass. Claude Kreider and Ed Elliott, two of the greatest fly fishermen I ever knew and now perhaps angling in the Great Beyond, could catch—and release—crappie and bass by the dozens.

Charlie's daughter, Ava, was married to Earl Losch, who did his bit in the Sea Bees through World War II. When Earl came home, he had all the drive of old General Patton, and he bulldozed out scores of trailer and camper sites, a big campground and even leveled off a hill for an airport.

There was nothing that the swashbuckling Earl wouldn't try, and his tiny wife ran the store. In fact, she ran Earl when he got out of line.

Then millions of people came to California to live, travel and seek recreation. They, too, found Wohlford. Numerous elderly persons bought trailers and mobile homes, leased sites at Wohlford and lived there the year round.

Today, Wohlford may not afford the wonderful fishing that it once did—and what California lake does?—but it has the same quaint beauty it always had. It now represents well over a million dollars and has been up for sale so that Earl and Ava might retire and travel, but that kind of money isn't around everywhere. My guess is that Earl and Ava, living in a beautiful home atop the Wohlford hills, will remain a part of the country for many years to come.

SAM CRAIG OF FOUNTAIN VALLEY and I tried Wohlford just before the opening at a small press party. We caught limits of trout ranging up to one pound in short order, five bass (not big but hefty keepers) and spent the rest of the time looking over Wohlford.

The lake will be open seven days a week, with fishing permits going for $2 for adults and $1 for children under 12. Trailer spaces are available by the day or week at nominal charge, and there is a shady camp ground with spaces available at $2 per night per car. Boat and motor rentals are quite reasonable.

Cabins are available and some are equipped for cooking. There is a fish-cleaning building, well screened to keep out flies. Inasmuch as most wives don't go with their husbands nowadays to clean and cook their catches, the store has an excellent restaurant, even a bar for beer, wine and harder drinks.

Wohlford is six miles northeast of Escondido in San Diego County. Naturally fishing licenses are needed. Best way to get there is via the San Diego Freeway to Freeway 78, which runs into Freeway 355 at Escondido, then along a two-lane highway to the Wohlford turnout.

Henshaw Lake is only 25 miles away, Palomar Mountain, open to observatory visitors at certain hours, is nearby and there are many other attractions in the area.

THIS STOCKING OF TROUT in privately operated lakes has been the salvation for many resort owners, who probably would be on the relief rolls if they hadn't got into the hatchery-reared rainbow act. Operators of Irvine, Anaheim, Cuyamaca, Miramar Lakes and others have been using private hatcheries. Even trout plants at Cachuma Lake, north of Santa Barbara, are on a matching basis, with the Department of Fish and Game planting one week, Santa Barbara County the next.

This alternating planting of trout will become more widespread as time goes on. The Fish and Game Commission has approved the stocking of state-reared game fish in six reservoirs, where angler access fees are at variance with the $1 per car or 25 cents per person standard.

In its recent action the FGC allowed private operators larger variances in its fees and yet receive DFG fish. Most of the lakes were in Northern and Central California, but Casitas is one in the southern part of the state.

Lake operators who match the state's stocking program (Cachuma is one) will be permitted higher access fees, but the fishing access revenue must be reinvested in the lake.

When San Vicente Lake (San Diego County) reopens in the fall—it alternates with El Capitan—you probably will see trout plants there for the first time in history.

Olivares said he'd finish me within six rounds.

"Last time" was Oct. 16 when Ruben lost the championship in the 14th round on a cut eye. Six months earlier Olivares took a 15-round decision over Castillo to retain his bantam crown. Both matches also were held at the Forum.

A trip to Japan and a purse of $100,000 awaits Friday night's winner, although powerful punching Olivares—who at one point in his career rattled off 29 consecutive knockout wins, second best in ring history—has his sights zeroed in on the featherweight crown of Japan's Kunlaki Shibata.

Tokyo promoters wired the $100,000 offer, largest ever in the Orient, to Friday night's survivor to defend the bantam tiara against Masao Ohba, current world flyweight champion.

Olivares, a carefree caballero, audaciously advised promoter George Parnassus to line up Shiba. The Spanish-speaking Greek advised Ruben to concentrate on Castillo first.

Feathers, flies, bantams, whatever, Castillo nonetheless is a slim 10-9 choice to hand Olivares only his second loss of a 62-bout career.

'Newspapers buried me'

Frazier returns from his 'grave'

Combined News Services

Looking hale and unmarked and brandishing a guitar, heavyweight boxing champion Joe Frazier was released from St. Luke's Hospital in Philadelphia Saturday, fully recovered from a bout with fatigue and high blood pressure.

Asked how he felt, Frazier replied, "I'm living, that's the important thing. The newspapers killed me. That's who buried me."

There were rumors that Frazier was seriously injured and even dying as a result of his March title fight with Muhammad Ali.

U.S. NATIONAL coach Murray Williamson will not talk with the Swiss press until they retract newspaper stories saying the U.S. hockey team "has gone on the ice drunk."

"I will not speak to the Swiss press or other newspapermen other than my friends in the press until this has been rectified," said Williamson. "Our dressing room is like a hospital ward. To see our team doctor administer novocaine to the injured players is something you all should see, and I think you would admire our club."

OUTGOING president of the National Assn. of Basketball Coaches Adolf Rupp of Kentucky expressed concern and shock about the recent signing of sophomore collegian John Neumann of Mississippi.

"It would be very unfortunate if the actions of the American Basketball Assn. destroys the fruitful training opportunities for professional athletes," said Rupp, who was succeeded by Bill Wall of MacMurray.

DR. DAVID Ryde, a London specialist in sports medicine, says top athletes often dream of imaginary illnesses as a result of nervous strain.

One international runner imagined he had inherited his mother's arthritis. For months he complained of pain.

NINO Beauvau has pinned his future in boxing on only two alternatives.

If he wins his return

AQUEDUCT'S tallest and prettiest jockey, 5-foot-7 Robyn Smith, scoffs at critics who say girl riders don't have the John Engleke continued to pitch scoreless baseball and his St. Anthony teammates put together a hit batter and a single in the third inning to hand Bishop Amat its first loss of the season, 1-0, Saturday at Wardlow Park.

The Saints took over a share of the Angelus League lead with the Lancers. Both have 3-1 records.

Engleke has now buried

20 innings of no-run ball, allowing only two earned runs in 39 innings.

St. Anthony was shocked by sophomore pitcher Tony Bonura before Ed Lamoreaux, a fleet second

sophomore. He stole second base and scored on a single by Bob Hill for the game's only run.

Eastern Fleet scores rich win

Calumet offers Derby threat

Associated Press

wagered a Gulf Stream Park record of $2.7 million.

Eddie Maple took Eastern Fleet to the lead immediately after the break and the son of Fleet Nasrullah-Amoret was on top the entire 1 1/16 mile going the distance in 1:42 2-5.

The victory earned $82,600 for Calumet Farm. The Kentucky stable also won the Florida Derby with Gen. Duke in 1957, 'Tim Tam' in 1958 and Forward Pass in 1960.

Never Bow took the lead in the stretch and scored a half length win over Knight In Armor in the $61,000 Louisiana Derby at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

Overlooked by many of the 18,736 fans, Northfields returned $26.40, $12.20 and $7.10. List paid $6 and $5.60 and Will Hayes paid $9.60.

Generous Portion and Aladancer matched strides over the final half of the stretch to finish in a dead-heat in the 21st running of the $80,000-added California Oaks at Golden Gate Fields. Aladancer returned $5.80 while Generous Portion paid $3.00.

Northfields rushed to the front early and withstood a pair of stretch charges to post a half-length triumph in the $61,000 Louisiana Derby at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

As the horses moved past the stands for the first time, Mayheda held a length lead but Try Sheep and Tampa Trouble closed on him as they went around the first turn.

There the Italian Bacoco moved up to join the leaders while Drumtop stayed on the outside for clear racing room.

Going down the back-stretch, Tampa Trouble held a narrow lead but Alvarez kept Try Sheep in striking distance among the bunched contenders.

Turning into the stretch, Tampa Trouble appeared the winner but the roan-colored Try Sheep moved up on the outside and, in a prolonged drive, got to the front by a head at the wire.

The win was a rich one for Try Sheep, which earned $48,250.

Sweepstakes to Double Cream

DONCASTER, England (AP)—Double Cream, a 30-1 outsider, won the Lincoln Handicap with a late burst of speed Saturday and made 13 Irish Sweepstakes ticket holders richer by $120,000.

Jockey Eddie Hide, who switched to Double Cream from another horse only a week ago, urged his mount to victory by a length over Tandy, the 15-2 co-favorite.

HOLLINGWORTH—

the Pacific Ave. obstetrician, who is more enthused about the links heroics of his son, Terence, 13, than his own.

"Terence almost beats me," bragged pop. "He shoots in the low 80s and has won tournaments at Recreation Park and in his age group in the Fullerton Open. He's a 10-handicapper."

At that rate he'll be ready soon for a game with Mons. Ernest J. Gualderon, the 4-handicapper from St. Anthony High who keeps an eye peeled for parochial prospects at schools such as St. Bartholomew's, which Terence attends.

AMERICAN FOOTBALL is well liked by Dr. Carney, although it bothers him.

"The thing that troubles me," sighed Padraig, "is the many injuries caused because the poor fellow with the ball is tackled when unprotected. There is more injuries in American football than in Irish football. Irish football is rough, too, but if you're fast and speedy you can avoid injuries. It's better to be quick in Ireland than big."

If he gets wind of that statement, John Wooden, an outspoken exponent of quickness, may extend his recruiting to Ireland.

Most memorable experiences for Carney were the two times he was flown back to Ireland for big games after he had migrated to the U.S. in 1954.

"Although they do that sort of thing more now, it was quite unusual in the '50s," remarked the physician who was given the nickname "the Flying Doctor" by another ex-teammate, Sean Flanagan, now Ireland's minister of land.

"I was also quite thrilled when I was 17 and played in both the minor and major leagues in the same year. The minor leagues were for the younger players while the major leagues naturally were the tops. I just happened to luckily be eligible for both."

BORN IN SWINFORD, County Mayo, Carney, 43, gained his medical degree at University College Dublin, then interned in Dublin and again at St. Mary's Hospital in Long Beach when he first came to America. He spent a few years in residency in Detroit, then returned to Long Beach in 1959.

He and his wife, the former Moira McCabe, also a doctor who studied medicine with Padraig, are proud parents of an athletic family.

"Brian, 15, is 13½ stone and six feet, and a football tackle at St. Anthony's," beamed the doctor. "Terence not only is a fine golfer but is a good baseball pitcher. Cormac, 11, is a rough diamond in basketball and football. He is a chip off the old block—a fast running back. Sheila, 8, is a cheer girl for both St. Bartholomew's and St. Anthony's teams."

Padraig is a bit of a wine connoisseur or, in his terminology, "a wine lover," since coming to this country to the extent that he has a small vineyard of his own in Napa Valley and has a cellar which boasts many vintage wines. The fact probably makes the Irish whiskey fans writhe in agony.

"THE FLYING DOCTOR" has doubts that soccer ever will be accepted in the United States. "American football is too popular. Much money has been spent here on soccer, but the sport never has gone over."

Having been "deadly accurate with both feet" Carney insists he missed the boat after he came to the U.S. "If I had been smart, I would have been a placekicker. It would have been fun and I was a good placekicker in Irish football."

Dr. Carney would have been right at home in company of the NFL's Garo Yepremian, Pete Gogolak, Jan Stenerud and others who have had to clear customs at some time.

His opinion of U.S. sports is that "the over-all picture is tremendous. Young people get far more opportunity here than anywhere else, but unfortunately they don't appreciate it."

Does he wish he was back in Ireland? "Not to stay, but I'd like to go back for golf and fishing. They don't have the crowds there like they do here."

Why did he come to America? "I knew the future was bright here. I came, saw, liked it and stayed."

Irish football never has been the same since.

The astonishing variety and quality of work by California's artists and craftsmen is on review in the current exhibit at Pasadena Art Museum, Colorado and Orange Grove Boulevards.

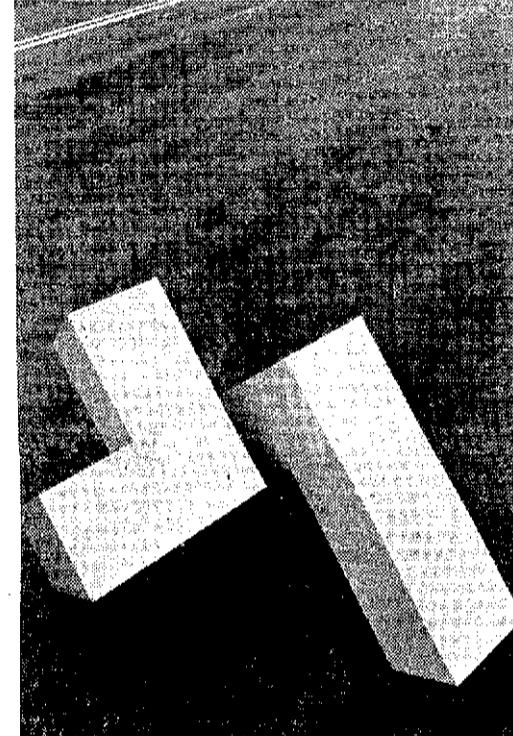

"California Design XI," America's only triennial in the field of design, fills all galleries of the handsome new museum. Once again, it emphasizes the fine line between pure and functional art.

For artists who are selected to exhibit, it is a signal honor — from more than 6,000 entries from Northern and Southern California, only 350 were chosen by professional, knowledgeable jurors.

The show is in two parts. Half are one-of-a-kind objects. The other half consists of manufactured objects of manufactured objects. These may be of limited manufacture, mass produced or simply prototypes for manufacture.

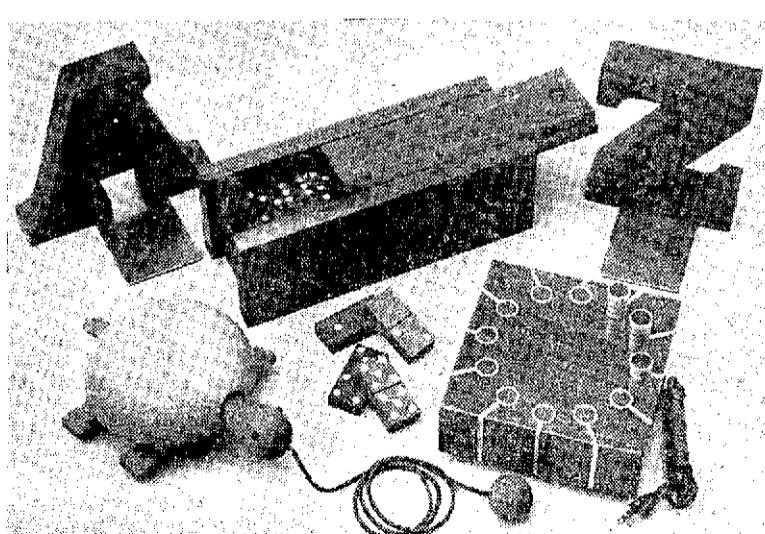

High priority was given to designs with great vitality and innovation or those which bring original solutions to problems.

Though the show will close April 25, its influence will be seen in the future in both fine and decorative arts.

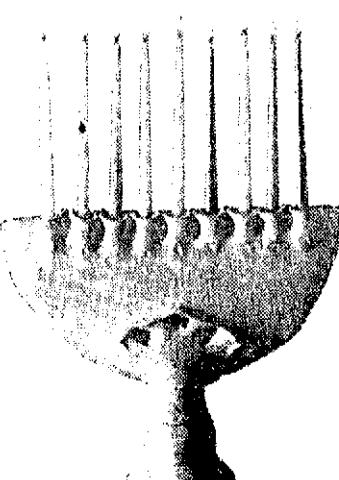

IN STARK CONTRAST are Alexander Moseley's plywood and resin sculpture and the rough surface on which it rests. The 3 by 4-feet structure ($650) weighs 25 pounds.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Time for tea, Alice

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

MOLLY MANSFIELD turned her Huntington Beach home into a real wonderland when she opened it for members and guests of Children's Benefit League for a Mad Hatter Tea Party. The whole gang was there — Alice, the Queen of Hearts (Sally Thompson), the Mad Hatter himself (young Steve Mansfield).

The most outstanding goodies on the beautiful tea table were pastel colored tea cakes in the shape of Easter bonnets made by Lorraine Musser. She wore a giant replica made of frosting on her head.

Highlight of the afternoon was the judging of Mad Hats worn by the members. I had the fun (and tough decision) of being a judge along with her Honor Mary Lewis, mayor of Bellflower, Adm. Ron Hanley (USN, ret.) and Bob Otis, noted baritone who wore two hats — judge and guest soloist for the afternoon.

We awarded the sweepstakes to Trionne Hertzler whose hat can only be described as indescribable. Other winners were Gerrie Searcy with highlights of CBL provisional year depicted on her chapeau. A tall, Carmen Miranda style turban with raindrops falling on her head won acclaim for Jerri Carlson.

President, June Harriman, didn't enter the competition so she sported a purple wig. President-elect Betty Holmes sported buttons and bows on her straw sailor. Pat Babrowski was dressed to kill and had. Her topper was adorned with beautiful pheasant feathers which same bird she had bagged and skinned herself.

The party at times looked more like a meeting of a camera club as ladies snapped shots of each other's mad hats. Strangely enough, several ladies chose an Alice in Wonderland theme — Peg Danielson with tulle, also Kitty Melbourne and Virginia Wood who even had a fake grasshopper on her hat.

Bertha Watson wore a golf trophy complete with score card, Tommie Schoettlin came in poncho and — what else? — a sombrero. Mary Jane Reynolds, representing Children's Clinic and Clara Andrews, Dental Clinic, wore conventional chapeaux.

I voted for the winner (I didn't want to cause discord among the judges.) Secretly my vote for creativity, ingenuity and beauty (just the kind of thing I produce when I am called upon to "get up" a costume) went to Betty Newton. She took an aluminum strainer and covered it with stick on bows. Marvelous!

INA HARRIS has become a "model" housewife. She had an exciting time when she was asked to model designs by Werle (remember Loretta Young's famous door?) at a very private, very invitational, showing in Many homemakers still feel almost apologetic when filling out the "occupation" blank on any questionnaire. Housewife seems to some to be somewhat above "maid" in status, but not by much.

Housewives!

Did you know you're worth $10,000 per year?

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Memo to the nation's 35 million housewives:

If you are inclined, in response to questionnaire or in conversation, to say you're "just a housewife" — stop right now.

The answer is: housewife! (proudly). The experts know that. You should, too. Consider:

— The National Organization for Women (NOW), liberator extraordinaire for females in all walks of life, has drawn up a bill of rights for housewives. Emancipation may be at hand.

— Economists figure the nearly 100 hours of work you provide without salary per week would bring you $10,000 or more a year — if your husband could afford to pay you for your services as keeper of the nest.

— All the free work a housewife does in a year would add $309 billion annually to the gross national product if the housewives got paid.

Dr. Henrietta Fleck, dean of New York University School of Home Economics for the last 25 years, in an interview gave some reasons for the housewife to inflate her ego.

"It's a much more complicated job today than it ever has been," she said. "There are so many new competencies she needs and she must make a number of decisions — like reading labels when shopping for food and weighing the contents against the latest headlines."

"She must consider world and national problems. What she puts into her washer may affect pollution. It's not just a matter of baking a good loaf of bread or apple pie."

(Ed's Note: Baking is a skill, too, Dr. Fleck!)

THE JOBS REQUIRE planning and self-discipline and involve decision-making, according to Dr. Fleck. No book tells you the number of times to vacuum or what is clean.

Among the qualities a housewife needs are self discipline, diplomacy, financial skill, decorating ability, grooming, cooking and many more, says Dr. Fleck.

Authorities at Chase Manhattan Bank, which figured out the value of a housewife, cited needs of intelligence, energy and skill at 12 different occupations during a 99-hour week for no salary.

The jobs include: nursemaid, 44.5 hours per week; dietitian, 1.2 hours; food buyer, 3.2 hours; cook, 13.1 hours; dishwasher, 6.2 hours; housekeeper, 17.5 hours; laundress, 5.9 hours; seamstress, 1.3 hours; practical nurse, 0.6 hours; maintenance man, 1.7 hours; gardener, 2.3 hours; chauffeur, 2.00 hours.

In a pamphlet detailing the worth of a housewife, the bank economists admonished:

"Husbands, consider yourselves not just the most successful of bargain hunters, but lucky as well!"

"And, wives, pat yourselves on the back but don't ask for the cash; your husband probably couldn't afford you."

Forget about that "don't ask for cash" — according to NOW.

THE NOW Bill of Rights for Housewives includes individual pensions, old age insurance, Social Security, health and medical insurance — plus a legally defined and equitable share of property and income.

Something else about the housewife: her work on the forefront still takes time, despite labor-saving devices.

Dr. Kathryn E. Walker, associate professor at the New York State College of Human Ecology at Cornell University, made that point in a report in the Journal of Home Economics, publication of the American Association of Home Economics.

"Time used for homemaking work has not been reduced over recent years as is often popularly assumed," she said.

In fact, the total time the homemaker uses for her family's work these days is not less than it was 40 years ago.

"Families seem to have changed the 'mix' of their time use but have not really reduced total work time," Dr. Walker reported.

There has been a decrease of 30 minutes per day since 1927 in food preparation and after-meal cleanup but since that time there has been an increase of more than half an hour for marketing, record keeping and management.

"Could it be that some of the time 'saved' in food preparation and cleanup went into selecting and buying convenience foods?" Dr. Walker asked.

THERE IS VIRTUALLY no change in the time spent for so-called housework — cleaning and other chores. Employed housewives spend 5.3 hours per day doing housework, one study found. Fulltime homemakers spend eight hours.

Not all authorities, by the way, take a do-or-die attitude toward housework associated with the title housewife.

"Doing housework when there is something more important to do is like putting pearls on a string with the end untied," said one woman.

That woman was no less than the time-motion study authority, Lillie Gilbreth — mother of all those kids in "Cheaper by the Dozen."

And there's a certain amount of sympathy for the so-called punk housewife. When she retired after many years as managing editor of The Ladies Home Journal, Mary Bass recalled that the most mail from readers came in response to a story detailing the complaints of a woman who signed herself "the punk housewife."

Mrs. Bass recalled that the readers apparently wanted to rush to the rescue, patting the woman on the back, saying, "There, there, don't feel so bad, everything will be okay."

THREE CHEERS FOR NOSTALGIA

Fashion classics return

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times News Service

for fall, their most significant season.

The wave of nostalgia, which happens to center on the 1940's, has unearthed such oddities as Halston's long fur boa with an orchid pinned to it and his fluffy chubbies, done these days in dyneil instead of fox.

It has also brought back a renewed interest in the classics, such as the trench coat, which has never been away, and the sweater set, which has.

Halston updates it by carving out a shallow scooped neck on both cardigan and pullover. He also likes to use the cardigan as an accessory, tying the sleeves around the neck like a scarf.

He updates shirtwaist dresses by leaving the last few buttons unbuttoned and popping shorts underneath. One of his mannequins wears a white turtle-neck sweater belted over checked shorts with a floral length shirtdress. It's likely to give the classics an entirely new lease on life.

Flower-patterned sweatshirts and tie-dyed ones are other contemporary ideas.

The Original concept of classic runs to coats with neat, squared-off shoulders, small waistlines and flaring skirts. There's a good helping of Chanel-like tweed suits, too.

To go over everything — conceivably even the suits — there are voluminous cape coats. Back in the '40s or thereabouts, they were called pyramids or tents. They're full enough to swirl around like a cape, but they have sleeves, which means purses and parcels are manageable. As revivals go, it's not a bad idea.

The silver fox collars, borders and hoods go on skinny black coats. Enough is enough.

A LOVELIER YOU

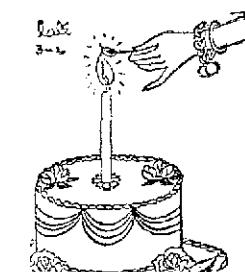

Don't let winter reveal your age

By MARY SUE MILLER

Tabulations show that most mature women have a well-stocked makeup kit. It contains powder base, powder, rouge (blusher) and lipstick. Eye makeup, in limited quantities, has a place in most kits.

Thus Lovelies past the age of no-telling give evidence of a desire for continued attractiveness. And this leads to the assumption that there would be great concern about the condition of the skin under the makeup. But such is not the case. A high percentage of the group neglects even the basic steps in their skin care — the application of a dry-skin cream or lotion.

Yet it is a fact, and every woman knows it, that dryness and lines caused by dryness increase with every candle on a birthday cake. The number of candles that you may expect are surely on the increase. Modern medicine predicts an ever-lengthening life span.

If LEFT TO ITSELF over the years, the skin could come to resemble antique parchment. What a pity, when the use of modern skin-care products retards wrinkles. Why then would a woman ever be negligent? Either she's a skeptic or she does not understand the bare essentials of skin care.

For the latter lady, this small list: moisturized cleanser, superfatted facial soap; oil-rich, moisturized night-care cream or fluid. For skeptics: Take the advice. Results rout doubts.

To firm and uplift sagging facial muscles, use my four-way method. It works wonders through corrective exercise, posture, skin care and makeup. Procedures are detailed in the leaflet, Banish Crepe Throat and Chin. For your copy, write Mary Sue Miller in care of the Independent, Press-Telegram, enclosing 15 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

For Veronica --at last a rose garden

By DIANNE SMITH
Staff Writer

Thomas Wolfe wrote "You Can't Go Home Again" to show that time changes people and places.

Veronica Lake came home to Hollywood again after 20 years and both have changed.

She had shed the long blonde tresses that fell seductively over one eye during her movie career, which spanned the 40s and early 50s.

With gray streaking her still blonde hair, Veronica Lake returned to the town she left in 1952. She was on a nationwide promotion tour for her autobiography, "Veronica." The book, co-written with Donald Bain and published by Citadel Press, was released in the United States in early March after becoming a best seller in England.

She has no regrets about Hollywood or leaving at the peak of her career and seemed uncomfortable being in the limelight again.

Her navy blue eyes have faded and once classic features show the wear of 48 years.

"I have no compunction about my age," she commented in an interview at the Beverly Hills Hotel. "If you read studio biographies, I'm two years older. They made me older to avoid having chaperones on the set."

SHE STARTED her movie career at 17, married a much older man at 18, divorced, married a second time and divorced again. She has three children — two daughters and a son — and three grandchildren.

She left Hollywood not out of bitterness, but because "I couldn't cope." Drinking became a problem — something she readily admits.

"I never said sour grapes about Hollywood and if it comes across that way, it was me, not the town."

Disillusionment wasn't part of her departure either. "I don't see how anybody could be disillusioned with Hollywood. It might be what happens to them in Hollywood, but Hollywood is Hollywood. I'm sorry to hear it's falling apart at the seams. It's a shame," she said, her voice trailing off.

The book sets the record straight by stating, "Veronica Lake is a product of Hollywood."

Why didn't she go back to her real name when she left the movies? "After the war years and a name like Veronica Lake, you'd never be able to change it. And, after past experiences, I wouldn't want to."

THE BOOK is really about Constance Ockleman Keane (her real name), who was born in Brooklyn and came to Hollywood via Miami in 1938 with her mother and stepfather.

When she left 14 years later, she went to New York, settled in Miami with a brief interim in Freeport, Bahamas. She now lives in England and has for the last two years.

"I went there for a couple of days to promote my book and liked it so much I stayed. I think I've finally settled on England as a home. Of course, I'll always be a rover."

She has a rose garden ("can't live in England without one") at her home, located about 1½ hours drive from London. "I don't want to live in the city anymore, but to be close enough to it."

When she left Hollywood, she didn't know where she was going or what she was going to do.

Since then, "you name it, I've done it," she said about her life. She made headlines several years ago when someone discovered her working as a waitress in New York. She also played theaters throughout New England.

What does she hope people learn from her book? "Oh, perhaps about me as a person and also a Hollywood era which I think might interest them. If I went through everything, it would be another year and a half on this interview," she quipped.

It took her that long to write the book. "To recollect all at once is almost impossible."

VERONICA LAKE and the famous peek-a-boo hairstyle that was her movie trademark.

ANY REGRETS about starting out so young in Hollywood? "In retrospect, no," she replied, but hastened to add she wouldn't want to be a newcomer in films today.

Elaborating, she reflected:

"I think films are becoming obsolete in topic and type. They're slowly going back to entertainment instead of shock value. After all, let's face it, people have enough problems in their own lives. Why should they pay to see more? I don't say all pictures should be like that, you need a 'Grapes of Wrath' once in a while."

"In my era and before my era, people could identify with the glamor of movies.

"Today's stars have to contend with the whole world. At least in my time, location shooting was held to one country."

She's watched a lot of her old movies on late night television. "As a matter of fact, I saw six or seven I'd never seen before. I get a kick out of it. The first time I saw 'Gunfighter,' I said, 'were Alan (Ladd) and I ever that young?'

VERONICA AT HOME in England, above, and with Alan Ladd in scene from movie, "Black Dahlia," at height of her career in Hollywood.

Joan Fetterley to be June bride

The engagement of Cydney Joan Fetterley to Randall Dean Cloud is announced by the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney S. Fetterley of Pollock, S.D.

The future bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dean Cloud of Seal Beach. A June 18 wedding date is set.

PREMARITAL COUNSELING

Catholic priests conducting class

By JUDY PARSONS

A church-sponsored course on premarital counseling is meeting with extraordinary success.

Sixty-five couples, averaging 21 years in age, are learning more about those days of married life ahead of them. The six-week course was designed to look at marriage as a shared love experience, not an abstract institution.

"The classes concentrate on the positive assets of married life, not the statistics, such as divorce. The couples are concerned with communicating with each other. They have questions on morality, birth control and family planning which we hope to answer," said the Rev. Francis Meskill of St. Matthew's Church.

The program, still in the pilot stage, is a cooperative venture designed by the priests from 14 Catholic parishes in Long Beach and Lakewood.

"It was formed for couples who will be getting married before June. The next course will begin after Easter for those selecting June wedding dates."

In the first session a priest touches upon the theological aspects of marriage and Christian love. On the second date a doctor discusses the sexual aspects of marriage and problems of a physical nature.

"The classes concentrate on the positive assets of married life, not the statistics, such as divorce. The couples are concerned with communicating with each other. They have questions on morality, birth control and family planning which we hope to answer," said the Rev. Francis Meskill of St. Matthew's Church.

The next meeting several married couples conduct a seminar in groups of 10 and discuss the practical features of family life they have already encountered.

"We try to get articulate people who are happily married and have had experience conducting seminars."

During the fourth gathering a marriage counselor guests and offers his professional advice. Next a lawyer, consumer affairs expert and realtor discuss the legal aspects of marriage, day-to-day shopping and buying and renting problems.

At the last session a priest talks on Catholic family life.

"Several priests are always in attendance to answer the moral questions which may come up," stated Father Meskill.

To become a member of the group the couple is referred by a priest. In addition to Long Beach and Lakewood the couples come from Bellflower, Torrance, Compton and California State College at Long Beach.

The classes take place Friday evenings in St. Mary's Hospital. Assisting Father Meskill is the Rev. Lawrence Triesch of Holy Innocence Church.

Responsibility must be taught

By DR. HAIM GINOTT

out water. You need to work out a feeding schedule."

THE NEW arrangement worked well for two weeks. Then, once more, Mother found dry bottles and thirsty hamsters. Furious, she called in the culprits and said: "I have a serious complaint. When I see helpless creatures suffering from thirst, I want to give them to someone who will take care of them. You have three minutes before I decide what to do with them."

Mother was annoyed at the sight of the empty water bottles. But she said to herself, "Oh well, children do forget. It's my job to help them remember."

First, Mother gave mild reminders: "Children, the hamsters have no water" or "Emergency: two hamsters dying of dehydration! SOS."

When this gentle persuasion fell on deaf ears, Mother called the boys in and gave them a longer talk: "Children, I'm worried. Your hamsters had good care all winter. But now, you play outdoors a lot and they are left with-

"I find myself getting too angry about the thirsty hamsters. When I'm faced with a choice of being a sane mother or having pets, you know what I'll choose."

HOW FAR SHOULD A MOTHER'S TOLERANCE GO?

The children cried and begged: "Please give us one more chance."

Mother replied: "Okay. Last chance. You take care of your pets or they'll have another home. No care, no pets — that's it."

AGAIN, Mother found the hamsters unfed. The cage and its residents were given away. Andy and Bruce came running to Mother, tears in their eyes: "Where are the hamsters?" Mother replied: "They have another home. I know you will miss them, but they need ed care."

Throughout the ordeal Mother was authentic.

She never insulted the children. She never called them names. She knew that children are childlike and that growth takes time. However, she never abdicated her adult responsibility of being a guide and guardian.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Radiology is his specialty

By MILDRED K. FLANERY of Detroit, and his M.D. degree from Wayne State University, also in Detroit.

He was called to active duty in the Navy while in surgical residency at St. Joseph's Mercy Hospital in Pontiac, Mich.

Married to the former Jane Farley of Farmington, Mass., they are the proud parents of Nicholas, Jr., 21 months.

Asked where and when they met, Jane laughs. "Well, we met on a blind date just after he returned from Vietnam. But, he, by the way, was the other girl's date."

Today's Chef of the Week, Dr. Nicholas C. Kleha, served that area aboard the USS Princeton; and in Long Beach, aboard the hospital ship Haven and at Long Beach Naval Hospital.

Following his release from the Navy, Kleha decided to specialize in radiology instead of continuing on in surgery, as he had planned. At present he is completing his radiology residency as chief resident at Long Beach Veterans Hospital.

Kleha's work there with other veterans has become accumulative. He's known as "golden guns" by his colleagues at the hospital. "His prize gem remarks give a guy a boost," says one doctor.

BORN IN Madison Heights, Mich., son of a Russian immigrant, he is the oldest of seven children. At an early age, Kleha decided on a medical career, receiving his B.S. degree from the University

NICHOLAS C. KLEHA, M.D.

"HE LOVES to work hard and to play hard," says Jane. "At home, he's constantly putting. In fact, he's one man in a million who always goes to work with a smile."

Kleha plays tennis, skis and sails for recreation.

"An excellent, imaginative cook and gourmet, some of his dishes are ethereal in character," continues Jane. His interest in Oriental cooking stems from a trip that he planned for her after being released from the service. It was sort of a second honeymoon.

Our "Chef's" recipe today gives credence to the above — it's for a Chinese Vegetable Shrimp Dish. Here's how he does it.

CHINESE VEGETABLE SHRIMP DISH

1. Marinate fresh shrimp for one hour in 1/4-1/2 tsp. ginger
- 2 tbsps. sherry
- 2 tbsps. soy sauce
- Sprinkle with salt and pepper.
2. Vegetables
- Chinese peas
- Japanese mushrooms
- Bamboo shoots
- Celery
- Broccoli
- Green onions

Pan fry shrimp in a small amount of oil and put to one side. Add vegetables few at a time and fry a few minutes longer.

DO NOT OVERCOOK.

To the vegetables add a small amount of chicken stock (1/2 cup). Thicken sauce with a combination of soy sauce and corn starch. If this becomes too thick dilute with more chicken stock. Add shrimp. Vegetables should be slightly underdone as they will continue to cook a little longer after being removed from the heat.

Richter-Hanna nuptials read in Episcopal rite

Making their home in Long Beach following a wedding trip to Yosemite will be Frederick Lethco Richter and the former Camilla Sylvia Hanna.

The couple was married in St. Luke's Episcopal Church Saturday afternoon. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. E. John Hanna of Long Beach and Alexander Richter of Gardena and Mrs. Robert Tigert of Portland, Ore.

Attending their sister was Joan Patricia Hanna, maid of honor, and Mrs. Kenneth B. Pleshek, matron of honor. Joel Lynn Richter, the bridegroom's brother, was best man.

The new Mrs. Richter is a graduate of Long Beach Polytechnic High School and her husband is an alumnus of Benjamin Franklin High School. Both were graduated from Woodbury College, where they were active in Phi Gamma Kappa and the Commercial Art Guild.

Another Orozco's art speaks

and paint are vivid

By ELISE EMEY
Arts Editor

He is a polite, quiet little boy with warm brown eyes and a shy smile. But his head teams with visions of fantastic creatures and his emotions burn in reaction to human problems.

He is Jose Clemente Angel Gae Orozco, grandson and namesake of Mexico's most illustrious painter. Actually, the Gae — pronounced Guy in English — was not part of his famous ancestor's name. It is the word the little boy called himself when he was six months old and the name by which he is known.

In his native Mexico, Gae is considered a prodigy in art. Not yet 11 — he was born Aug. 8, 1960 — he has had one-man (one-boy?) shows in the Lepe Gallery of Puerto Vallarta, 1966; The Gallery in Guadalajara, 1968; the Noveades Gallery in Mexico, 1969; and the Hospicio Cabanas in Guadalajara, 1970.

DURING the summer of 1970, Jason Wong, director of Long Beach Museum of Art, met Gae's father, Clemente Orozco, in Mexico City, and saw some of the child's work. He didn't meet the young artist who was at school — the Two from 1883 to 1949 — he died 11 years before the child was born. The elder Orozco first planned to become a chemist or an architect but when he was in his late teens he lost two fingers in a chemical explosion. Gangrene set in and his left hand had to be amputated; his eyesight also was damaged. Nevertheless, he studied to be a painter, always believing that the artist must master the strict discipline of his profession before he could express himself fully.

Orozco took part in the Revolution of 1910-1920 which sought to correct the social injustices of Mexico. When peace came, he was chosen, with other great artists, such as Diego Rivera and David Alfaro Siqueiros, to paint murals in public places, to take art out of museums and put it where everyone could see.

Orozco's monumental art, critics say, has no parallel in the history of modern art, its only precedent being, perhaps, Goya's frescoes in the arts

United Nations School in Mexico City. Gae is a straight A student, studying in both English and Spanish.

Wong, impressed by the precocity of Gae's work, arranged for an exhibit, "A Child's Art," which opens today at the Long Beach Museum, concurrently with the 47th Annual Long Beach Art Association show. The public is invited to a reception from 2 to 4 p.m. for which Friends of the Museum will be hosts.

During this past week, Gae and his father have been in Long Beach and will attend the opening before leaving Monday for Mexico.

GAE NEVER knew his grandfather who lived

"My wife and I believe that we should give Gae and his older sister more. We expose them to basic, important things. To music, to science, to art, to literature. We take them to concerts and plays. We travel a great deal. This is Gae's fourth trip to the United States. We never lie to them. They are given honest answers."

"But the child must discover his own conclusions."

SOME OF GAE'S conclusions are unusual for one his age. In his art he shows the biting awareness of social inequities that his grandfather protested.

"In your country," said Orozco, "it is difficult to tell the middle class from the wealthy. They dress much the same, go to the same places. In Mexico, we have many classes; it is a land of great contrasts."

"Because of my father, we have access to many people of talent, culture and wide interests. In 1963, we took Gae to some of the poorer sections of the country, the remote villages. He poured out his reactions with his drawing pen.

"TRASH," painted Feb. 14, 1971, shows blood pouring from one man's mouth to another's. Symbols of destruction and devastation are all that remain in man's world.

IN POOR Mexican village, the most colorful elements are Pepsi-Cola signs. Overhead, cynical advisors tell peasants, "Get Rich" to improve their lot.

is the use of the sparse line, the impact of open space.

At this point, there is every indication that Gae will devote his life and talent to art after seeking the stern professional training and discipline that his grandfather demanded.

Said his father, "There is no such thing as real art without training. Everyone can run, but the champs are trained. To achieve your goal, to truly express your intent, you must prepare."

Nothing could please the little artist more.

'Man Passed This Way' charts 3,000 years of human effort

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

"Man Came This Way," a 400-object collection, is an extraordinary exhibit in scope, presentation, and as evidence of a highly-gifted personality, Phil Berg.

Berg, the agent for such luminaries as Clark Gable, Judy Garland, Wallace Beery and Charles Laughton, applied his impresario energy and instinct for star-quality to acquiring objects reflecting 3,000 years of human creativity.

Categories represented are: Mesopotamia, Egypt and the Levant; Greece, Rome and the West; the Orient; Oceania and the Pacific Basin; the Pre-Columbian Americas; Negro Africa; "And to Today."

NOR WAS the collecting random. The well-illustrated catalogue reflects canny scholarship. The scope of the undertaking is not one which could be afforded by an academic scholar or museum curator.

All these gifts are being presented to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art where they will flesh out the relatively young museum's collection. But, to receive the full impact of this survey of man's history as creator, it should be seen in its present installation which continues through May 30.

EACH OBJECT is displayed in a clearly labeled setting, complete with maps, charts, slides and in special cases which relate the objects to one another. For example, a 15th century Italian Renaissance painting, the "Jarves Cassone," is opposite a 16th century Flemish woodcarving, "The Presentation," so the differences in approach and style may readily be seen.

Pre-Columbian American objects, stone, ceramic and gold, may be seen in context, near similar objects from Africa, the Orient, Oceania, and the ancient Mediterranean Basin.

Hours at 5905 Wilshire Blvd., are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays, and noon to 6 p.m. Sundays.

JOHN DARE

Directors join opera staff

Pacific Opera Theater will have two directors, new to the company, for its production of Puccini's "Madama Butterfly" which will open April 15.

John Dare will be music director and Gary Davis stage director.

Performances are scheduled April 15, 16, 17, 22, 23, 24, 29, 30 and May 1 at 8:30 p.m. in the intimate Studio Theater of Community Playhouse, 5021 E. Anaheim St. Matinees April 18, 25 and May 1 will begin at 3 p.m.

Dare recently returned from conducting opera in Ankara and Istanbul, Turkey. The Istanbul opera house, which took 23 years to build and equaled in grandeur the Los Angeles Music Center, was used only one year before it burned to the ground.

DURING his tenure in Turkey, Dare conducted "Don Carlo," "The Magic Flute," "Fidele," "Il Trovatore" and "Otello." He is a graduate of Manhattan School of Music in New York City, and of UCLA where he became a member of the opera staff. In Boston, he conducted "The Good Soldier Schweik" for Sarah Caldwell.

Davis, who also will serve as production manager, is known in Long Beach for his work with Civic Light Opera and the Jewish Community Center. A graduate of Occidental with degrees in production flew to Washington, D.C., where they will participate in festivities culminating in the gala "Military Wife of the Year" awards banquet on May 18.

The competition to select the Military Wife of the Year was conceived in 1967 by Art Linkletter and Wilson Harrel, who felt it was about time the world knew about the remarkable work military wives do the world over.

HILDE SELIN certainly fills the bill.

In New London, Conn., she is currently involved in many community and Coast Guard activities and serves as director of the Junior Church Choir of the Mystic, Conn. Methodist Church. She is also a regular soloist with the Coast Guard Band.

The nomination stated that while stationed in Finland she aided people-to-people understanding through her music. Mrs. Selin worked with local Finnish choirs teaching

AMERICAN UNIT CLIMAXES 1971 ST. PATRICK'S DAY PARADE IN DUBLIN

Ah, 'tis a wee bit of Irish lore

DUBLIN, Ireland

Oh, the words of the Irish talkers,
How they ring with eternal truth!
How the conversation sparkles,
Gentle the wit and ultra嘲.

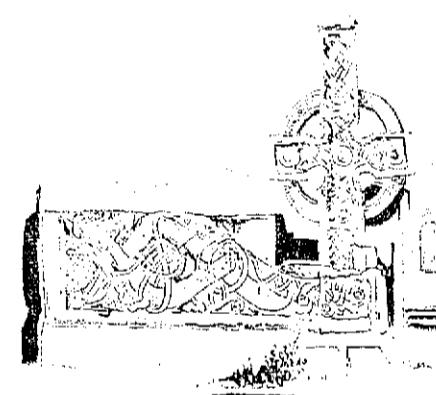

Intellect is the key to culture:
An axiom, for what it's worth.
Without that spark, we would never know
The Gaelic art of pointed mirth.

Ah, the lyrics in ancient Celtic
Tell us of, in meter mystic.
A race apart — the Chosen People!
(How can this be Chauvinistic?)

Oh, don the green and share this feeling.
Up the Irish! Below that clout!
Pluck the harp and sing their praises!
They have plenty to brag about.

Back to Ireland any day now:
Let the final voyage begin.
I have seen the portals of Heaven;
I have heard the music within.

TRIP TIPS

Travel health precautions

By MARIE MATTSON

Every year scores of people get ready to travel abroad and find their vaccination certificates are not in order.

Most common faults are:

1. Origin and batch number of smallpox vaccine has not been recorded on the certificate by the doctor.

2. Government health authority's stamp of approval has not been obtained.

With just three immunizations — smallpox, yellow fever and cholera — you can travel almost anywhere in the world. For most countries, however, you'll need only smallpox.

Other immunizations such as typhoid, paratyphoid, tetanus, poliomyelitis, etc., may be recommended by authorities. All shots can be given by your doctor except yellow fever, which you get in major cities at U.S. Public Health Service centers.

BE SURE month of inoculation always is shown in letters — not numbers. In many countries 7-1-71 would be read as 7 January 1971, a misunderstanding which could make an inoculation prematurely invalid.

It is your responsibility to get immunizations and have them properly recorded.

For painless travel anywhere in the world, here are other points to keep in mind:

• Avoid high altitudes if you have heart or lung problems — thin air puts considerable strain on these organs.

• If you wear glasses, have the prescription recorded in the space provided on page 15 of your certificate of vaccination booklet. This will save having your eyes re-examined abroad if you lose glasses. Should you use contact lenses, carry an extra pair.

• Ask your doctor to fill in on pages 14 and 15 of your vaccination booklet information necessary for a physician treating you abroad.

• Plan to get extra rest at the end of a long plane ride to help your body adjust to the new time zone. If possible, reach your destination at night and go right to bed. Flights to Europe usually arrive in the morning and you must wait several hours to get into your hotel room. Avoid this delay by requesting that the room be ready upon your arrival.

• If you wear glasses, have the prescription re-you'll have to pay a full or half-day extra, but it will make travel more pleasurable.

• Japanese baths and Finnish saunas are relaxing for almost everyone. However, adverse effects may be encountered if one has just eaten a heavy meal or has taken drugs or alcohol. These extremely hot baths also should be avoided by the elderly and persons with high blood pressure, heart trouble or diabetes.

• If you become ill on a trip, allow time to recover.

• A doctor recommended by your hotel will be satisfactory for minor ill-

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Potpourri of news for tourists

By STAN DELAPLANE

San Francisco

We took an airbusman's holiday the other night: a ride on the jumbo jet. I've been on before but most of the 350 passengers with me hadn't.

Odds are you'll be on a 747 this year — if you fly. And the flying is a little different.

There are closed lockers overhead. That gets rid of the coats and the flight bags that used to be underfoot. More headroom.

CARPARTMENT seating gets you away from that feeling of sitting in a long tube.

There is NOT a comfortable number of bathrooms. And most of them are in the tail. Which means you walk a block. Standing in line with a nervous child in tow is a horrid experience.

The big rush is just after the movie — skip the fade-out happy ending and beat the mob.

NORTHWEST Orient, showing off their new 747 (daily from the West Coast to Honolulu and the Orient) — loaded on 350 travel agents. Loaded travel agents with cocktails.

Took them on a two-hour

If you can stay out of the July-August madhouse, do so. The tours are in and out of hotels like commutes. The lobby is full of baggage going out, next baggage coming in.

Europeans take THEIR vacations in summer, too.

RESTAURANTS get jammed. Service and quality go down. You stand in line for sightseeing spots. Wait forever for taxis.

Forecast is for another 15-20 per cent increase this year from the U.S. That's what fills the jumbo jets. But it's rough on the traveler.

"I understand we will be searched when we board a plane . . ."

Well, they don't give you a skin search. But they make me open my top coat and run their hands down my sides and over the pistol pockets. (Hey, Mac, what's going on here?) Ladies have to open their handbags.

You also walk through an alarm system.

"We hear so much about health rules in Mexico, we don't know WHAT to think . . ."

Europeans take THEIR vacations in summer, too.

Forecast is for another 15-20 per cent increase this year from the U.S. That's what fills the jumbo jets. But it's rough on the traveler.

First, tourist hotels and restaurants are safe as any at home. Mexican doctors have lots of experience with anything YOU will get. And it cures easily.

Stay frosty and enjoy yourself.

"Somebody told us you tip stewardesses on European lines . . ."

I don't. Never saw any tourists who did.

I did run into an Englishman who flies back and forth from London to Glasgow. And he gives something to the stewardess if he flies with her a lot. Says he gets his whiskey faster.

"How about hitchhiking in Europe?"

Lots of kids with the thumb out. They say it can get pretty rugged — long waits in the rain with no ride. Boy-and-girl teams seem to get rides easier than boys alone.

Small flag of your country sewn on the rucksack helps. The European drayler likes to rap with foreigners.

A P&O Cruise to Alaska. It's a good place to get acquainted with your husband.

This summer, P&O Lines is offering a beautiful experience for people to have in common Alaska. On four separate cruises, P&O's S.S. Arcadia will sail up the smooth Inland Passage past some of the most spectacular scenery in all of nature.

A ringside seat in nature.

From a deck chair or lounge aboard Arcadia, you'll get a clear, close look at evergreen forests, sheer rock cliffs, ice mountains, and marine wildlife. There'll be fascinating shore stops at places where the flavor is Russian (Sitka) or Victorian (Victoria). Plus non-stop shipboard entertainment: dance bands, movies, four night-clubs, an English pub.

"We didn't just see one whale. We saw 3 different kinds."

Alaska Cruises from $395.

Two weeks. S.S. Arcadia leaves Los Angeles on four Sundays, May 23, June 6, June 20, July 4. Sail to Vancouver. Cruise the Inland Passage to Ketchikan, Juneau, Lynn Canal, Glacier Bay, (complimentary tour of Mendenhall Glacier). Return to Los Angeles via Sitka, Victoria and San Francisco. All P&O ships are of British registry.

Even the time is reasonable.

A P&O Alaska Cruise fits comfortably within the two-week span of an ordinary vacation. There are four sailings to choose from, including a Thrift season cruise in May, priced 10% less. Family budget fares, too. When you think about it, there probably isn't a better place in the world to meet people — including the ones you already know.

DEAR ABBY

Granny talks too much to suit him

DEAR ABBY: I have a mother-in-law problem, but not the usual kind. She is not meddlesome, gossipy or anything like that. She is practically perfect—or she was, until 18 months ago when her daughter (my wife) made a grandmother of her.

Now, I realize that all grandmothers think their grandchildren are the cutest, smartest, prettiest, etc., but my mother-in-law has overdone it until I want to gag.

She carries dozens of pictures with her and shoves them under everybody's nose whether he is interested or not. And, no one has a chance to talk about anything else when she's around. It is positively nauseating. She bores everyone to tears with her "granny" talk.

I have sat in a group wanting to crawl under the carpet when she takes off about "my" grandchild. The worst part of it is, she doesn't realize how sickening it is to others.

How can I let this otherwise dear, sweet woman know that everyone is not as eager to listen to her "granny" talk as she is to spout it? EMARRASSED IN ATLANTA

DEAR EMBARRASSED: What's wrong with telling her?

DEAR ABBY: My boy friend has been after me to prove my love. I tried to tell him what you said in an article about this, but it didn't come out right. If you can remember what you said, I would very much appreciate seeing it in your column. I am 15. Sign me . . .

"WEAKENING"

DEAR WEAKENING: Here it is: Girls need to "prove their love" through illicit sex relations like a moose needs a hatrack. Why not "prove your love" by sticking your head in the oven and turning on the gas? Or playing leap-frog in traffic? It's about as safe.

Any fellow who asks you to "prove your love" is trying to take you for the biggest, most gullible fool who ever walked. That proving bit is one of the oldest and rottenest lines ever invented!

Does he love you? It doesn't sound like it. Someone who loves you wants what is best for you. But now figure it out: He wants you to surrender your virtue. Throw away your self-respect. Risk the loss of your precious reputation. And risk getting into trouble and hurting yourself and hurting your family.

Love? Who's kidding whom? A boy who really loves a girl would sooner cut off his right arm than hurt her. If you want my opinion, this self-serving so-and-so has already proved that he doesn't love you. (P.S. It wasn't an "article," it was from my book, "Dear Teenager.")

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM AND THE EVENING NEWS

The Tonys

The Broadway performer with the most Tony Awards, Gwen Verdon, and twice-honored Richard Kiley will be among the stars performing on the 25th anniversary telecast of the Antoinette Perry (Tony) Awards at 6 p.m., Sunday, Ch. 7.

The silver anniversary program will feature many past Tony-winning stars re-creating their original roles from the outstanding musical plays of the last 25 years.

Hosting this year's awards presentations are Lauren Bacall and Rex Harrison.

Miss Verdon won her first Tony for her supporting role in the Cole Porter musical, "Can-Can," in 1954. Her other silver medallions came for her starring roles in "Damn Yankees" in 1956, "New Girl in Town" in 1958 and "Redhead" in 1959.

Co-starring in "Redhead," and recipient of a Best Musical Actor Tony, was Richard Kiley. The two stars will perform a duet from that Tony-winning show.

Kiley also was voted a Tony in 1966 for "Man of La Mancha," and will sing the show's now classic "Impossible Dream."

Miss Verdon is expected to sing a medley from her award-winning performances.

These two stars will join former Tony winners Lauren Bacall, Vivian Blaine, Diahann Carroll, Carol Channing, Alfred Drake, Robert Goulet, Rex Harrison, Sam Levene, Zero Mostel, Robert Preston, Phil Silvers and David Wayne.

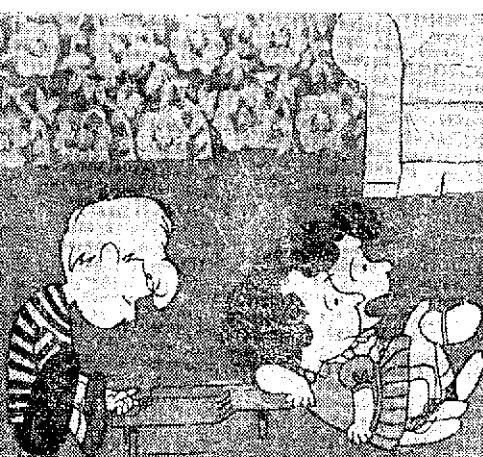

The Tony Awards were created by the American Theatre Wing in 1947 as a continuing tribute to artistic achievement on the Broadway stage, and are administered by the League of New York Theatres.

George Plimpton, the amateur everything, tries his hand at being a standup comedian — the guy who walks out unarmed and tries to make people laugh — at 9 p.m., Friday, Ch. 7.

Among those offering tips are (from left, behind him) Buddy Hackett, Dick Cavett, Milton Berle, Jonathan Winters and Bob Hope.

Play It Again, Charlie Brown

That old star-name magic will still pull them in at the box office, but an almost-unknown is the real star of a new special, "Play It Again, Charlie Brown," at 7 p.m., Sunday, Ch. 2.

It's not that he's an overnight discovery. He's been around for over 20 years. But up until now he's been kept somewhat in the background, without any professional jealousy marring his pianistic talents.

He is a superb, dedicated musician who recognizes only Ludwig van Beethoven's works in his repertoire. And in his first starring vehicle, he will play portions of 13 Beethoven sonatas.

And he's only in the third grade.

He is Schroeder, one of the little kids in the series of Charlie Brown specials.

WHY GIVE billing to Charlie Brown when it's really Schroeder's show?

"Because Charlie is ALWAYS mentioned in the titles of the shows," says one of his spokesmen. This is not to imply that Charlie has any temperament or is in the least overbearing. This is the way it's always been, and the way it will always be.

"Play It Again, Charlie Brown" is the first new special in two years based on Charles Schulz' small characters.

AND AS always, it deals with a real and present problem: should Schroeder sell out his beloved Beethoven in order to make his debut as a pianist, and play ROCK (for heaven's sake!) at the PTA? Does Schroeder live with the precept that one should be true to one's beliefs?

Can Lucy sway his feelings and thus earn his love, since her love for him is not only unrequited but totally unrecognized?

And finally, can the rock combo — consisting of Snoopy on bass, Charlie Brown on guitar, and Pigpen on drums — cope with Schroeder's hangup with Beethoven?

It is a quandary.

AS THE KEY figure in "Play It Again, Charlie Brown," pianist Schroeder causes Lucy and her little crony Frieda to sing the blues because of his preoccupation with Beethoven.

'Bird's-eye View'

The madcap adventures of two airline stewardesses provide the jet-age comedy in the new NBC half-hour comedy series "From a Bird's-Eye View," which will premiere at 7:30 p.m., Monday, Ch. 4.

British star Millicent Martin plays British stewardess Millie Grover and Patte Finley portrays

MILICENT MARTIN

American stewardess Maggie Ralston.

Millie Grover is described as a girl who is all heart. It is her unending

I WATCHED the Arte Johnson Special and would like to comment on it. Arte was all right, but very dull. Elke Sommer had her beauty hidden by a horrible wardrobe. Bing Crosby, Joe Flynn and Billy DeWolf were real good. But, who stole the show? Why Mr. Tall (Peter Marshall). If it weren't for him on the show, I'd have turned it off after 10 minutes. Marshall is great and should be on his own special.

Mrs. Peggy Shiefer,
Gardena

WE HEARD about cancelling Lawrence Welk's TV programs and we wish to add our views to show our appreciation for all his performances of young talented people. We'll let he will appear again soon by public acclamation.

Carlton Lay,
Long Beach

... ONE of the programs I hated to see cancelled was "Men at Law." It had such good stories; can't see why it failed.

C.D.,
Lakewood

... ON THE programs that are shown on our screen: Please have a thought for older people who are not interested in silly "Laugh-In" show or sex programs.

There are so many fine men that have had good panel shows — Bill Cullen, Gene Rayburn, Alan Ludden — and many others who have had very pleasant, clean and entertaining shows. I never miss "What's My Line" or "To Tell the Truth" — love these fine men, but never turn on any show the second time that uses profanity or filthy words. I'm just one of many old housebound people that seldom leave our homes, and radio and TV is my only recreation. Please give us back more of our clean entertaining shows ... Yours for better and cleaner pictures. We do still have a vote.

Marcia Hill,
Long Beach

RE: THE letter from Mrs. Arlene J. Dietz (TeleVues March 21). The movie she is referring to is "The Rare Breed." The role of the Scotsman was played by Brian Keith, and his son was portrayed by Don "Ironside" Galloway. Maureen O'Hara and James Stewart were both in the movie.

However, I do not believe the movie was filmed in Scotland, but rather in the area of Idaho, Wyoming or that section of the American West, as the central plot was whether or not the imported cattle could withstand the severe winters experienced there.

The last time I saw the movie was on Ch. 7's 6 O'Clock Movie over a year ago.

A.G.,
Long Beach

(Mrs. Luther Hunt and Vicki Reeves of Long Beach and Sandy Smith of Garden Grove, reported similar information).

... "ALL IN the Family" ... I'm of the minority race and think the program is great ... If we can't have a program that gives us a laugh, goodness only knows there is plenty of sadness in the world. This program is "everyday" living — it's a natural.

Let's get together and keep "All in the Family" on the air.

Lee Wool,
Long Beach

(The series is scheduled to return next season.)

WAS Leonard Nimoy fired from "Mission: Impossible," or did he retire on his own?

E.H.S., Chico, Calif.

Nimoy asked for his release, as did Lesley Warren. Both want to do something else next season.)

SPECIAL

PROTESTANT-CATHOLIC Movie Awards (4), 4 p.m. — Hugh Downs announces winning films for 1970, with a special citation to an individual. Scenes from each will be shown, and discussed with TONY AWARDS (7), 6 p.m. — Lauren Bacall, Angela Lansbury, Anthony Quinn and Anthony Quayle are presenting hosts as Broadway salutes its own with Tony awards in 21 categories. Live from the Palace Theatre, the 2-hour telecast recalls each winning musical of the past 25 years (since 1947's "Finian's Rainbow") with songs offered in costume by its stars — including Yul Brynner, Carol Channing, Alfred Drake, Richard Kiley, Gwen Verdon and Zero Mostel.

PLAY IT AGAIN, Charlie Brown, (2), 7 p.m. — In a new animated special by Charles M. Schulz, the piano-playing Beethoven fan, Schroeder, wrestles with two nemeses — lovelorn Lucy Van Pelt and (good grief!) rock-and-roll music.

OSMOND BROTHERS Show (2), 7:30 p.m. — The youthful brothers — Alan, 21; Wayne, 18; Merrill, 17; Jay, 15; and Donny, 12 — star in their first variety special, featuring George Burns, Tina Cole (of King Cousins and "My Three Sons" fame), the Hager twins (of "Hee Haw") and the littlest Osmond — Jimmy, 7.

TV NOTEBOOK

THE ALKA SELTZER commercial featuring the phrase, "Mama Mia, that's a-some spicy meatball" took top honors at the 11th annual international broadcasting award ceremonies.

The commercial won the television sweepstakes award and a trophy as the most humorous television advertisement.

The awards, sponsored by the Hollywood Radio and Television Society, were presented in 12 television and nine radio categories.

A series of three musical commercials titled "You've got a lot to live" for Pepsi Cola Co. took the radio sweepstakes award.

Flip Wilson was honored as broadcasting's man of the year.

MERV GRIFFIN'S late-night series has been renewed for next season by CBS . . . World-famous violinist Jascha Heifetz is the subject of an hour NBC special April 23.

WHEN host Allen Ludden's "Password" series returns on ABC April 5 as a daily afternoon entry, the premiere week contestants will be Elizabeth Montgomery of "Bewitched" and Bill Bixby of "The Courtship of Eddie's Father."

TWO CBS soap operas, "As The World Turns" and "The Edge of Night," mark their 15th anniversaries Friday . . . A children's version of the famous old television series, "You Are There," which offered "eyewitness" re-enactments of historic events, will be a weekly, half-hour Saturday day-

SPECIAL

SCOTLAND YARD (4), 8 p.m. — David Niven is on-camera narrator for a look inside the London Metropolitan Police — which is Scotland Yard — visiting the Black Museum where "memorabilia" of old crimes are kept, and talking with officials about England's most notorious murder cases and how they were solved. The Lucy Jarvis-produced hour also probes the basic differences between the American and British police systems, such as the absence of guns in London, and the challenges posed by the flow of immigrants from Asia and the West Indies.

SALUTE to the Oscars
(4), 8 p.m. — Bette Davis makes a rare TV appearance as hostess of a "Music Hall" comedy-variety hour featuring Frank Gorshin, Michele Lee and the team of Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara. Highlights are a medley of Oscar-winning songs, and sketches spoofing X-rated movies, the "best actress" award, and the pre-awards cocktail party. The two-time Oscar winning Miss Davis plays a presenter in two comedy blackouts.

SPECIAL

FLIP WILSON (4), 7:30 p.m. — In final new segment of Flip's amazingly successful first season, Tim Conway plays a billionaire recluse, a senile headmaster of a boys' school, a pool shark and the Revolutionary silversmith Paul Revere. Sandy Duncan sings and joins in a swinging Freddy sketch, while Laugh-In's Johnny Brown plays Ed Sullivan and salutes 25 years of TV and the dance crazes of those years.

(Another hour with Flip airs tomorrow as he hosts "The Record Makers.")

LEON RUSSELL & Friends (20), 8 p.m. — An unrehearsed rock session, taped in a studio bare but for cameras and cables, features Russell with guitarist Furry Lewis, saxophonist Jim Horn and others. Hour may be heard in stereo by tuning in KPPC FM (106.7).

CRITICS' CORNER

IN SEARCH OF AMERICA, Aired March 23, Ch. 7. Although "relevance" bombed out in new television series this season, audiences have since proven they will buy it if it is not over-promoted pretentiously like some phony public service . . .

"In Search of America" attempted to be somewhat — curse the word — "relevant." And the idea, if not the execution, really was a rather delightful notion for a potential weekly series. Consider:

In the story, which looked like nothing so much as a pilot for a series, we have a pleasant young man (Jeff Bridges, son of Lloyd) who decides to drop out of college to take to the road and reassess his values. But he loves his family. And instead of just leaving, he challenges his skeptical parents (Carl Betz and Vera Miles) and with-it grandmother (Ruth McDevitt) to go along with him in a reconditioned bus, and find out what's going on in the country today.

The cast was ideal, particularly Miss McDevitt, who is simply a gem. But I think the show might have come off with much more charm and potential if the family had kept to the road in a series of wide-ranging vignettes rather than focusing for virtually the entire play on the routine "relevant" melodrama that occurred during a stopover at a rock festival — runaway girl, natural childbirth, and so forth.

The idea of a reconciliation between the generations is important — and, in film entertainment, is almost exclusive to television because of its audience composition, as opposed to the predominance of youth among moviegoers. "In Search of America" is one of the most pleasant ideas one can imagine for the reconciliation theme — despite the in-and-out quality of the venture. In a more fully-rounded presentation combining comedy and drama, and with the same excellent cast for the family figures, it would be a highly welcome network series.

Rick DuBrow, UPI

What's a woman like me doing in an ad for a men's hair replacement firm?

Believing in it!

In my years of experience as a professional entertainer, I've been asked to endorse many products. But I've been very selective. Because when I endorse a product, I have to believe in it.

And I believe in Hair Anew . . . the most effective new method of hair replacement for men and women.

Sheila MacRae

"It's brand new, and it's really different from anything you've ever seen."

—Merv Griffin Show

"Once in place, the hair is on permanently and the wearer treats it as his own, washing and brushing it just as he would his real hair. No additional special care is needed."

—California Business

"Advanced technology is brought to bear on thinning hair . . . so that (the new hair) is fastened . . . as securely as your hair or mine, maybe even more securely than mine."

—Ray Duncan, NBC News

"For those who are still fearful of losing their (hair) piece in an awkward moment, there is . . . Hair Anew."

—Time Magazine

"The hair is permanent . . . and the wearer treats it as if it were his own naturally grown crop."

Scotland Yard

Documentary tells policeman's lot

"We do not carry firearms in this country, we never have and I hope that we never shall," says Sir John Waldron, KCVC, Commissioner of the London Metropolitan Police — Scotland Yard.

Commissioner Waldron will be among other Yard officials and detectives who will appear on "Scotland Yard," at 8 p.m., Tuesday, Ch. 4. David Niven will be the narrator.

Lucy Jarvis, producer of the documentary, obtained special permission to bring a film crew into high-security areas for the first time. Elite members of the Yard speak candidly and openly about crime detection and how they are able to solve a high percentage of their cases.

THE VIEWER will watch as three top detectives sit in a local pub reminiscing about England's most notorious murder case and how they solved it. Ian Forbes, their chief, who is England's number one crime-buster, guides the viewer through the case, starting at the scene of the crime and on through the courtroom where the trial was held.

One of the highlights of the program is a scene between two prominent men — the great Detective Fabian of the Yard and Eddie Chapman, who was notorious as a second-story man and then famous as a World War II hero and counterspy during the Battle of Britain — reminiscing about the days when they tried to outsmart each other while working on opposite sides of the law.

THE COLORCAST also will include film showing various innovations and activities of the police, such as the closed circuit televising of automated traffic control in London; methods of handling demonstrations and acts of violence; control of drugs; and challenges the London Metropolitan Police face in their daily duties.

Among other officials of Scotland Yard who will be interviewed for the first time on television are Deputy Assistant Commissioner Peter Brodie, head of the famed CID (Criminal Investigation Department), and two of his outstanding deputies, Dick Chitty and Wally Virgo. Deputy Chitty is known for his work on "The Great Train Robbery."

The special will also show the basis of the British police system and how it differs from others. The London Metropolitan Police, whose headquarters are in Scotland Yard, are often called upon to solve difficult crimes not only in England but throughout the world because of its expertise.

THIS MAN AND WOMAN ARE REDUCING THEIR WAISTS, ABDOMENS, HIPS AND THIGHS

with the Fabulous New SAUNA BELT™

TRIM-JEANS

The Amazing Space Age Slenderizer that is so sensationally effective it is...

GUARANTEED TO REDUCE YOUR WAIST, ABDOMEN, HIPS AND THIGHS A TOTAL OF FROM 6 TO 9 INCHES IN JUST 3 DAYS OR YOUR MONEY REFUNDED

"I got my physique into excellent shape . . . tighter, firmer and 10½ inches trimmer with these great trim-jeans. It took just a few minutes a day over the 3 day period during which I lost 3½ inches from my waist, 3½ inches from my abdomen, 1½ inches from my hips and a total of 2½ inches off my thighs. Terrific results . . . a terrific product!"

Gary Coover

"I actually lost 7 excess inches during my very first session with this incredible slenderizer and the inches came off just where I needed to lose them. I went through the program again on each of the following 2 days and the inches continued to roll off—and all without the need for dieting. Over the 3 day period, I lost a total of 4 inches from my waist, 2 inches from my tummy, 2½ inches from my hips, 3 inches from each thigh, for a total over-all loss of 14½ inches in just 3 days with these wonder working trim-jeans."

Linda Saatsaz

Here is how it works:

Mrs. Linda Saatsaz has slipped into her trim-jeans and is inflating them with the hand-held pump provided. She is now ready to perform her 'Magic Torsö' movements and exercise program designed specially for trim-jeans.

After a few pleasant moments—about 10 minutes or so—doing her 'Magic Torsö' movements, Linda is now relaxing for an additional 20 minutes while keeping her trim-jeans on. That is all there is to it.

Linda now slips her trim-jeans off and checks her 'after' measurements. Remarkable! Linda lost 2 inches from waist, 1 inch from tummy, 1 inch from hips, 1½ inches from each thigh for a total measurement loss of 7 inches in just 1 brief session.

THIS SUPER PRODUCT IS PRODUCING SUPER NEW SLENDERIZING FOR MEN AND WOMEN. HERE ARE JUST A FEW:

Mrs. Mary Lou Wilhelm: "Following the trim-jeans program, I reduced my waist 2½ inches, my abdomen by 2 inches, my hips by 2 inches and my thighs by 2½ inches each—I ate normally—it took just 3 days—and the inches have stayed off."

David Medeiros: "Just 3 days on the trim-jeans program and I trimmed off 13 excess inches; 5 inches from my waist, 4½ inches from my abdomen, 1 inch from my hips and 2½ inches from my thighs. No dieting—and my appearance has improved 100%."

Miss Carol Arrighi: "I used your marvelous trim-jeans a few minutes a day for 3 days in a row and reduced my waist from 26 to 24, my tummy from 31 to 29, my hips from 36 to 34 and my thighs from 28 to 21. My new measurements are just perfect for my height and it is just unbelievable that it took so little time and effort."

TRIM-JEANS—THE SPACE AGE SLENDERIZER WITH RESULTS THAT ARE OUT OF THIS WORLD. The trim-jeans are a marvel of ease, comfort and efficiency. Once you have slipped them on, you are ready for the most astounding experience in rapid slenderizing you have ever known. Only trim-jeans has the unique features of design, including the exclusive super sauna-lock that permits the constant snug fit and solid support in all 4 areas—waist, abdomen, hips and thighs—without which truly sensational results are not possible. We recommend that the trim-jeans be used a few minutes each day for 3 days in a row when you first receive them and then several times a week until you have achieved your maximum potential inch loss. After that, for maintenance you can use the trim-jeans about twice a month or as often as you feel the need.

THE MOST REVOLUTIONARY GUARANTEE IN SLENDERIZING HISTORY. So many users of the trim-jeans obtain 'instant reducing'—are inches slimmer, inches trimmer in from just 1 to 3 sessions with this super slenderizer—are actually losing as much as a total of 7 or more inches from their waists, abdomens, hips and thighs in just 1 session and up to 14 or more inches from 3 sessions. This principle produces really fantastic results. There may be variations of speed and/or degree of results due to individual differences in metabolism and body response. Not everyone may lose 7 inches in just 1 session and 14½ inches in 3 days but remember this: No matter what your metabolism, no matter what your body type, if you do not lose a total of from 6 to 9 inches from your waist, abdomen, hips and thighs in just 3 days, you may return the trim-jeans and the entire purchase price will be immediately refunded.

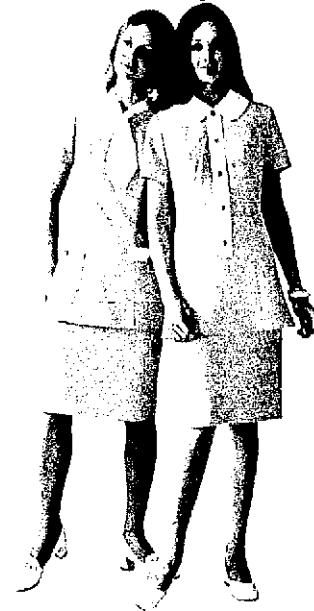

THE AMAZING TRIM-JEANS TAKE OFF INCHES WHERE THEY NEED TO COME OFF. Your trim-jeans are designed to give you just the reducing effect you need where you need it . . . and the price of the trim-jeans is just $13.95 and each pair carries FULL MONEY BACK GUARANTEE. Here is the slenderizer supreme—trim-jeans—which we sincerely believe to be the easiest, fastest, most convenient, most sensationally effective waist, abdomen, hip and thigh reducer ever discovered—with the most revolutionary guarantee in slenderizing history. So if you want trimmer, slimmer, sleeker measurements and you want them now, send for your trim-jeans today.

TRIM-JEANS, P.O. Box 3984, Dept. SU-3/39, San Francisco, Ca. 94119

Please send me Trim-Jeans along with complete instructions. I understand that if I do not use them for 3 days I can at that time return 7 inches or more of my money back. ed that!

Q: Is it true that it was her former husband, Cary Grant, who got Dyan Cannon into the "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" movie — after she was originally rejected for the part that made her a star? — M.H., Beaumont, Tex.

A: No. Miss Cannon has producer Mike Frankovich's secretary to thank. Because she quietly slipped the actress's name onto the lengthy list of hopefuls to be tested for the part. Dyan proved best by test and won rare reviews. Frankovich then starred her in "Doctors' Wives" and now is filming her in "The Love Machine."

Q: My dad claims pitcher Satchel Paige was once in the movies. I don't believe it. Was he really? — J. Fajarczyk, Miami.

A: Yes. United Artists thought Satchel was a natural. And he bagged the role of an Army cavalry sergeant in their 1958 production "The Wonderful Country." About acting, Satch says: "I like it. You get to sit down a lot — and the pay is real good." Though he's constantly chided about his age, all Paige will admit is: "I'm a bit older than my mother. If you want to know the truth, I was born in August—I'll be 60 next July 7." (According to the record books, he was born July 7, 1906. But the consensus is that's just a conservative estimate.)

Q: If Chiang Kai-shek, now 83, dies or is incapacitated, I hear his wife will succeed him. Anything to it? — Wanda M., Long Beach.

A: Those in the know don't think so. Though Madame Chiang is feared and respected, she's not well liked. His son, Deputy Premier Chiang Ching-kuo (who ducked a would-be assassin's bullets in New York some time ago), has been groomed by his father to hopefully follow in his footsteps. However, the self-exiled Peng Ming-min (once member of China's U.N. mission), might not sit still for such a succession. It's believed that a free election could end the dynasty.

Q: I just saw a movie on TV, "Kisses for My President," in which Polly Bergen plays the first female President. Does Polly think we'll ever really elect a woman President? — Mrs. F. Henderson, Washington, D.C.

A: "I doubt it," says Polly. "Not until we can get women to vote for women. Though we have more votes than the men — most women don't trust other women. And I am sure they'd feel doubly that way about a female President." Miss Bergen recalls that the movie, ready for release earlier, was delayed until 1964. Because Fred MacMurry (in the role of the President's spouse) made a political tour around the country — similar to the one JFK and Jackie were making when the President was assassinated in 1963.

Q: Didn't Marlene Dietrich once conduct an "advice to the lovelorn column? — Hilda Littman, Pittsburgh.

A: Not a column — but a series of radio broadcasts in that format for NBC-Monitor — in '58-'59. Also on the same network Miss Dietrich, along with Bob Hope, Burns & Allen and other famous stars participated in "Stardust" — a radio forerunner to such current TV hits as "Laugh In" and "Hee Haw."

Q: My wife's birthday is coming up. And I read where Mickey Spillane just gave his actress-wife a very unusual birthday gift. What was it? I'm looking for ideas. — E.G., Boulder Dam, Nev.

A: My advice is to keep looking. "Puzzled by what to give a girl who has everything," the creator of Mike Hammer explains, "I bought Sherri something she couldn't possibly return — a 'bust job.' It's an artistic, emotional and eyebrow-raising success that makes her new image a dilly."

Q: I've heard that Richard Burton, at 45, doubts if he will ever reach old age. What's he doing about it? — Bernard Bennett, Syracuse.

A: For one thing, he's not living it up at his former breakneck pace. Also Burton's becoming concerned with rendering worthwhile public services. Such as the documentary film he recently made for the National Coal Board of Great Britain — about precautions young Welsh miners should take at the pit face. Many have lost their lives by violating such safety measures.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of Southland Sunday, P.O. Box 2505, New York, N.Y. 10017. He will answer as many questions as he can in his column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible. □

By Bill Duncan

After a particularly tough day, Ron Safran stood near land's end in Long Beach to watch the sun slide beneath the horizon over the Pacific Ocean. The serenity of this hour was therapy for the young, naive Californian who is by trade an engineer-builder. This spot is his favorite.

He spoke quietly:

"I've built high-rise developments, the massive concrete structures that dominate the urban scene today. I've looked at these monsters and found the results totally unsatisfying. I felt I was only contributing to more of the crushing effect of our urban society on those who live there. I wanted to build, but not that way."

An idea for a development was rattling around in his head. Standing where he was, watching the rays of the sunset dancing over the rippling waters of the Pacific, he knew this was the spot on which he had to build his dream.

The spot is a niche of land hugging the natural coastline of Alamitos Bay, one of the five natural bays, in California. But this development must not spoil the scenery. It must fit the mood of what was all around him.

The concept he had in mind was a commercial development that would resemble a small town rather than the cold, impersonal urban shopping center.

That was in 1967.

Today after years of research, investigation and planning, Ron Safran strolls through his dream — Seaport Village on the shoreline overlooking the Long Beach Marina.

Seaport Village has 22 shops and three restaurants — all designed to capture a bit of Cape Cod, a bit of early California seaport towns, a bit of small town America, the essence of this country's independent, free-enterprise spirit.

"I am convinced that psychologically the human being is not meant to live in the congestion of a city. What I wanted to build was a place where people could get away from that and just relax while they shopped or just browsed," he said. "That was the way it used to be and I wanted to bring some of it back."

Has it been successful?

office. I find myself spending more and more time in the village."

Construction on the village began in January of 1970. It is about 95 per cent completed with only a few more shops and one restaurant still under construction.

The village was designed by architect Ed Killingsworth of Killingsworth - Brady and Associates of Long Beach. It is constructed of warm woods and it houses quaint little shops opening on landscaped courtyards. The structures are tied together by a wandering, timber-covered pathway. The low profile of the structures and the exterior elevations blend into the predominantly residential character of the Marina area.

The architecture itself, according to Safran, is a combination of Victorian, early California and old New England. Safran personally visited New England seaport villages to get ideas for construction and he prowled up and down the California coast to collect more ideas. In addition, he searched through hundreds of books looking for details and designs of early village shopping centers.

The result is that Seaport Village has a character, a personality and even the salt air smell of an old seaport village. Safran has jealously seen to that, fretting over minor details to insure that his concept be kept in the strictest sense.

Attention was even given to the lighting of the village. It has an almost gaslight glow rather than the electric glare. "I wanted the lighting to enrich the bay in the dark night hours with a warm beckoning glow of a friendly village, not the open glare of a spotlight effect," Safran explained.

By Safran's rule there are no neon signs in the entire village. Instead, hand-carved wooden signs hang in front of each shop adding to the flavor of the development.

There will be vending machines in the area, but these will keep within the village decor.

Part of his research showed that most villages had a penny arcade as one of the attractions. Safran planned one for Seaport Village, but when he investigated those in existence he discovered they were generally noisy and dirty. He then rejected the idea.

The cost of constructing such a village is double what it would be to put up a tilt-up concrete structure. Much careful hand craftsmanship in carpentry — some of which Safran says is almost a lost art in modern construction — has gone into the village construction.

Because everything is in wood, the village's fire insurance rates are higher, but Safren insisted "on the use of natural, soft lines."

"I believe the builder today has to be a responsible individual. He must not try to do everything the fastest, cheapest way, but instead consider the esthetics of the thing he is building," he said. "We must get away from the monstrous, frightening, push-basket ideology of shopping centers."

The village has more than four times the required parking space, but it is so designed that it does not give the appearance of a massive shopping center asphalt desert.

There is something else unusual about Seaport Village. There is a men's clothing store, a women's clothing store, a children's apparel shop, a rug making shop, a flower shop, a tobacco shop, a food store, a gift shop, knickknack shop, a jewelry shop, a bookstore, an art gallery, and more — but not one of them is owned by a chain operation.

"The independent merchant built America. Chains and retail corporations came along much later," Safren said. "I feel that the independent merchant is more interested in his customers and will keep the image of the quaint village we've created because he takes a tremendous pride in his shop."

As soon as the word was out that Seaport Village would be constructed, chain operations flocked to Safren's office waving long-term lease agreements. All were turned down. He has allowed franchises, like Hickory Farms of Ohio, to come in, but only because "the owner is again an individual, independent merchant and not just a manager for a chain operation."

Actually, Safren interviewed each tenant personally before agreeing to sign a lease. "We have some pretty strict rules and not every retailer is willing to live up to them," he said.

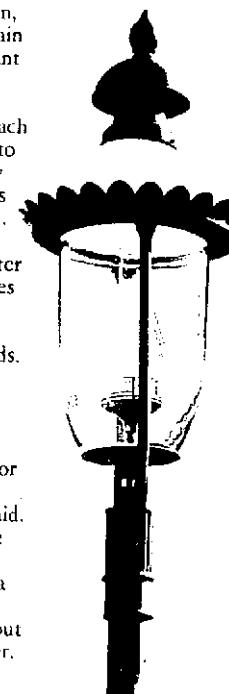

One thing the village doesn't allow is splashy sales. For that matter no merchant in the village competes with the other on any kind of merchandise. Even the restaurants specialize in different kinds of foods. One is a steak and lobster house, another is a family-type restaurant and the other, not yet opened, is a Mexican food restaurant.

"So many restaurants applied for space that we could have filled the village with restaurants only," he said. "We hand-picked the three that are here."

Is Seaport Village designed as a tourist attraction?

"It isn't meant to be anything but a small town village shopping center. Of course it is quaint and colorful and therefore it does attract tourists, but I won't allow the village to be turned into a tourist trap. Basically we serve the surrounding residential area as a quality mercantile village with gourmet restaurants," Safren said. "What my idea is for the village is a pleasant, quiet, unhurried place to shop."

Ron Safren has rebuilt a little of the America that was. □

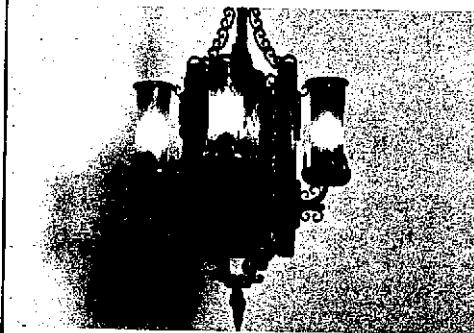

The Jolly Roger Restaurant

Entertainment's as big a feature as the cocktails, steaks, lobster and ribs served in these handsome surroundings. Drop anchor for a bayfront breakfast, lunch or dinner. Children's menu.

How to Retire and Like It

By Capt. Johan Jacobsen

Johan Jacobsen, retired sea captain who spent 48 years on ships, took up painting in retirement because "I want to do all I can to make this world beautiful." At age 75 Capt. Jacobsen entered Polytechnic High School in Long Beach, and he graduated in 13 months.

Before I tell you about my 22 years of retirement, I must say a few words about my active life. Retirement is the extension, sometimes the continuation, of the pattern set up in the years of one's active life. Some exceptional people may be born again on retirement day, but they are not numerous.

There is reason, therefore, for telling you why I took to the sea in my youth. The factors that affect a man's choice of retirement may be much the same as those which led him to his first choice of a life career. The youngster who was dragged into some job, kicking and protesting decisions made for him by his parents, is apt to cop out on retirement day. He really doesn't retire gracefully or purposely at all. He just quits. Successful retirement begins 50 years before when the youth enters his life career. In that tremendous step he is setting the life pattern which will fashion all the rest of his life.

I will tell you what led me to the sea from my home in Norway. Neither my father nor my mother ever took me aside and said, "Johan, why don't you take to the sea?" They were quite opposed to such a life for me. They had three sons who became sea captains, all against their preference. Then what took me to sea? I think I know. It was the pictures my mother hung on my bedroom walls when I was little. All of them were sea pictures, beautiful ships, lovely seashores. All beautiful. I remember waking up in the morning and the early sun was shining on the picture of two ships meeting at sea, their sails set to send them in opposite directions. And I remember thinking, "What mighty men they must be to handle ships like that." From that point it is not hard for a boy to say, "When I get big I will go to sea."

The urge must have been great for I did not stay home long enough to get the education my parents wished. And that shaped my life and my retirement too. As soon as I had finished my seven years' apprenticeship on the clipper ships — sailing vessels — and moved up to steamships I began to think of getting some education on my own to make up for what I missed. When I became a sea captain I always kept books close by.

In the gung ho of a captain's life, when the sea is high, the ship wallowing and the crew weary, a man gives little thought to retirement. His mind is on "How do I manage this?" His problem is the here and now.

Not many men — seamen, anyhow — could tell you when they set out to plan retirement. Most just walk down the gangplank and quit. But that is bad. Life's voyage is in two parts — that which leads up to 65 and whatever follows. It would be a damned stupid sea captain who would put out to sea with no idea of his destination. It is just as dumb to shove off at 65 with no port in mind. I remember when I was just a kid I was on a four-master crossing the Atlantic with a load of salt for Newfoundland. The storm got so high that the salt shifted. It was all on one side of the ship. We looked for her to turn over any minute. We spent the night like that. If anyone had gone on deck he would have fallen into the sea. The captain said, "Boys, we never looked for anything like this or we wouldn't have shipped." I feel that most of the problems people have after 65 are because they had not planned their course very well.

I can only talk about seamen. I don't know how bankers retire or lawyers quit. All I know is the sea lanes. As I watched the boys retire during my 48 years at sea, many of them just skipped out in some port, jumped ship and started life anew, catch as catch can. They did not retire. They just quit. That is bad. It is an insult to a man's own life not to finish it respectfully. The man who just says to hell with it all and quits never had much respect for his life while he was living it. Any man with respect for himself will want to see his story end well.

I don't know how a man's mind works, not even my own. It seems to me a man does his best thinking when he does not know he is thinking at all. Maybe in sleep. I recall, maybe 10 or 15 years before I retired, I awakened in the middle of the night, the ship was rolling pretty good and I found myself ready to roll off onto the floor. I remember the idea that was in my mind: "Some of these days retirement will slip up on you like a storm at sea. You had better have the boat under control. Decide where you are going and do what it takes to get there."

The ideas came like this: "Ships that stop in the middle of the sea usually sink there. The Titanic did, and it was the finest ship ever built. Better keep the old ship rolling on after retirement or you're sunk."

I remember buying a banjo. I never got good enough with it to play in public, but I liked to pick it up in my quarters and spend sometimes an hour singing. I thought, "When I retire and have less to do, I can use my banjo more." Then I thought, "Golly, I can't just sit down and pick a banjo. I've got to do something worthwhile."

That thought was in my mind on retirement day. Of course, I did not put my discharge papers in my pocket and walk up town and buy an easel and start painting. I had to try my ship out, like they do on maiden voyages. See how the ship responds. I probed this way and that. And, like most men on retiring, I made mistakes.

Doesn't look like an outdoor color tv antenna, does it?

Winegard announces SENSAR™

Look at it.

No arms or rods or bars, or whatever you call those things that stick out from other outdoor antennas. And it's small. Really small. Only 46" x 6" x 3 1/4".

Winegard's Sensar is too good-looking to look like any other outdoor antenna you've ever seen before. But while looks might be deceiving, performance isn't.

You see, the Sensar has proved that it will perform as well as much, much larger antennas. In fact, Sensar will deliver the best possible reception in color and black & white, on all channels (2 to 83), and depending upon the reception problems unique to a particular area, from as far as 40 miles from tv transmitters.

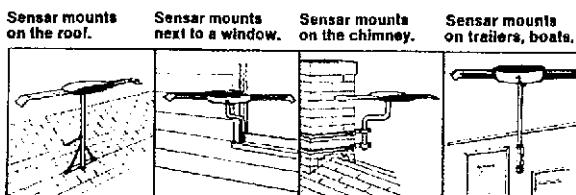

The reason why Sensar is so small and good-looking is the same reason why it's so powerful. Built-in, solid-state circuitry. By using tiny, space-age transistors, we've finally been able to produce a powerful antenna that's a sight for sore eyes instead of an eye-sore.

Price? Only $49.88 for the SR-20 Solid-State Sensar, including back-of-set Band Separator.

Incidentally, even if you're only slightly handy, you'll find Sensar surprisingly easy to install. And not just because it's small. We have coaxial cable kits and special antenna mounts for the roof, the window (in case you live in an apartment), even for travel trailers, mobile homes and boats.

Sensar. Powerful, good-looking, small, wind and weather-resistant. And sensibly priced.

We think you should take a look at it.

view it as a second start in the game called life. They reflect: "Here is my chance to correct the mistakes back there 40 or 50 years ago when the game first began."

That is especially true of us who hurried into our life work without formal schooling. You see, in addition to all the good things an education does, there are two byproducts, each very bad. A fine formal training is apt to make a man feel vastly superior to us unschooled chaps. And it also does something bad to us. We go out on life's ocean feeling "I am a second-class seaman." We do a lot of boasting and blustering that we are as good as our learned brothers. But this is not so. While fighting any suggestion from others that we are inferior, we feel this in our bones.

This showed up in my retirement experience. At the age of 75 I felt so keenly my lack of formal schooling that I entered Polytechnic High School in Long Beach to take a four-year high school course. Through the grace of God and kindly teachers I was graduated at the end of 13 months, age 76. There was a girl of 17 in the class, so they chose for their class name "The Spirit of 1776."

My belated high school course had something to do with my taking up art as my retirement vocation. High school graduates are venturesome, whether they are 17 or 76 years old. It is a wonderful feeling.

My desire for self-discovered knowledge did not break out all of a sudden when I entered high school at 75. It was with me all my life. As a sea captain I kept more than a tight ship. I was always eager to have around me men who knew something. My men gave me serious books as presents. Even books of philosophy. And I loved them. They were filled with words that sank me, but I struggled like a sea-logged ship. It took me 30 years to learn what a few years of formal schooling would have taught. But I kept sailing right into the storm. I had made up my mind to find out what life was about. I took bearings with serious men on shore. To these wise and helpful men I feel great gratitude. They talked to me about the cosmic forces in our world. I listened like a hungry man. I was most impressed by the ideas that have been afloat since Seneca and the Stoics; there is a bit of God in every man, more in some than in others. The purpose of life is, therefore, to increase and cultivate all in man that is like God, his father. That demanded thought control. I would make my idea of God the guiding force in my life. When this thought came to me, I was born again. After that, I never said, "I will do this," but "God and I will do this."

When a man thinks like that, he finds he is living toward a new aim entirely. His aim is to make the world he lives in, God's world, as beautiful as possible. That is the reason I took up painting pictures. I want to do all I can to make this world beautiful. I am too old to command a ship, but I can still picture it at sea, facing its storms and overcoming them. So, every picture I paint disappoints me. I feel, "God deserves better work than that."

My lack of formal schooling back in Norway has done this to me. It has made me alert to capture and use new ideas wherever I find them. Lecturers always found me their best customer. They found my ears up. That was true of a psychologist who visited Long Beach with a lecture many years ago on behaviorist psychology. His ideas changed my life. He said that anyone could do almost anything if he trained for it in time. My friend Hegel could have been a football player instead of a philosopher. President Coolidge could have been an opera singer.

I stayed up half the night figuring out what the professor had said. I made up my mind. "If that man is right, why can't I paint pictures?" I am half-convinced there was a speck of truth in what the psychologist said. If I had started 80 years ago, I might have been an artist if I had not starved to death. Then I might have retired from art and gone to sea.

I was down to the dime store next morning before it opened. I bought half a dozen cheap brushes. I had no high opinion of my skill, nor have I now.

If a man has liked what he has done all his life, he is likely to retire in a straight line. He would go on with less zip at what he had done before. A farmer at 65 might quit plowing, but still use a hoe. Then years later he might quit hoeing and just bring in the cows. But suppose he had worked at a job he had never liked, say polishing away the splinters on toilet seats. When he retires he is not likely to go to a toy factory and ask for a job polishing seats for doll houses. The important thing is to do something. Don't sit down and stink. A man should not sit around and wet his pants waiting for the Social Security check.

All you senior citizens who have asked me how to retire successfully must be smiling to yourselves. You have watched me sail all around this problem, never coming close. I think I might answer your question had you put it, "How do seamen retire successfully?" Seamen retire exactly as they have lived. Those who met and solved difficulties boldly retire successfully. Those who haul down their sails in front of every opposing breeze do not retire at all. They shipwreck on retirement day.

A survey of 182 men and women showed that 118 have not found retirement what they had hoped. I am greatly surprised, not at the 118 disgruntled ones, but at the 64 who keep their chins up and say, "Isn't it wonderful!" How splendid! Out of a class of 182 there are 64 who have graduated magna cum laude. That beats my Poly High class, the best that ever sat in a classroom. □

Take two baths tonight:

1. A bath with moisturizing oils to smooth away dry, rough skin...

2. A bath with delicate mineral salts to help soothe and relax you all over.

New Mini Spa gives you both these beautifying baths at once. While other bath additives are just oils, Mini Spa is something quite different. It combines the benefits of rich emollients and soothing mineral salts—and you can feel the difference all over your body.

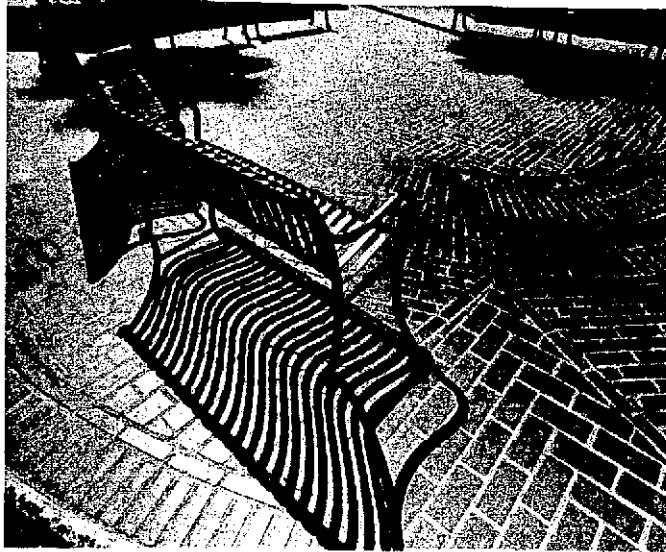

You're surrounded by skin softeners, moisturizers and essences from all over the world that soften dry, rough skin, and smooth it to a delicate texture.

Oil of Ylang Ylang from Madagascar gives you its exotic touch. Sandalwood from Java adds exquisite fragrance. Deep Sandalwood from India imparts warmth and richness. Lavandin from France smooths you into deep softness.

With Mini Spa it's a delicious experience, but it's also pretty practical. With its moisturizing oils, your skin takes on a more youthful feel. And with its delicate mineral salts help soothe tired muscles and relax you all over. It's like taking two beautifying baths at once.

California Choo-Choo

Whistling a swan song?

By Ralph Hinman Jr.

"Didja say the S.P. station?" A startled San Francisco cabbie swiveled to survey my wife, Marcia, and me, newly perched on his passenger seat.

Then, almost apologetically, the grizzled, aging driver muttered, "I get so few calls there these days. Not like it used to be..."

"Not like it used to be." I would repeat his sad little valedictory off and on throughout a day in which Marcia and I, for the first time in over a decade, traveled in America by train — from the City by the Bay, where we had flown the night before on business, to Los Angeles.

Because — and let's face it, train fans — there are real differences in substance and style between today's iron horses and those of halcyon memory, of 1961, 1951, 1941, 1931 and beyond.

Inter-city service — in California, anyway — has been pared to the bone. One passenger train departs daily from each of the Golden State's two metropolitan centers, meeting just north of San Luis Obispo.

Where in other times, long, serpentine trains glided through bountiful valleys and along a rocky coast, glorified diesel Toonervilles — four cars and a locomotive — now are seen. The Larks no longer fly.

Fleeting moments of glory — like Camelot's in its declining days? — occur twice weekly along the route. East and westbound cars of the New Orleans-San Francisco express then are attached to the daily Coastal to or from Los Angeles. Real trains run again, if only briefly.

Even this paltry service may vanish in coming months — if and when a proposed national railroad system comes into being. Bureaucrats in far-off Washington have decreed — and may make it stick — that all north-south traffic along the West Coast be discontinued. It's uneconomic in this era of airplanes and super-highways, they tell us with frigid, seemingly irrefutable logic. But is it?

Attitudes, both the public's and the railroads', may be the key factors in whether service continues.

With millions of Americans, including myself, defaulting in recent years to airlines or highways, some railroads have come to believe — with justification, perhaps — that we no longer love them. This seeming indifference is coolly reciprocated by too many rail lines, informal investigation indicates.

The first bit of evidence in partial confirmation of the latter came shortly after a still-bemused taxi driver deposited the two of us before the main entrance of the Southern Pacific's San Francisco waterfront depot.

Walking through a near-empty domed place — it was Saturday morning, after all — I approached the ticket counter, flipped out a widely accepted credit card and asked for "Two one-ways to Los Angeles, please."

"Sorry, sir," a bright young Chicano apprentice clerk replied. "We don't honor credit cards — do we?" he asked, turning to a veteran supervisor.

"We don't take any credit cards," the older man growled without lifting his eyes from a column of figures.

No credit cards? In this day and age? Hoo-boy! Fortunately I was flush enough to buy tickets — $28.14 for two — or the day's adventure would have ended with ignominious retreat to the airlines, who gladly grab the ubiquitous charge card.

Tickets in hand, I turned to critically view the still handsome, '66-vintage Spanish Colonial station. There were few passengers, until a shoppers' special came in with two dozen or so suburbanites, and something else was missing. But what?

Then it hit me: the traditional stink, that all-pervading aroma interchangeable between lines, was missing here. Gone was the bitter, yet perennially sweet smell — and taste — of burnt coal. Progress, of course, but still ...

I am an admitted romantic about "dee-po's," as the elders of my youth called them. Even the meanest little clapboard station house can conjure up for me ghostly hordes of people on the move ... coming or going for business or pleasure ... in peace and war ... happy or sad, gay or tearful ... sorrowful departures, glad reunions ... and a homecoming that warm spring of 1947 for row on row of sealed, gray steel coffins neatly aligned outside a prairie station.

All of these mental pictures came flooding back under the great Moorish dome. And would it be too fanciful, now, to add to the "gallery" the generation-spanning midnight crowds of wildly exuberant or glumly downcast football rooters passing here across the years after the big game in Berkeley or Palo Alto?

The big, round platform clock showed 10:10 on its Roman numerals, almost departure time. "Get your magazine quick, love, and buy me a morning paper!"

Steam hissed snakily from pipes rising between greasy ties, exactly as it has almost since time immemorial. Nonchalant conductors and porters stood before open train doors and the word was — "Los Angeles car right here. Sit anywhere you like."

Entering the heavy steel car was, for me, like abruptly going back in time aboard one of H. G. Wells' wondrous machines. Except for its colors, this boxy coach, restrooms bunched with water tap at

THE VENUS OF WILLISTON
A RECENT DISCOVERY IN THE MATERIAL CULTURE OF THE PLAINS

By Gil Bailey

It was that last hour before dawn, a time of quiet and little stirrings as families rose and coffee perked. A light fog touched the tops of the hills, still green from winter rains, and drifted through the subdivisions of Southern California, and even the freeways were almost silent, all but deserted.

The sun was not due until 6:51 a.m., and as the clock ticked past 6 a.m. and the second hand started its sweep toward 6:01, the 10 million-plus people of the Los Angeles Basin were at peace, if not content, secure in their illusions. The land, marked too, but only for the moment.

At the Los Angeles County Olive View Hospital a doctor treated a man in the emergency room as a series of stories of that building, dedicated but the month before, rose white and striking, bound together in concrete and steel, and on the floors above patients fought for their lives under respirators. At the older Spanish style San Fernando Veterans Hospital, but two miles away, in a place of beauty, an emphysema patient awoke early and walked to a nearby building for a cup of coffee. Coffee is recommended for emphysema patients.

Two men, driving swiftly down the freeway, passed underneath an overpass and within a second would be out in the clear again.

There is no line on the geologic charts yet, and there had been no evidence of any line on the surface.

There are, however, thousands of such lines on the charts of California, charts showing earthquake faults, and there are such lines running all through his area, the San Fernando Valley and the San Gabriel Mountains.

— But a new fault, an undiscovered fault, the pressing of one force, deep underneath the earth, against another force, was at

At 6:00:21 a.m., Feb. 9, 1971, those forces created such tensions that the earth could not withstand them and the earth broke. For about 15 seconds, some became but one story, with the lower floor squashed into but 18 inches of torn rubble.

The earth had gone up and down, and then twisted, all in a few seconds.

In the emergency room the clock stopped at 6:00:53, 11 seconds after the report of the first shock. The doctor and his patient crawled out of a small hole and stood outside, not even knowing how they got out.

The respirators failed and nurses started on the shaken floors above to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation as lights, heat and phones went dead. One nurse continued to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation until her patient reached a hospital by helicopter, but two patients without the life-giving mechanical help died. A hospital employee was killed by falling concrete, but the death toll was relatively low.

"It would have been 150 to 200 people two hours later. The clinics and the administrative offices, all empty, would have been filled," said Don Advant, hospital administrator.

At San Fernando the patient with emphysema may or may not have gotten his coffee which would have helped him breathe. He died under the rubble, along with 45 others — 10 hospital employees and 36 patients killed as a result of the quake.

The worst of the damage was in buildings constructed before 1935 at San Fernando, but Olive View had been built in 1970.

Underpasses crumpled, and two men, a split second from open air, died as their truck was buried.

The victims, living and dead, really didn't know what had happened.

"I walked down the ceiling and walls," said a patient at the Veterans Administration Hospital. "I woke up and the building was down."

"All I could see was dust," said a guard at that hospital.

Joseph Heavey, recovering from a heart attack, was acting director at San Fernando. His home on the grounds was damaged, but as he rolled from bed the heart and the damage were forgotten. He would work for 58 hours straight in the rescue efforts, ignoring orders to leave.

His hospital was cut off, no lights, no heat, no communications.

Heavey sent his son for help, but help did not arrive until a Los Angeles City Fire Department helicopter spotted the damage at 7:23 a.m.

At Olive View fireman arrived more quickly, as soon as they could pry open the doors of their fire house.

More than 60 persons died as a result of those few seconds of shaking, but along with the 60 victims a

The illusion that Southern California, or any part of this state, is ready for "the great earthquake" died at 6:00:42 Tuesday, Feb. 9, 1971.

"Obviously the Los Angeles building code is not adequate," structural engineer Henry Degenkolb of San Francisco told a congressional investigating committee a week later. He was referring to Olive View.

Another illusion died. Modern building codes will not prevent large-scale damage.

Destroyed freeway

that key power station is back in operation.

The civilized skin of the Los Angeles Basin was ripped and torn apart in the San Fernando Valley, and the veins of civilization, carrying light and heat and water, were severed.

A third illusion was destroyed. Preparations for an emergency were not adequate.

There were no communications at San Fernando Veterans Hospital. Only mobile, truck and car radios, were available at Olive View.

at the same earthquake hearing.

A fourth illusion became a casualty. Old buildings have not been rebuilt to meet earthquake standards.

Even California schools, under the requirements of the Field Act, resulting from the Long Beach earthquake, have not all been repaired.

The scientists have some specific suggestions to get California ready for that "great earthquake" which is coming, which may be overdue.

"I don't go along with predicting earthquakes, I just accept in California that we are going to have earthquakes," said Dr. Bruce Bolt of UC Berkeley.

Public buildings, hospitals, schools, administrative buildings, should be constructed with earthquakes in mind. Areas free of geologic hazards — and 50 yards can be the difference between life and death — should be selected. Then, newer, and tougher building codes should be enforced, the scientists said.

Degenkolb argued convincingly against "concrete frame" construction in which the walls only take earthquake shocks, pointing to Olive View and similar failures elsewhere.

Instead, structural steel should be used throughout, tying walls to ceilings and to floors, combining the strength of all the structural features of the building.

"Even so," Degenkolb said, "I call buildings earthquake resistant, not earthquake proof."

Backup systems for lights, heat, water and communications are needed, "earthquake resistant ones."

Probably most if not all of Los Angeles' high rise buildings will survive, but if an earthquake hits during the business day, then falling glass and other damage will take many lives, the scientists said.

"Thousands," said one.

The old advice to stand in a doorway, or get under a desk, is still good personal advice. Out in front things are falling.

More research is needed — and more instruments to measure ground motion. One of the reasons, the Feb. 9 quake was the most intense ever recorded was because so few quakes have been measured. However, earthquake research has been cut back in California because of tight state budgets and has never been lot of illusions died too.

Property damage may reach $1 billion, but the heavy shaking was restricted to a relatively small area. In a larger earthquake, a great earthquake, one of magnitude 8 or more on the Richter Scale, the same ground motion would be felt over hundreds of square miles. Multiply the casualties and the damage by 10 or even 100, or perhaps a 1,000, and the magnitude of a great earthquake can be estimated.

overpasses, a dozen or so, and a modern, but ruined power station, a key link in the Pacific Coast Intertie which carries electricity from British Columbia to San Diego and east to El Paso and Denver, further pierced any illusion of safety. The widespread and relatively long-term absences of water, sewers, gas and electricity from the earthquake-hit areas pointed out what can happen in the future.

Highway engineers estimate it will take three years to repair the damage. It may be 18 months before

Both the regular and the emergency power were destroyed.

Even worse, the highway system needed to bring help was itself a casualty.

Hospital personnel at both Olive View and San Fernando remained calm, when calm seemed impossible, and risked their own lives to save as many patients as possible. But heroism isn't enough.

"There are 50,000 to 100,000 old buildings in California which would fail under such a shock," said George Housner of Caltech a priority item in the federal budget.

"The problems are getting worse. We are getting larger cities with more people," Housner pointed out.

From the air the San Fernando Valley looked as if a malicious and capricious child had wandered through a toy city, smashing and stomping here and there.

At Olive View the torn tower leaned down over the party of congressmen and officials, and a wheel chair, half sitting in mid-air, perched on the broken end of the tower, 30 feet above the ground.

"There is a rumor that two patients were in the tower and rode it down," said Advant. "They then disappeared into the hills, running."

A row of cement benches was overturned, and the sidewalk had pushed into the sod for 18 inches as it moved.

"I don't want to work here any more," said a baker, pulled out of San Fernando 58 hours after being buried.

"At 10 a.m. we would have lost 200 people," said Heavey, at San Fernando.

"Write us, write me," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the special investigating committee, to each scientist as he made a suggestion.

In Edwards' home district of San Jose a hospital had fallen in 1906, killing more than 80 patients.

Slowly the aftershocks are expected to subside and then end, but the scientists do not believe the major shock or the aftershocks have relieved the strain on the San Andreas fault, California's major earthquake fault. In fact they may have increased tensions.

And along with all the earthquake faults marked on the maps, there are other real lines, yet undiscovered, as this one was before Feb. 9, 1971.

The strains build and build. And sooner or later they become too great and then the earth moves.

"In Southern California the historical rate of occurrences of earthquakes suggests that at least one of magnitude 6.5 or greater might be expected, on the average, every two years. In Central and Northern California, the expectation is about the same," said Dr. Bolt.

It will happen again. □

—Wood shingles or composition roofs withstand strong ground-motion well, while tile roofs add additional weight to the building and are hazards unless special structural treatment is used.

—Gas heaters and gas furnaces should be braced by steel straps to the wall. Fires can be caused by the toppling of these heavy appliances.

—Have a portable fire extinguisher in your kitchen. Turn off the gas at the junction to the house as soon as possible.

—Keep breakables in closets with the doors closed and securely latched.

He also called for making private schools earthquake resistant. Presently, they do not come under California's earthquake laws.

Dr. Bolt in addition noted that many public facilities have been built on earthquake faults.

He called for government-sponsored earthquake insurance, including proper standards for construction.

"Earthquake insurance is not an unusual practice throughout the world. New Zealand has a government insurance scheme for earthquake risk. People pay a certain amount each year for total coverage of the cost of rebuilding. The houses must be built to proper standards in the first place," he said.

The U.C. scientist pointed out that the past quake did not really test the high-rise structures in downtown Los Angeles.

"This earthquake was not far from downtown. The experience around the world is that when a major earthquake is 50 or more miles away, the duration of the long period vibrations is such that the higher buildings are the ones that suffer most shaking and not the little structures," he said. □

SAFETY TIPS

Everyone agrees: Other earthquakes, even bigger ones, are coming. They can't be stopped.

Yet, there are safety precautions which can be taken.

Dr. Bruce Bolt, director of the University of California at Berkeley's seismology station, after viewing the San Fernando Valley quake had these suggestions:

—With new housing insist on continuous reinforced concrete foundations or the equivalent. This wood frame should be bolted to the concrete.

—Sleeping areas of the house should not be under brick chimneys.

—Be wary of converting underground basements into sleeping areas. In one case a swimming pool lost all of its water and the water ran down a window and almost drowned two sleeping boys.

—Masonry homes are more dangerous and liable to irreparable damage than wood-frame houses.

Trader Sam is one of those rarities, a legend in his own time. In the little, northern California town of Soquel, his feats of financial wizardry were known to one and all; the citizens of nearby Santa Cruz were awed by his acumen and the San Francisco press relished telling each detail of every new coup by the junk dealer.

That was before two Long Beach women—Deloris Rathbun and Barbara Loftenes—set their sights on Trader Sam.

The story of how they bested the sage, old junkman hasn't been told before. It probably won't be told in the Santa Cruz-San Francisco communities since it tends to reduce Sam from super-status to just another businessman.

Trader Sam operated his Soquel junkyard for nearly 40 years, according to sources in that town. He was renowned for driving hard bargains, for getting top dollar out of all the miscellaneous junk that piled up inside and outside a huge and aging warehouse.

Deloris and Barbara own the Casa de Artesanas shop in Seaport Village at Long Beach Marina. The shop is essentially a gift store, with the wares as varied as their imaginations. They were ready to open long before the construction at Seaport Village could accommodate them but they lacked a cash register. And an ordinary, run-of-the-store register wasn't to their liking.

"I first saw the register at Trader Sam's back in September of 1969," Barbara recalled.

A self-described "inveterate junk shopper," she said she was captivated by Sam's three acres or so of spread-out junk.

"It was just a neat looking place," she said.

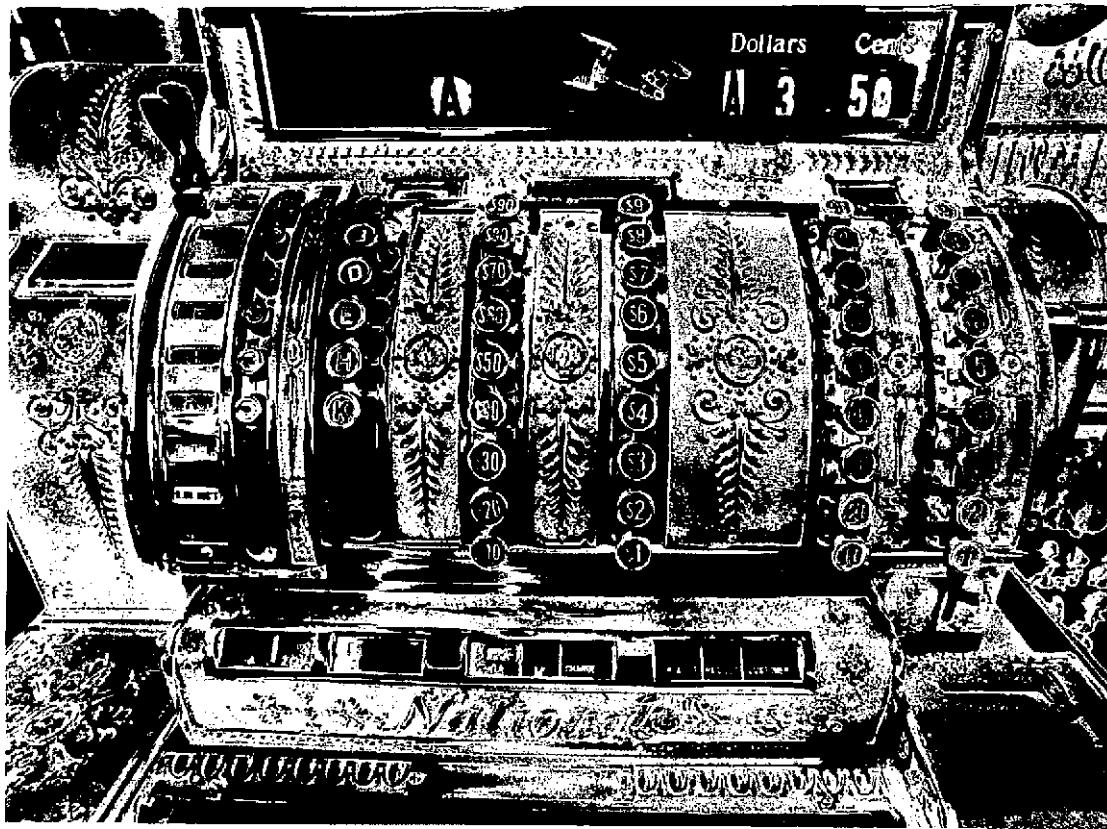

Sam welcomed her to the premises and she proceeded to prowl through most of the acreage, purchasing things like 1920s vintage school lunch milk bottles for 20 cents apiece.

"I know he thought he had a sucker," Barbara said, emitting a warm, throaty laugh. "It's all right. I got even with him."

Her vengeance came in the form of the huge cash register—now restored and perhaps more attractive than the day it was built by National Cash Register Co. shortly after the turn of the century—which occupies a central location in Casa de Artesanas.

"I found it in the corner of the big warehouse," Barbara said, "and it looked awful. The brass was all green and the wood was filthy. It was practically buried under the other junk which ran floor to ceiling and wall to wall. There was about 6-foot of paint cans stacked on top of the register."

TRADER SAM'S GOOF

Barbara made a couple of exploratory chips on the brass, convincing herself that beneath the ugly exterior was a useable—and perhaps historical—cash register. As she left with her milk bottles and some other items, she asked Sam how much he was asking for the register.

"That'll be $150," Sam told her.

The drive home to Long Beach was occupied with fantasies of restoring the cash register and her enthusiasm captured Deloris.

"I knew it was more than we wanted to pay," Deloris recalled, "but Barbara was so excited that I started getting enthusiastic, too."

Although the women decided to wait a time before making the purchase, they were forced to act in November of 1969 when Barbara's brother called from San Francisco to advise them that Trader Sam was closing up shop and retiring. The following Sunday they were advised that Sam was closing his doors for the last time at 5 p.m. the following day. Barbara piled her four children—ages four to nine—in the car and drove to Soquel where she told Sam she'd give $100 "and not one cent more" for the register. Sam snapped up the deal.

Barbara, renting a trailer, had the register loaded aboard, assembled the children and began the 400-miles-plus return trip.

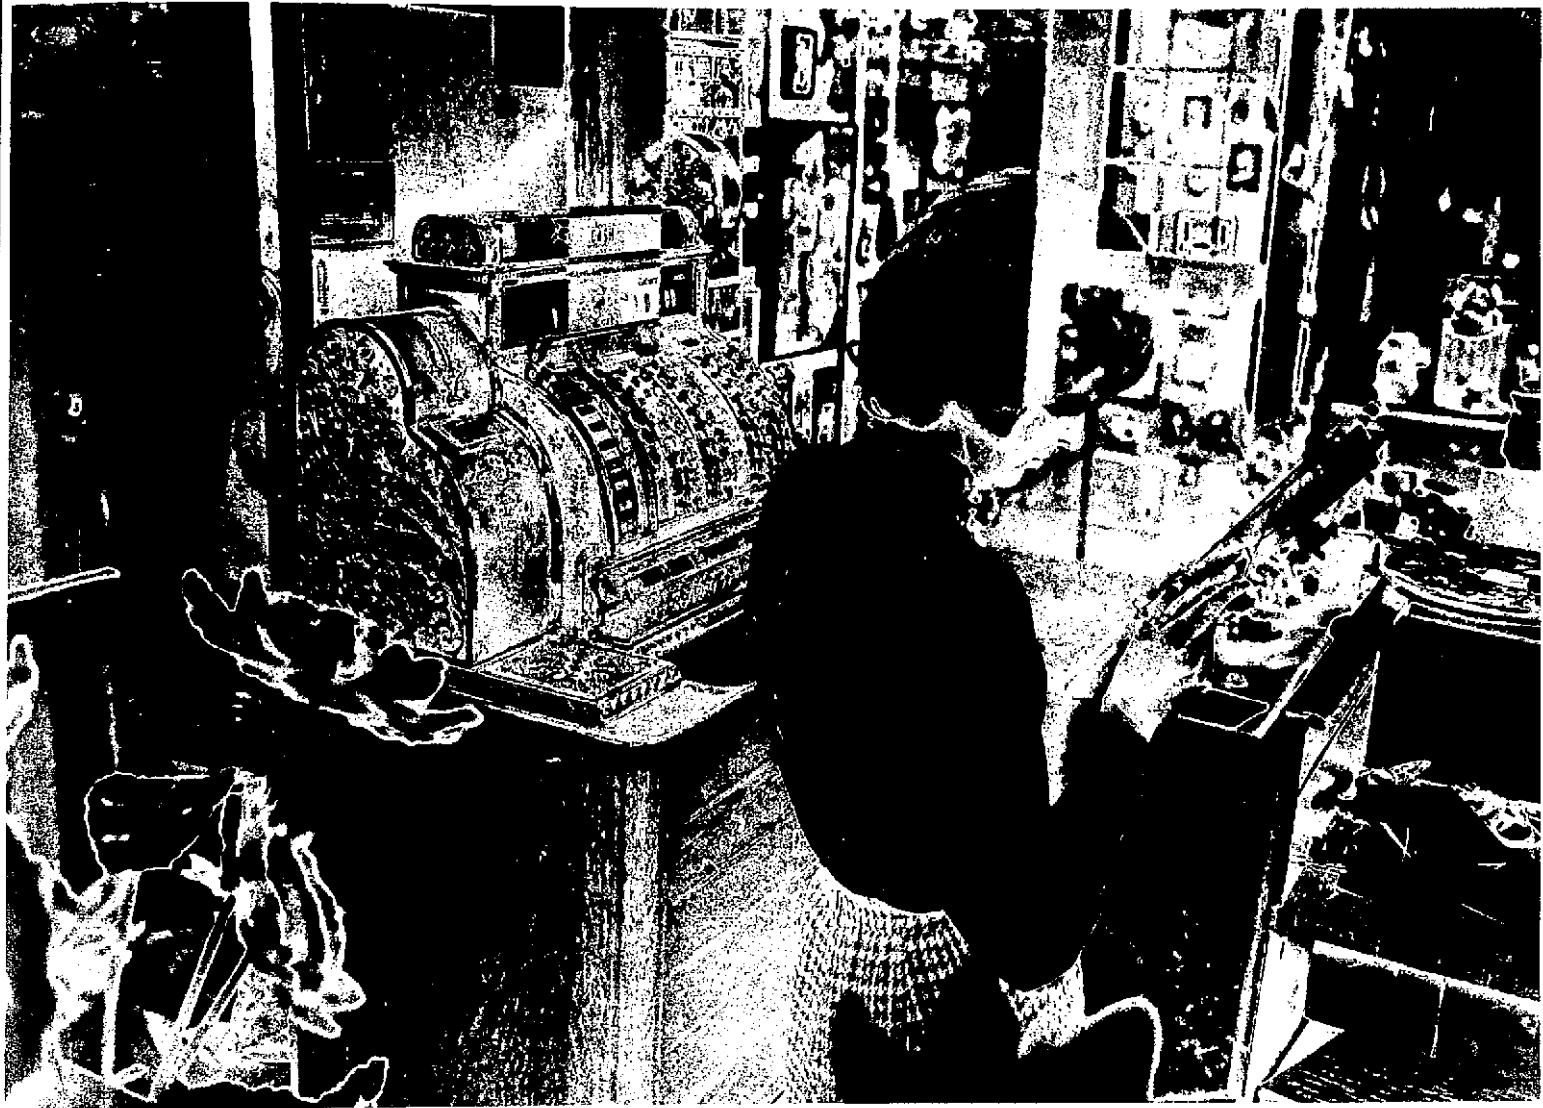

"It was the first time I had ever pulled a trailer," Barbara recalled. "I don't think I want to do it again."

All the way home I was thinking that it couldn't be worth it."

But when she took the ugly machine to Long Beach Cash Register for cleanup and repair, she learned that the venture had been worthwhile.

"There's practically none of these machines around anymore," said Ray Beck, of the Long Beach firm. "Oh, there's some around San Francisco—mostly in Gay 90s-type bars—but most of them were just thrown away. It's too bad, since the machines were really well-made. Lots of cast iron, large moving parts and a real artist's finish on both the metal and the wood."

Beck said that the machine at Casa de Artesanas was "a really beautiful machine." He said that because of the response to that machine, he's cleaning up some other old cash registers.

National Cash Register, which has a museum filled with vintage cash registers in Dayton, Ohio, said that the 62-year-old machine owned by the two women is well-preserved but isn't any world's record for oldness. Dave Russell, manager of the NCR branch in Long Beach, said that an 85-year-old cash register, resplendent in hand-carved mahogany, is on display at the Dayton museum.

"It may not be the oldest of our cash registers around," said Russell. "The company is 88 years old and there may be some of the very first ones working somewhere."

Still, he said, the model now in the Casa de Artesanas is a good example of the craftsmanship of a bygone era and probably worth far more than the $3,600 to $3,700 which most NCR registers cost today.

Russell also filled in some of the lore about cash registers with emphasis on the 10-drawer model owned by Deloris and Barbara. The first six drawers are lettered A, B, D, E, H and K. The missing letters were omitted for good reason, Russell said.

"There is no 'C' on the cash register because it might be confused with the zero," he said. The other missing letters have been abandoned for the same reason, he added. The "F" might be confused with the "E" and the "G" could be mistaken for a zero. The "I" could be identified as a "1" and—well, there are reasons galore for the action taken by the NCR people 88 years ago.

Strangely, the 62-year-old cash register which currently decorates Seaport Village's Casa de Artesanas doesn't seem to suffer from the missing keys. Nor, say its owners, does it suffer from a lack of electricity.

"We ring up every sale on it," said Deloris.

"We've had no problems with it," added Barbara.

Except one.

"We've had to move the darn thing," Barbara confided, "because customers spent so much time looking at it they didn't bother to look at the gifts we're selling."

The girls are having a special information sheet on the cash register printed so they can hand one to each inquisitive customer instead of spending the time explaining—for the umpteenth time—how it was made in 1909 for the H. F. Levy Co. at Half Moon Bay, or how it was sold by the San Francisco Cash Register Co., or how they managed to get it repaired and operating again. There is one story, however, that they don't mind telling personally.

"I'll be glad to tell," sighed Barbara, "of how I got the thing away from Trader Sam for $100. There're not too many people around who've beat that guy at his own game."

the front, was identical with one — whose details are indelibly etched in memory — on which I rode off to an old war half a lifetime past.

Sharing it with Marcia and me that bright, cool, rain-washed morning were a young family on an outing, a few older folks, a modishly dressed youngster. No more than 10 in a vehicle capable of comfortably seating 50 or so.

At 10:15, precisely as the now-abbreviated timetable promises, the southbound Coastal Daylight (an awkward, unpretty name for a train) moved slowly, smoothly from the station and through adjoining switching yards. Even older — and newer — rolling stock filled the tracks, and look, over there — an old-time silver king's private car parked forlornly in a distant corner.

As the train rolled around a bend and out of the yard, another apparition, or rather two of them, appeared from the past. An elderly conductor and brakeman of almost equal years materialized to go through the time-honored ritual of punching our tickets.

It was no effort for these men to stand erect without weaving or bobbing to the rhythm of a train bucketing along over an uneven roadbed. For these trails ran smooth and true, unlike those of long ago that carried a wide-eyed boy to Kansas City on the trip when first I observed this rite.

One of those intensely personal inner dialogues between me and me took place while I stared almost rudely at the white-haired men in stiff-billed caps and undertaker-black suits.

Q. How can these men, today, be the same exact, identical age as they were when you first saw them nearly 40 years ago?

A. That's easy, stupid; they've been here all along, growing up on the railroad in those years when you turned to car and plane. Now you're back, briefly anyway, and they're still here — growing older, just like you.

Very disconcerting.

its hills hove into view. Green, brilliant green, was the dominant color here — at least on those open spaces remaining.

Next the line of bedroom communities filling the lower peninsula popped up, each of them with presently empty asphalt-covered lots beside the depots and uniform markers proclaiming "Park here all day — 25 cents." Two freeways taking form in the area raised a question whether suburban commuters are indeed parking cheaply and hopping a train into the city, or whether most still are out battling workaday traffic on El Camino Real.

Victorian architecture, some examples moulted, others remaining neat and well-kept, sprout beside the tracks as they run through Millbrae, San Mateo, Burlingame, Redwood City and Palo Alto. A few lonely groves of eucalyptus still line the tracks, further strengthening an impression that this part of the country remains essentially "old," or at least prewar, California.

Southland-style apartments "grow" in rows near bustling San Jose, with the inevitable turn-of-the-century stuff not too far away. Our train stopped there an hour away from San Francisco, surrounded on an elevated track by a dark "forest" of out-of-service passenger cars.

Open country, only semi-urbanized that is, came just south of San Jose. Beyond its city limits was a deep ravine which on this particular day was running high with water.

The train slowed for a trestle crossing, inched past a long-abandoned S.P. gondola twisted crazily on a bank. Strutting proudly atop this rusted wreck, a small boy in jeans imperiously waved. "Get out of my territory, podner," he seemed to say.

El Camino Real again. U.S. 101 parallels the tracks here, with lined up junkyards, oil storage tanks, open hills, filling stations, hamburger joints. Unlovely urban sprawl.

Turning sharply, the train moved into hilly farm country. Zorro could leave his mark here, Black Bart might be just over the next crest holding up the noontime stage.

Herefords and Black Angus steers were grazing peacefully on these hillsides as we went to lunch in one of latter-day railroading's less happy innovations.

Perhaps somewhere in this troubled land formal dining cars still roll, complete with heavy silver and linens, carpeting, a single tiny rosebud gracing each table. But wherever such amenities still exist, they definitely are not hooked onto the Coastal.

Instead, the buffet car is all chrome and vinyl, lined with ordinary vending machines dispensing coffee, sandwiches, pie, soup, milk. A hefty handful of silver is required to buy lunch for two.

But it was pleasant to peacefully sit in a near-deserted car, dallying over pie and coffee, staring thoughtfully through large picture windows at the passing scene:

The withered remnants of an orange grove — this far north? — with shriveled fruit, obviously not worth the picking, drooping from bent branches. And grape arbors, worn brown barns, the stigmata of pre-industrial California still abound in these mid-coast valleys — but for how long?

Off to the right a tiny country cemetery, its heavy, weathered stone crosses sagging wearily. This is a country dotted with similar old

The Big Leap

If you were shown a hole in the ground, one foot square, then blindfolded and told to jump over it, you would probably do your best to jump twice as far as necessary to keep from falling in. Asking an average contractor, not specializing in kitchens, to do your job is a similar situation. By being blindfolded to unfamiliar situations, some contractors will jump the price twice as much, in order to cover any unknown details that might arise; thereby keeping himself from going in the hole financially.

By dealing with a kitchen specialist you eliminate the blindfold and make your job a good step forward instead of a giant leap into "Kitchen Brinkmanship."

burying grounds, usually quite small and well-kempt.

A feeling of extraordinary well-being came over me with the last sip of coffee. What a fine way to spend a Saturday! I thought. Time slows to a proper human pace in this self-contained world; I am totally relaxed for the first time in how long. Good for the nerves, too.

Salinas, 1:45 p.m., and a late-morning fog still shrouds nearby hilltops. This is the heartland of John Steinbeck's country, and idly, irreverently, I wondered whether the luxurious brothel he described so lovingly in East of Eden still stands near the vintage town's vintage depot. Couldn't be!

And, now, the valley the novelist knew so well, its broad fields, protected by high hills, green with growing things. King City at its lower end and the train barely slowed.

On the right, a seemingly deserted Army post, unchanged, frozen, since World War II, its two-story "king's row" barracks and mess-halls echoing in my inner ear with the old cry, "You won't like it here!" Camp Roberts, Calif., somehow preserved against time's inroads like a fly trapped forever in amber.

From open country the train veered into the hills, a long, tortuous stretch. The northbound Coastal, which departed Los Angeles at 8:30 a.m., and its southerly sister meet and pass at 2:27 near Paso Robles.

Nearing journey's mid-point, a mere 29 passengers occupy a four-car train with a comfortable capacity of 225-250. "People just don't want to ride with us no more," a crew member sadly observed.

Through semi-wild hills like those of South Wales, the train smoothly turns and twists, switchbacking around Los Pobles Men's Colony, past a Cal Poly campus, into San Luis Obispo. A new crew replaces the original and the train races southward across open country past Guadalupe, through a dense but small eucalyptus forest toward the sea.

A stark sign beside the tracks now entering dune country is the first indication of something different ahead. "Photography prohibited by Order of the Commanding General," it said. This was Vandenberg AFB, starting point of the Pacific Missile Range.

Unlike Camp Roberts a score or so miles back, Vandenberg gave little visible evidence of G.I.-ness. A few radio towers and roads were all until the first of several gantries, cranes for hoisting rockets into firing position, came into view on distant hillsides. A most unmilitary setting for the ultimate weapon ...

At last, the sea: a late-afternoon sun only a few degrees above the horizon shafts through a gathering smoky haze to light a rocky, unspoiled beach — ironically, on the military reservation.

Offshore stands a small sailboat — and at least two oil drilling rigs. Man's other works are inland here and, for a brief moment, only train and tracks betray the wild naturalness of the setting.

Below, at the foot of steep and rocky cliffs, a curling sandy beach is clean and white — again, for a brief moment. Oil scum became too apparent in a mile or so along with accompanying dead seaweed and algae.

Pt. Concepcion lighthouse — four cottages, radio station and light, a lonely place to live and work. More beach below, on-again, off-again beset by oil.

Darkness and the thrum-thrum of steel wheels on a high trestle above Gaviota Beach. To the left, auto lights reflect from roadside markers on a parallel stretch of El Camino Real.

Troubled Isla Vista and Goleta were ahead when the acrid stench of something burning filled the coach. It evaporated as quickly as it came, with the source still a mystery.

After a brief stop in Santa Barbara's early 20th-Century station, we were away on the final coastal run to Ventura. And inland through the various valleys, making up a few lost minutes running time, pulling into Los Angeles' Union Station exactly as scheduled, at 8:05 p.m.

Trains still are a great way to travel, Marcia and I agreed as we hiked through Los Angeles' large, ornate and nearly empty station.

"Would you do it again?" I asked.

"Sure," she replied, "but isn't it a shame they don't run night sleepers both ways? There are a lot of families, north and south, who would weekend in the other city if they had a 'mobile motel' like a train to help cut travel costs."

I could only agree on both points. □

Lamb is lionized in the spring. It's plentiful and at its delicious best.

Lamb as the symbol of a renewal of life goes back to early Biblical times. According to an ancient Macedonian proverb, "Easter without lamb cannot be." This philosophy is still strong today.

Feast your family on a luscious roast leg of lamb. Rub the meat with olive oil, lemon and garlic, Greek-style, and roast till done to your liking. Most people like lamb more done than beef — lamb shouldn't be rare or bloody. But it's good and juicy if a tiny bit of pink remains in the center.

We sauced our Easter lamb with the cherry sauce we like so well on ham. Cherry pie filling from a can is laced with lemon and brandy. But for traditionalists, we include old-fashioned Hot Mint Sauce.

When it comes to a lamb leg, select either American or French style. A French leg has the meat trimmed from the end of the bone and is often decorated with a paper frill after roasting — chefs love it.

An American leg has the bone cut short and the meat and skin wrapped over the end to make a compact roast — as in our picture.

The size of the leg will depend on how many you plan to serve, but count on about $\frac{3}{4}$ pound per person.

EASTER LAMB

1 leg of lamb (size is up to you)

Olive oil

$\frac{1}{2}$ lemon

2 garlic cloves, cut in half

1 recipe Brandied Cherry or Hot Mint Sauce

Rub leg of lamb with oil, then with cut side of lemon and garlic cloves. (If you like, insert another clove or two of garlic in the meat by cutting small slits in the meat and sliding garlic in on the knife.)

Sprinkle meat with salt and pepper — preferably coarse pepper. Place leg fat side up on rack in shallow roasting pan. Insert meat thermometer in thickest part but not touching fat or bone. Roast in slow oven (325 degrees) 25 to 35 minutes per pound or till thermometer reads 165 for lamb that's slightly pink, 175 for medium, and 180 for well done.

Let lamb rest 10 to 15 minutes for easier carving. Allow about $\frac{3}{4}$ pound uncooked weight per person. Serve with Brandied Cherry or Hot Mint Sauce.

Brandied Cherry Sauce

1 can (1 pound, 5 ounces) red cherry pie filling

$\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon cloves (optional)

1 tablespoon lemon juice

2 tablespoons brandy

$\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{2}$ cup hot water

Combine pie filling, cloves, lemon and brandy. Stir in just enough water to make a nice sauce consistency (different brands of fillings vary in thickness.) Heat just to boiling, stirring gently so you don't mash cherries. Serve with lamb or ham.

Hot Mint Sauce

2 tablespoons sugar

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup water

$\frac{1}{4}$ cup vinegar

1 jar (10 ounces or about 1 cup) mint jelly or apple-mint jelly

$\frac{1}{2}$ cup finely chopped fresh mint leaves or 2 tablespoons dried crushed mint

1 tablespoon lemon juice

Combine sugar, water and vinegar; simmer 5 minutes. Stir in jelly, beating to blend; heat and stir till jelly is melted.

Add mint and lemon and heat through. Serve hot with lamb.

WELLS REPORT

The Tourists Are Coming

Even in the winter, Morro Bay is crowded on Saturday nights. All afternoon the campers roll down Hwy. 1 from San Luis Obispo. By 6 p.m. most camp and trailer sites have been taken and by 8 p.m. the motels are full.

The lobby of the Golden Tee is crowded with pimply teen-agers, the girls in party dresses, the boys in white coats and black ties; there is a high school formal in one of the banquet rooms. In the bar, a trio is playing old standards from the 1930s and 40s. The tables are filled with white haired couples waiting for tables in the dining room. Morro Bay is to the San Joaquin Valley what Long Beach once was to Iowa — a place to retire amongst old friends. In the more modest restaurants near the pier, the senior citizens wave and call to each other much as they do in the downtown Long Beach cafeterias.

But Morro Bay and the whole central California coast is booming and changing.

Until the late 1950s, it was a reluctant resort with few facilities. Its business was commercial fishing and farming. Fishermen and farmers get along well with each other but are standoffish with tourists. Then the state opened the Hearst Castle as a tourist attraction and the inundation began.

Suddenly Morro Bay is competing with Santa Barbara and Monterey for the elderly white-haired couple in the El Dorado, the middle-aged paunchy fisherman and his lean, sun-wrinkled wife in the camper, the shorthaired, young management trainee honeymooning with his new bride in their new Toyota.

The really young have not yet discovered Morro Bay. The employed young are clustered in their secondhand telephone company vans at El Portal and along Rincon. The flower children are spreading their bedrolls in the meadows of the Big Sur. The motorcycle low riders are trading icy eyes with sheriff's officers and rangers at Lake Isabella.

Morro Bay still has some of its rustic charm. A local want ad seeks, "College girl, share bath and entry. Room and board, $90. Room for horse $10 extra."

And in the Bulletin, "The Weekly Leader of the Central Coast," Harold Wieman writes about a trip to San Francisco:

"It is nice to be home in Morro Bay after a weekend in the San Francisco traffic. I spent the whole two days there in the wrong lane. And after getting home, I have been down on Main Street several times to admire our two flashing red stop lights. They are beautiful in their simplicity. They convey a simple forthright message that anyone can understand."

But the rustic simplicity is hardening into a salable commodity. The tourists are coming, crowded out of Santa Barbara, Big Sur, Monterey, Santa Cruz, San Francisco and Yosemite.

The Sun, "Your Home Town Newspaper," reports that a recent meeting of the Morro Bay Planning Commission was taken up mostly by applications for new restaurants. The commissioners were not adverse to new restaurants, but they wanted assurances that each one would have enough off-street parking.

If Morro Bay is booming, nearby Harmony is still declining charmingly. The Hwy. 1 expressway has bypassed it, marking its existence only with a sign and an arrow.

The most prominent building in beautiful downtown Harmony is the old Harmony Valley Creamery. Here it was once in the first half of this century that W. R. Hearst would stop to pick up fresh butter, cheese and milk on his way to La Cuesta Encantada. Here Rudolph Valentino, too, sometimes would stop with a raven-haired actress named Pola Negri to purchase bread and cheese for a picnic amidst the lupins and poppies of spring.

The old creamery is falling in. Part of the roof is gone. The habitable portion houses the U.S. Post Office, Harmony, Calif., 93435. June Tartaglia has been postmaster here since 1940. The creamery folded long since. Black Angus and Charolais have replaced Jerseys and Guernseys on the green tortoise-shell hills.

The quiet of Harmony, emphasized by the barking of a lone small dog and the pawing of a shaggy pony, is a refreshing contrast to urban California. It is even a refreshing contrast to tourist-heavy Morro Bay.

But the quiet is deceptive.

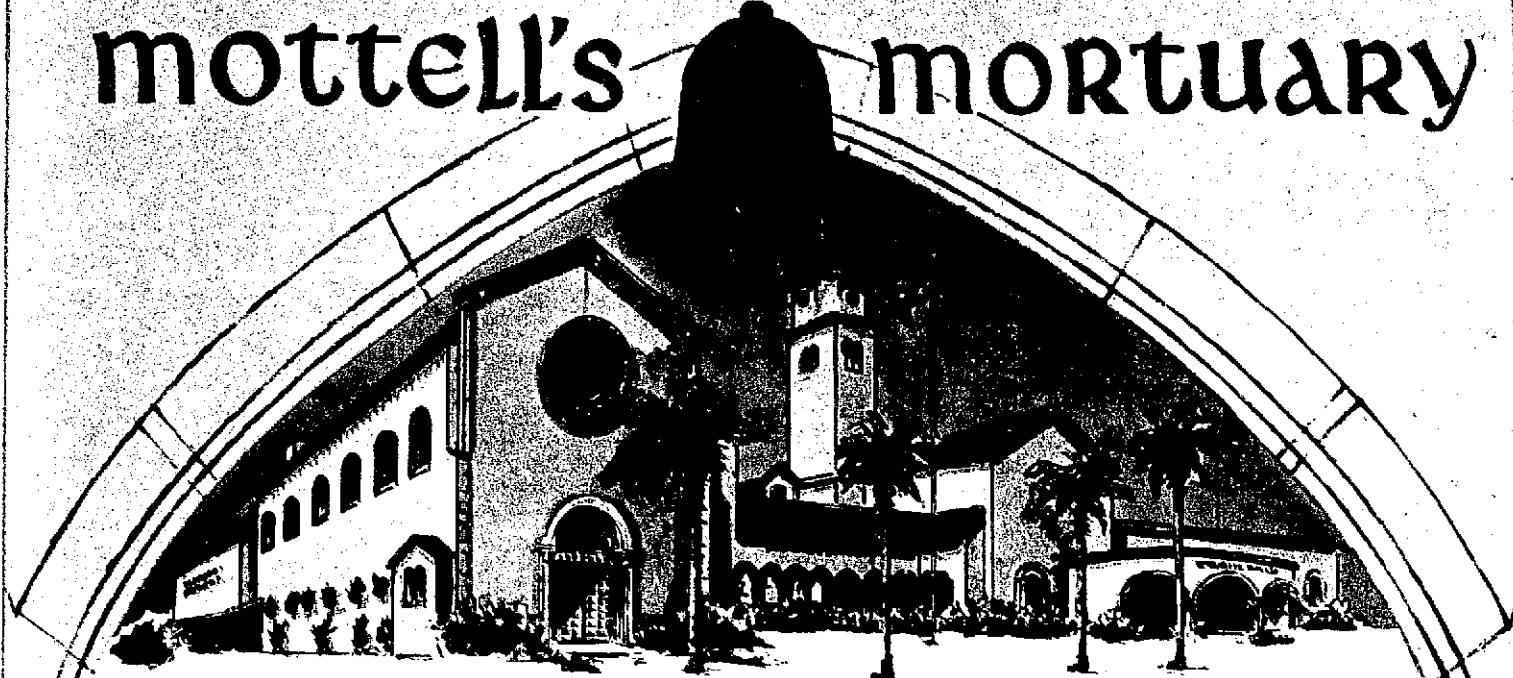

Paul Fields operates a cabinet shop in Harmony. There is not too much call for cabinet work here, but Fields and his partner, Ralph Casper, have other plans.

Last June they bought Harmony — all two acres of it and six of the seven buildings. They want to restore the old buildings as gift shops and antique stores. In their dreams, the old creamery, now renovated, fronts on a cobblestone mall surrounded by shops where tourists browse as they wait for their children to return from their ride on a small railway, "The Milky Way."

mottell's mortuary

Mottell's offers distinction without extravagance . . .

You Should Know . . . But Do You?

If you have to act for the family someday in making a funeral arrangement, at best you find yourself in a difficult situation. Even more so, . . . if the occasion was sudden . . . or happened at some distance from home.

With some knowledge of where to start . . . what to look for . . . how to proceed . . . the load is considerably lightened. It is much easier to retain perspective . . . easier, too, to avoid unnecessary detail and possible overspending.

We invite your inquiry in advance of actual need . . . with no obligation on your part.

"MOTTELL'S . . . One of America's most beautiful"

A BEAUTIFUL MEMORY

A service at Mottell's assures both a fitting tribute to the loved one, and a consoling memory for the family. Also . . . your family and your friends will appreciate your selection of a conveniently located mortuary . . . so easy to reach from any part of the greater Long Beach area.

SAFARIS FOR GOODIES

Through darkest Africa with bicycles to barter goes Boyd Hamlin, great white hunter and owner of the African Art Center in Laguna Beach. The veldt veteran hasn't given up the hunt for big game, but simply extended his safaris to include folk art collecting.

The nucleus of the local collection began with the Vincent Mark, M.D., accumulation. Dr. Mark decided a residency in medicine would be a full-time commitment but allowed his African art to remain in the shop now owned by Hamlin.

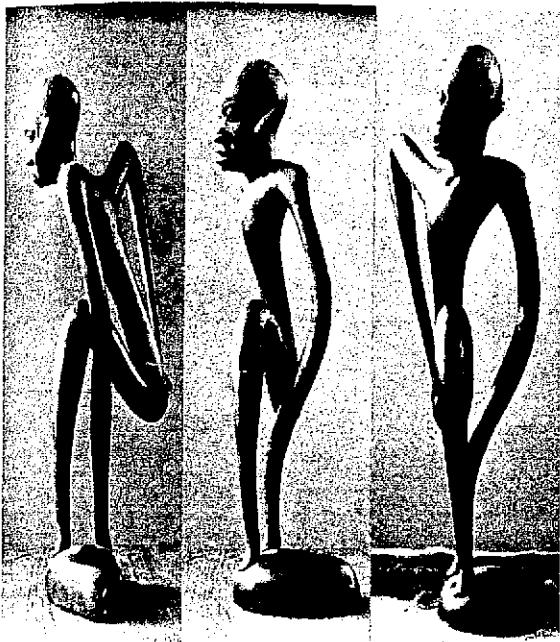

The gallery-museum provides an experience in cultural understanding and the owner encourages visitors and questions. Hamlin responds to inquiries from schools and unhesitatingly invites classes to visit the gallery. He is the resident expert in African authentication at UCLA and writes competently on the art of the African continent.

The largest collection of Makonde black ebony carvings from Tanzania can be seen at the center. Some of the sculptures may be purchased while others form the museum collection. The carvings are particularly valuable since it is becoming increasingly difficult to bring out artifacts from the African continent. All removals must be state approved and usually are released only if the source is cultural enlightenment.

The handcrafted forms are developed either in representational or symbolic manner with three themes always in evidence — a bird defining infinity, a snake meaning fertility and earth mother symbolized with a bowl or cup. All themes, however, are based on the man's relationship with his gods.

According to the African expert, the west coast of that continent is more sophisticated while the eastern portion has less ritual. Both influence the artistic output. Each form is the artist's concept and may be influenced by addiction to the sisal hemp.

INTERIOR BOUTIQUE
ELLEN KREC

Ebony or ivory carvings are the mainstay of the local collection, although striking examples of baskets, drums, lutes and masks are also in evidence. Some oil paintings and water colors also are imported and there is a recent transition from the representational painting to the geometry of color appreciated on today's art scene. It would appear the artist, Gustav Ntiforo, was susceptible to current trends but the paintings are actual copies of the Ghanaian home embellishments.

Some contemporary design is noted in the African imports, but generally the art is a repeat of the fetish figure or functional mask which commonly is used to pass on the history of each tribe.

The antiquity from Africa is a rarity with most less than 100 years old. Deterioration is rapid in the humid weather and termites are plentiful and destructive. Hamlin, however, has been fortunate to find some choice pieces of art dating back several hundreds of years. The Baule mask, for instance, is a product of early Christian influence and the group of four masks is used to relate the story of the prodigal son.

Lush Uganda and Kenya, both with lovely pastoral countryside, are Hamlin's preferences for study and collecting. From these areas comes the unusual group of passport heads. Each carved head varied in size according to tribal status, with the chief's requiring two men to transport. The purpose of the passport was to enable the tribes to travel with ease, much the same as today's passport book allows travel between countries. Another unusual collection is gold weights. These decorative counterbalances may be as delightful as the bronze porcupine or as small and ornate as the medal-type often used in jewelry making.

Hamlin admits he also imports some "hotel art" for comparison. This souvenir type generally is the most popular with the tourist who becomes acquainted with the fertility figure, the fabric, caftan and baskets. Although the familiar art is comforting to the traveler, when he compares it to the fine quality folk art from the interior, the enlightenment is swift.

Cicirization was initiated into the African tribes during the 17th century to deter slave trading. The encouragement of scarring became a decorative force and eventually was used to embellish masks.

Battle shields are necessary, ornate and heavy, weighing up to 40 pounds, indicating the strength of the warrior or at least short wars from exhaustion. The shields used in ceremonies are somewhat lighter but no less decorative.

Although Hamlin enjoys the safaris and has trophies to spare, he says the imported furs today are of poor quality because the animals have been victims of the poachers. The cost of a safari reaches nearly $25,000 and is state controlled. Only animals of certain types and age may be hunted and with specified equipment. The meat must be donated to the tribes and an elephant, for instance, will feed one tribe for a year. Few furs are exported since Africa is ecologically aware with strong punishment for the offenders of the law.

Lutes made from boa skin and ivory, wood and gourd xylophones, leather drums are African imports for the music lover. Smoothly sophisticated sisal baskets are woven tightly enough to hold a hair-raising beverage similar to beer called Pombe — for those who like the exotic possibilities. The art center also has deeply carved representational columns of ebony — the family totem.

Short-range plans for the Africophile include a book on animals and the hunt and another on African art. Longer-range plans for the art center will mean a quad of related shops and an authentic restaurant, just in case the thirst for knowledge results in a hunger for African food. □

You know what happiness is? Happiness is a steak of beautiful halibut from the cold blue water off Canada or Alaska. Happiness is the way the chef grills that thick steak at Anderson's Tally Ho restaurant, 5829 Lakewood Blvd., Lakewood.

Happiness is the pride displayed by the waiter as he delivers the hot platter to the table. Happiness is the crisp slivered almonds atop the halibut and two little glass cups on the platter. One cup contains rich, creamy tartar sauce; the other is filled with fresh cole-slaw with a tangy dressing.

Happiness is also the expression on the wide-open mouth of the person fortunate enough to partake of that heavenly slice of sea food. Happiness is also the size of the check — a moderate $3.50 for a dinner including a big bowl of relishes, steaming soup or chilled salad with croutons and chopped egg; fresh baked potato, hot cheesebread and beverage.

Long a landmark on Lakewood Boulevard just north of South Street, Anderson's Tally Ho is an outstanding British-style inn with an outstanding staff of chefs, European-trained waiters and bartenders who are proud of their high standards of professionalism. The manager and host is Bernie Moskalenko, a charming blond European with great knowledge of all the dining out arts.

BERNIE MOSKALENKO

Anderson's has splendid continental sauces, another mark of excellence, ranging from bearnaise and Stroganoff to Italian and orange creations. The dinner choices are many, ranging from roast Rockingham turkey, $3.50, to flaming chateaubriand bouquettiere for two persons, $14.50.

Priced in between are the choicest steaks (T-bones, tops, New Yorks and filets), double-cut French lamb chops, prime rib au jus, veal parmesan, veal Oscar, grenadine of beef, lobster, scampi royal, frog legs, abalone stuffed with shrimp and crab, rainbow trout, scallops, pork chops, hickory-cured ham, sauced fresh chicken livers, veal cutlets, fried chicken and roast duckling. Splendid spaghetti with meatballs are merely $2.75 on the big dinner.

Anderson's, which has upstairs banquet rooms for groups from 12 to 55, serves dinner Sundays from 3 p.m. on. Imaginative luncheons, colorful and varied, are offered Monday through Saturday, 11 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

MIKE COMMENOS
Grecian-Style Chicken

Carcatures by Larry LaVoie

"Wonderful flavor. So different for chicken. Wherever did you get this unusual recipe?"

Comments like those are heard all the time by Mike Commenos, host and owner of the Ranch House, 1600 Pacific Coast Hwy., Seal Beach. His Grecian-style roast chicken, $2.95, served Thursdays and Sundays, has become increasingly popular since it was introduced about six months ago.

Mike, born in Boston, picked up that special recipe last summer while visiting the village of Servia in the Macedonia region of northern Greece. Mike's forebears were born in that area, renowned for the robust flavors of its cooking.

Mike's ace chef, Phil Phillips, prepares the chicken in the traditional Greek way. While roasting, it is basted with olive oil, lemon juice and such herbs and spices as oregano, basil and paprika. The flavor is hearty, but not overpowering, much appreciated by the Ranch House's guests, most of whom aren't Greek.

The price includes soup du jour or Grecian salad with special cheese; baked potato or rice pilaf, garlic toast, tea or coffee and dessert of tapioca pudding, ice cream, sherbet or jello.

Mike, who has lived in California for 22 years, bought the Ranch House in 1969 and remodeled extensively and handsomely. The decor is a combination of modern with antique farm touches. It is a large place with an entertainment lounge, banquet facilities and plenty of parking area.

Each night Mike offers a dinner special at a price considerably lower than the charge for that item the rest of the week. On Sunday the special is glazed Cornish game hen stuffed with rice, $3.25. The Monday idea is tender, juicy prime rib, $2.95. On Tuesday the innovation is eastern top sirloin steak, $2.95. The Wednesday treat is Australian lobster tail, $3.95. Thursday, it's London broil, a rolled steak marinated in wine and served with mushroom sauce. Friday's choice is sea food Newburg, $3.25. On Saturday, the special is tender tournedoes of beef in a rich sauce, $3.95.

Each Sunday the Ranch House features a special $1.25 breakfast from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. It includes ham, sausage or bacon with eggs, toast and ranch-style potatoes. Fancy omelettes are served as well as other breakfast ideas.

Various luncheons, including sea foods and beef dishes, are served on week days. □

Medicine & You

By BEN ZINSER
Medical-Science Editor

In one trial, the syrup produced a "good effect" in all but two of 11 children.

Despite widespread publicity during the past several years, common household plants still pose a threat to children, according to three physicians at Creighton University school of medicine in Omaha, Neb.

One of the physicians, Dr. George D. Maragos, says that pediatricians should instruct mothers in the potential dangers of common plants.

He says there are more than 500 species of plants in the United States that are toxic for humans. Unless one is able to identify a plant, it is safer to consider it poisonous and induce vomiting in the child rather than wait and see, he contends. Many plants are quite toxic regardless of the amount eaten.

They explain that, under normal atmospheric conditions, hemoglobin, the principal oxygen transporter in the blood, is completely saturated. This means that even when more oxygen becomes available to the blood, the hemoglobin is unable to latch onto it and convey it where needed.

Meanwhile, other researchers have demonstrated in both animals and humans that pure oxygen-breathing has some adverse effects by increasing the resistance the heart must pump against. These effects are probably insignificant in normal persons but may be critical in patients with damaged hearts.

The scientists are not ready to advocate stopping oxygen administration. Yet they believe their investigation raises doubts about the rationale of this approach, and so they suggest further research in the matter.

Physical exercise performed against a background of music can be helpful to the mentally ill, according to a report from the University of Alabama.

A one-hour session of physical exercise three times a week is prescribed for adolescent and mature psychiatric patients at University Hospital, Birmingham. Background music is used.

Dr. Patrick H. Linton, chairman of the department of psychiatry, says that exercise therapy is especially beneficial for those suffering from ailments such as depression, in which emotional problems cause withdrawal from physical activity.

A compound whose main ingredient is a substance called lactulose is especially valuable in the treatment of constipation in children, reports the New Zealand Medical Journal.

The substance causes a laxative effect because of formation of lactic and formic acids in the large intestine, according to the report.

The syrup also contains lactose and galactose and is palatable, says Dr. R. T. Bush, who comments that the preparation is "especially satisfactory for use in children."

An excess of thyroid cancer is showing up as a late effect of exposure to radioactive iodine in nuclear-device fallout.

The victims are Marshallese residents of Rongelap Island who were accidentally exposed to radioactive fallout in 1954 during the testing of thermonuclear devices in the Pacific proving grounds.

Three cases of thyroid malignancy have been reported. The expected incidence in the original 64 Rongelap persons who received the most radiation would be 0.056 cases in 15 years.

Medical researchers thus call the finding a "considerable increase over the expected number of cases."

Cancer specialists say that there may be a longer latent period for induction of malignant change than sometimes thought. One researcher has reported development of thyroid cancer 40 years after radiation exposure.

Consequently, researchers say that "it may be that we are just reaching the critical period in the postradiation observations" of persons exposed to nuclear explosions.

One bright note: Although growth retardation was noted in some of the children exposed to radiation, the youngsters are responding favorably to thyroid hormone medication and showing improvement in growth.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. I understand that Gregory Peck, the Hollywood star, once studied for the priesthood and because of that fact has been chosen to play the role in his next film of a parochial school priest who makes homosexual advances to his students. Can you tell me if all or any part of this rumor is true or gossip? —Mrs. R. L. York, La Jolla, Calif.

A. As a boy enrolled in St. John's Military Academy in Los Angeles in the 1930's, Eldred Gregory Peck, 55 next month, once thought of becoming a priest. When he went off to the University of California, however, he abandoned that goal. A few weeks ago he was asked to play the role of a homosexually inclined priest in a boys school. He turned it down.

KUHL IN 1970

THE SLAP HEARD AROUND THE WORLD.

Q. Please tell me if the man slapped by Gen. George S. Patton is still living? It was such a high point of the movie.—Mrs. Roger Willey, Independence, Iowa.
A. Charles H. Kuhl, the soldier slapped by Gen. George S. Patton in a U.S. Army hospital in Palermo, Sicily, during World War II, died in Mishawaka, Ind., on Jan. 31, 1971, of a heart attack. He was a sweeper in a Mishawaka factory at the time of his death. Kuhl, who had served in the North African invasion, the invasion of Sicily, and later in the Normandy invasion, remembered that "Patton slapped me in the face with a pair of riding gloves, then kicked me in the butt. Later he apologized and said he didn't know how really sick I was and that I had been suffering from malaria."

The incident cost Patton command of the U.S. 7th Army, but he subsequently became commander of the 3rd Army which he led across France and helped defeat the Germans.

Patton was killed in an automobile accident in December, 1945. A few weeks before Kuhl died in Mishawaka, a $10 million George S. Patton Jr. Memorial Center at San Gabriel, Calif., the general's hometown, was dedicated by retired U.S. General of the Army Omar Bradley.

Said Bradley: "Whatever you think of him as a man, George was one damned good soldier."

Q. Does the FBI pay for information?—E. D., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Yes, it pays for information, also keeps informers on salary and expense arrangements.

Q. What is the source of the quotation: "Censorship reflects a society's lack of confidence in itself"?—Clarence Marcus, Bronx, N.Y.

A. It is an abbreviated version of a sentence from a judicial opinion handed down by Justice Potter Stewart of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Q. My boyfriend, an ex-GI, says that Vanessa Redgrave funds 70 GI underground newspapers throughout the world. If this is so, why should a British actress fund these American GI newspapers? —T.R., Bridgeport, Conn.

A. Vanessa Redgrave reportedly funds one underground GI newspaper, "Peace," published by American servicemen at the Mildenhall naval air facility in Great Britain. She finances that one underground four-page mimeographed newspaper because she is strongly against the war in Vietnam.

Q. Did pop singer Connie Francis marry her hairdresser?—Marlene Bernstein, Caldwell, N.J.

A. She was recently married to Izzy Marion, owner of beauty parlors in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, Nev.

CONNIE AND IZZY—SECOND MARRIAGE FOR BOTH.

Q. Adet Lin, eldest daughter of Lin Yu-tang, famous Chinese writer and scholar—was she murdered or did she commit suicide?—R. Yee, Berkeley, Calif.

A. According to police in Taipei, Adet Lin hanged herself after writing her father that she was killing herself because of loneliness.

Q. I see by the papers that Black Panther Huey Newton is living in a $650-per-month penthouse in California. How do the Black Panthers get their money? Aren't they financed by secret Communists? —R.O.P., Oakland, Calif.

A. Newton receives $2500 for lecturing at universities. His bookings are handled by Stronghold Consolidated Productions, Inc., which is located in the New York law offices of Lubell, Lubell, Fine & Schaap. David Lubell, one of the partners in the firm, was identified in 1958, in sworn Congressional testimony, as having been a Communist Party organizer at Boston-area colleges, and has been active in the National Lawyers Guild, often cited as a Communist front.

WINTHROP AND JEANETTE ROCKEFELLER

Q. Winthrop Rockefeller settled $5.5 million on his first wife, Bobo Sears, when they were divorced in 1954. How much will he settle on his present wife, Jeanette Edris Rockefeller? After all, they have been married for 15 years.—T.E.L., Little Rock, Ark.

A. At this writing the divorce is only pending and no financial settlement has been reached. Surely, it will be in the millions or enough to take care of the second Mrs. Rockefeller, 52, for the rest of her days.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Tricia Nixon stepping out with Eddie Cox, her steady escort and Harvard Law School student. She's 25, he's 24.

Dear Pam,

You've asked for the inside dope on Tricia Nixon and Eddie Cox. I don't believe in kissing and telling, but here's what I do and do not know all wrapped up in what will probably turn out to be a chaotic mumble-jumble.

Let me say quickly that I don't know whether Tricia Nixon and Eddie Cox plan to marry on June 14th.

I've heard many dates suggested, and that's probably as good a guess as any. Tricia at 25, I assume, is anxious to get married, and Eddie at 24 is anxious to finish his studies at the Harvard Law School.

As you probably know, he rents a three-room apartment at 1654 Massachusetts Avenue in Cambridge, and when Tricia flies up from Washington (accompanied by her Secret Service agent) to visit him, she stays at the Holiday Inn nearby.

WHAT FRIENDS SAY

Frequently they dine at Lincoln's Inn, an eating club for Harvard Law students. Eddie is scheduled to be graduated from Harvard Law next year, and some of his friends are sure that he will get engaged this year (Tricia is not wearing that ring for exercise) and married next. In fact, the engagement announcement is expected momentarily from the White House if it hasn't already been made.

When I first knew him, Eddie was an undergraduate at Princeton (1964-68), where he belonged to Colonial, one of the old Prospect Avenue eating clubs—they have no social fraternities at Princeton—and studied in the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs.

Eddie was also a member of ROTC at Princeton, which means he owes the Government at least a two-year hitch as a lieutenant in the Army. It's my guess that he'll probably end up behind a desk in the Judge Advocate's division or as a legal officer somewhere.

When Eddie was graduated from Princeton, he wasn't too sure of his occupational goal, so he entered the Yale Architecture School for a year. His sister, Maisie (Mary Ann), is enrolled there now. She's 25. Eddie has an older brother, Howard, 26, who took the Princeton, Columbia Law, and Harvard Business School route. Howie got married last year to Julia Dempsey of Hunting Valley, Ohio. Her father is one of the most prominent lawyers in Cleveland, a senior partner in Squire, Sanders & Dempsey.

You probably remember Julia Dempsey from Wellesley. She used to go with Strode Talbot—he's the Yale who translated and edited Khrushchev Remembers—before she went with Howie Cox.

SOCIAL FAMILY

Anyway, Edward Finch Cox comes from a proper New York social family. His old man, who still calls himself Colonel, is a partner in the New York law firm of Cox, Treanor & Shaughnessy. He was in the Air Force in World War II, and the Cox summer house on An-How-Tn-Seafield Lane in Westhampton Beach, Long Island, is lined with airplane propellers Colonel Cox acquired overseas.

The Coxes also have a croquet setup on their front lawn where we used to play in the summers.

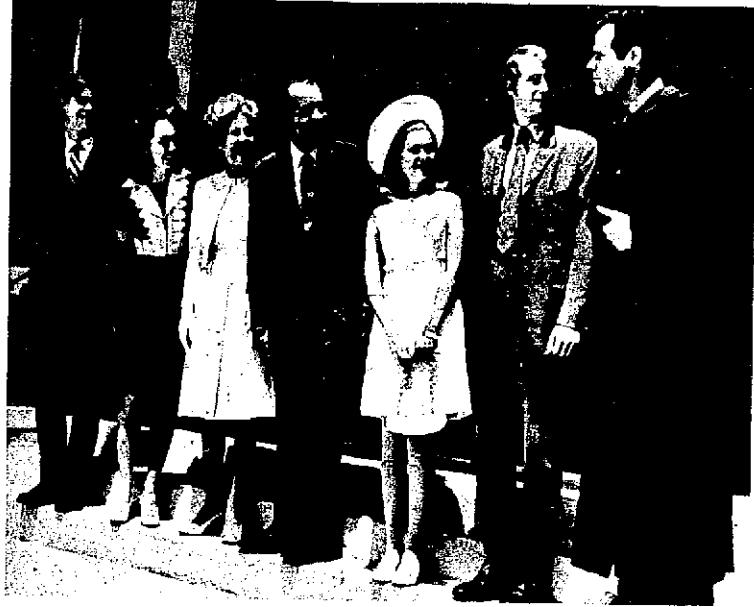

Eddie was reared in New York City where the Coxes own a brownstone-type house near the East River. It's there Tricia stops when she visits Eddie in New York over weekends. Eddie attended private schools all his life—Allen-Stevenson, a grade school; Trinity Prep from which he was graduated in 1964; Princeton, Yale, and Harvard. His heritage, background, and education are all super-duper Establishment.

If Eddie marries Tricia—and I'm fairly certain he will—she will surely be landing one of the best "catches" of all time, because he is what every schoolgirl describes as "a really nice guy." He's the type who always opens the car door for you, who walks on the outside as you amble down the street, who holds your chair for you before you sit down. He is well-bred, well-mannered, and thoroughly masculine.

ATHLETIC TYPE

He enjoys swimming, sailing, and tennis. I remember when I was 16, five or six of us girls watched him play tennis out on Long Island. We were totally snowed by him—a tall, good-looking blond who played beautifully and didn't seem to notice us. He's quite shy, with a natural reserve and dignity, and yet quite pleasant.

His family is veddy, veddy social—far more social than the Nixons, and Eddie used to make the rounds of a lot of debutante parties and all that New York nonsense. I remember one time his mother threw a house party for him and his friends at their summer house after they had all finished their spring exams. It was a delightful party because Eddie's friends were crazy, fun-loving kids, and Mrs. Cox objected to nothing, although she doesn't particularly like to see young people drinking hard liquor.

I remember Tricia Nixon at one of the Cox parties. She was driven out in a chauffeured car and spent most of her time inside the house, reading, while the rest of us were out sailing and generally having a small ball.

BEAUTIFUL SMILE

I sort of wondered then why she was so reserved and ladylike, although she smiled a lot and beautifully, too, and I was told that she was not a particularly athletic girl.

My memory is not too good on this point, but I believe Eddie started going with Tricia when she lived in New York where her father was working as a lawyer before he won the Presidency in 1968. To the best of my recollection they broke up about five years ago and started going together again before the election. I think they've known each other for seven or eight years on and off.

I don't know Tricia at all. I know girls who went to school with her at Marlborough in Los Angeles and at Finch in New York. Supposedly, she is the most politically rightist of all the Nixons, which would put her to the right of Eddie. She is not going to give him any Women's Lib trouble. I can assure you of that. The adjectives which best describe Tricia are "demure" and "ladylike."

I would describe him as fiercely independent, although he certainly springs from a Republican background. Perhaps he'll develop into a Nelson Rockefeller-type of Republican. Certainly, he's future Presidential timber if his bent is political.

I'm sure you know that he spent one summer working on The New Republic, a magazine which finds practically nothing edifying about President Nixon. Eddie also helped write a study of the Federal Trade Commission along with Robert C. Fellmeth and John E. Schulz. Fellmeth is a Nader's Raider out of Stanford and the Harvard Law School, and John Schulz, out of Princeton and the Yale Law School, is now editor of the Selective Service Law Reporter in Washington, D.C.

Cox and Schulz roomed together in Washington during the summer of 1968 in the Kalorama Road home of a Mrs. Aspinwall who generally hires Princeton students to caretake her home in summer. Schulz recalls Cox as "an industrious guy with a good head on his shoulders who had previously taken a seminar with Ralph Nader at Princeton. He worked most assiduously, and I think took a breather only to go to Miami Beach and spend some time with Tricia

—Women's Wear Daily

Eddie's parents. The father, Howard Cox, is New York law firm partner.

during the Republican Convention."

Another associate of Cox says, "My own feeling is that he is politically schizoid. He has this strict Republican background, yet his mind is open and inquiring, and the result is frequently an inconsistency. But in terms of intelligence, hereditary and acquired, he comes well-equipped. In the nicest sense of the word he is 'smooth.' There is nothing abrasive about him. He wears well. If Tricia Nixon hooks him, I would say she has hooked one of the best of the New Generation."

UNAFRAID TO CRITICIZE

First published as The Nader Report on the Federal Trade Commission, the book to which young Cox contributed is now called Nader's Raiders and Grove Press has brought it out in a paperback edition for $1.25. What it proves is that Eddie is not afraid to study and criticize the Establishment. It's one of the best things ever written on the incompetency of the Federal Trade Commission and its failure to protect American consumers. And it's no wonder that reportedly President Nixon seeks out Eddie for his views on a variety of subjects.

If Tricia marries into the Cox family, she will be marrying into a group of well-educated intellectuals. She will have to step briskly to keep pace with Eddie, because he thinks fast and well, deeply and logically.

Both Tricia and Eddie regard their romance as strictly private, and while Eddie is most courteous to reporters, he will neither acknowledge nor deny his engagement to Tricia.

ONLY THE FACTS

A friend of mine who works for a newspaper around Boston called him the other week, and he told her, "I am prepared to supply you with any factual information which may be of help to you, but I'm afraid I can't go very much beyond that."

My girlfriend asked him what he hopes to do after he graduates from Harvard Law School. "I'm afraid," Eddie said, "that question comes under the heading of speculation." She then asked, "How long have you and Tricia had an understanding?" To that, he replied good-naturedly, "You're leading the witness." She then inquired, "What do you expect to be doing in June?" he laughed lightly and said, "Again that's speculation and also immaterial and irrelevant, possibly not to me, but it certainly should be to you."

That should give you some idea of Tricia Nixon's husband-to-be, if husband-to-be he is in fact going to be.

Much love,

Michael Brandon and Tippy Walker in "Heir." Film deals with drug abuse, which this year is succeeding campus rioting as Hollywood's youth theme.

'Now' Films and Hard Times in Hollywood

by Lloyd Shearer

On the theory that current events make "now" movies, Hollywood film producers are choosing their themes directly from the headlines.

Last year's news gave rise to a series of campus revolt films: The Strawberry Statement, Getting Straight, The Magic Garden of Stanley Sweetheart.

This year's youth theme is drug abuse.

United Artists is releasing something called Heir. It concerns two turned-on dropouts from the affluent society. Other titles in production are Dealer, Speed Is of the Essence, Panic in Needle Park. Some of the starring "addicts" are Jacqueline Bisset and Michael Sarrazin, Tippy Walker and Michael Brandon, and Karen Black.

Speaking of Hollywood, it is a sad, dismal, depressed area these days. No industry has a higher unemployment rate than motion pictures and television.

Elliott Gould as he appeared in "Getting Straight," which set off a series of "now" films about the college scene.

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, which includes all the Hollywood craft unions, reports unemployment as high as 85 percent among lighting men, 60 percent among grips, 62 percent among costumers, 57 percent among script supervisors, 40 percent among cameramen and projectionists—and with scant hope of improvement in sight.

Some union locals report that more than one-third of their members have given up film work to seek employment in other fields. And because of the depression, union training programs for the young have been shelved. The loss of experienced film technicians and the failure to train new members of the industry augur serious problems in any future revival of the Hollywood scene.

'Worst time ever'

According to John Lehners, president of the AFL's Hollywood Film Council, "this is absolutely the worst time we've ever experienced. You don't need statistics. Just go look at the unemployment office."

Old Hollywood hands recall that during the Depression of the 1930's, the film industry continued to thrive via escape movies. But the depression of the '70's may well prove terminal for the film industry as Hollywood and the rest of the nation once knew it.

Victoria Racimo, Don Johnson and Linda Gillin play a freaked-out trio in "The Magic Garden of Stanley Sweetheart," another "now" film, but a box-office dud.

NUCLEAR ARSENAL

Top priority in Red China today goes to nuclear weapons and missile development.

From small beginnings--a few scientists educated in the U.S. and England, and limited Soviet assistance --the Chinese have put together an impressive atomic and missile complex.

They set off their first nuclear blast, a relatively minor one, in October, 1964. By June, 1967, they had progressed to a major hydrogen explosion.

The U.S. and the U.S.S.R., both potential targets for Chinese bombs, observed these developments with deep concern but not alarm, pointing out that the Chinese still lacked the missiles to deliver their nuclear payload.

In April, 1970, however, the Chinese launched an earth satellite with a medium-range ballistic missile. The U.S. Defense Department now concedes that the Chinese may have an ICBM (Intercontinental Ballistic Missile) capability by 1973.

China-watchers are now speculating as to what use the Chinese will eventually or possibly make of their nuclear clout. Will they use it as an offensive weapon, as a deterrent, or as a device for blackmail? Some experts declare that the Chinese sincerely fear an attack from either or both of the super powers, and hence seek a deterrent.

It is clear, however, that in the event of a nuclear confrontation, the Chinese would be vastly outpowered by either the Soviet Union or the United States. What operational nuclear capability does give the Red Chinese is an impressive potential for blackmail in the world arena.

SEXUAL OVERKILL There have been published of late so many books on sex and sexual techniques that the burgeoning promotion of the subject is causing a great deal of unhappiness in couples, especially those aged 50 and over who are convinced they've missed something.

Dr. Frederick Lemere, a Seattle psychiatrist, says, "Many people who read these books have been made to feel inferior and inadequate."

In a recent letter to the editor of The Medical Tribune, Dr. Lemere explains:

"The male sexual urge is at its peak in the late teens and early 20's and then usually declines. The waning of sexual drive that occurs naturally with advancing years proceeds at a varying pace for each individual. Sexual 'inadequacy' is therefore a highly individual and subjective evaluation.

"Promotion of the importance of an active and prolonged sex life is a disservice to those who are disinterested in or unable to attain this image.

"Many perfectly normal people are made to feel 'inadequate' and inferior. Their ego, especially the fragile male ego, suffers a severe blow, and the physician is called upon to restore sexual vigor. Unfortunately, the treatment of impotency is seldom effective...."

Dr. Lemere explains that "in some individuals little or no sex life is quite adequate; in others no amount of sexual activity is adequate... Fortunately for men, most women can take sex or leave it alone and are often glad to do the latter... Women have a much greater capacity to adjust to the sexual realities of life than do men, and a man should not equate a woman's needs with his own.

"Conversely, a woman should be careful not to misinterpret her husband's sexual inability as a lack of love for her or an imagined interest in another woman...."

Dr. Lemere points out that he is addressing himself primarily to "elderly people who find themselves over the hill where sexual ability is concerned."

"It is not fair for these people to be told by so-called sex authorities," he avers, "that they can maintain active sex lives into their 70's, 80's, or even 90's. That sort of propaganda is what makes them feel inferior and inadequate and dissatisfied. Those are misconceptions, and the wise physician should explain to couples as they grow old that the physical aspects of sexual attraction naturally change to something deeper and more abiding, a relationship based on love and respect and affection."

Dr. Lemere believes the widespread over-emphasis on sex has been more helpful to many book publishers than it has to many people.

GI HOME LOANS Service-men who have used their GI home loan guaranty (maximum--$12,500) and are forced to sell their homes because of health, employment, earthquake, condemnation proceedings and other compelling reasons, may have their guaranty privileges restored by the Veterans Administration.

The VA notes that it must first be released from liability on the original loan before entitlement can be restored, usually by paying off the guaranteed loan in full.

But VA will restore eligibility if the property was destroyed by fire, earthquake, or other compelling reasons which were no fault of the veteran.

Some of the reasons for which property may be disposed of and an entitlement of the $12,500 maximum loan guaranty restored by the VA include:

- Loss of employment through a reduction-in-force, or curtailment of activities in the occupation where he is employed, if suitable employment is obtained in another locality.

- Transfer of employment from one locality to another by the veteran's employer.

- Voluntary change of employment to another locality offering the veteran more income and opportunity for advancement --provided satisfactory evidence is furnished VA.

- Retirement of a veteran, or transfer of a serviceman by his military department while he is still on active duty.

- Limited space in the veteran or serviceman's home, if a doctor certifies it is a health hazard, but an increase in the size of his family is not in itself sufficient grounds for restoration of entitlement.

BEST-SELLING TOY The hottest-selling toy in Tokyo these days is a make-belle makeup kit for little girls.

The play kit contains real cosmetics--lotions, creams, powder, lipstick, manicure materials--all in tiny doses. It sells for about $8, an expensive toy by Japanese standards and about eight times more than the cost of the ingredients.

When the toy makeup kit first went on sale at department store cosmetic counters, it attracted few buyers, but when moved to the toy department, it became the fastest-selling item on the counter.

Tokyo department stores report sales of 50 kits a day on weekdays and from 75 to 100 on Sundays. Most of the buyers are mothers and grandmothers.

Although Japanese mothers agree that their daughters should not wear makeup as a rule, they welcome the makeup kit, which keeps their daughters from playing with their parent's cosmetics.

SEW-IT-YOURSELF FASHION

The most revolutionary development to hit the garment industry since the invention of the sewing machine is here: pre-cut, ready-to-sew high fashion.

Home-sewing accounts for more than one-third of America's clothing dollar. In order to tap that large market and at the same time cut rising production costs, some of the foremost designers in the country are offering their styles ready-to-sew as well as ready-to-wear. Hot pants and pantsuits, bikinis and belts, minis and midis--soon you will be able to buy them all, pre-cut with materials and instructions, at a fraction of the cost of the finished garment.

Stan Herman of Mr. Mort, one of the leading clothes manufacturers in the nation, is already on the market with five pre-cut designs in sizes 6-16. His pre-cut kit comes complete with amusing, annotated instructions and a Mr. Mort label. The price is $22-$30 for styles which would sell ready-made for $60-$110.

Ico Narducci's designer slacks are also available now in five pre-cut sizes and ten different colors. For as little as $6 a kit and an hour's work you can have yourself a pair of high-fashion, low-cost slacks.

Other designers and manufacturers offer bikinis, blouses, dresses, coats and a whole line of leathers, including belts, vests, and bags, pre-cut and budget-priced. Some pre-cut kits are available in supermarkets and post exchanges in order to minimize the time lag and markup of retail distribution, and others are on sale at local department stores. If pre-cuts catch on, a whole line of retail stores may develop to sell nothing else.

LEG ROOM

Last year was one of the most financially calamitous in the history of U.S. airlines. They lost hundreds of millions, to say nothing of passengers.

This year, in an attempt to stem their losses, the airlines are not only raising fares and decreasing the number of flights, but they are finally rectifying one of the most traditional and frequent of all passenger complaints--"Not enough leg room."

Two airlines which are advertising that their coach seats provide as much leg room (above) as their first-class seats are Continental Airlines and Western Airlines, both home-based in Los Angeles.

Continental boasts, and offers photos to prove it, that on their 747 runs to Hawaii their plane configurations provide 38 inches of leg room in all classes, first, coach, and economy. Western claims that on all its flights, domestic and overseas to Hawaii, it also provides the same 38 inches of leg room in all classes.

Other airlines are advertising two-abreast seating in the coach section and pointing out that three coach seats when the in-between armrests are removed, can make into a bed.

The key word in airline passenger comfort has been switched from "food" to "space."

Says one airline executive: "There is no point in providing passengers with gourmet meals if they don't have enough room to stretch out their legs once in a while and enjoy it."

Jacksonville, Fla., has what many experts call the finest emergency ambulance service in the nation. In this simulated accident, attendants demonstrate proper way of carrying a victim so that injuries are not compounded.

How Good Are Your Ambulances?

by Arthur S. Freese

"I'd like to feel that if I were knocked unconscious anywhere in the U.S., I'd have a sure chance of getting to a hospital alive—but I don't have any such assurance." That stinging indictment of American ambulance practices comes from Dr. Robert H. Kennedy, one of our foremost experts in the field.

As though to prove his point, an ambulance recently raced up the drive of a busy Ohio hospital. The attendant and driver wheeled in an unconscious patient, half suffocating because he'd been placed face down, mouth and nose buried in blankets. And Dr. Henry C. Huntley, director of the U.S. Public Health Service emergency division, contends that 60,000 lives a year are needlessly lost because of poorly trained ambulance attendants. He's joined by Dr. Sam F. Seeley, medical care expert for the National Academy of Sciences, who says that many deaths and disabilities from injuries are "due to the inadequate care of ambulance personnel."

The shame of poor ambulance service is doubly reprehensible because it takes only some dedication and persistence to make it good. Jacksonville, Fla., has demonstrated that. Many experts praise this city for "the finest emergency ambulance service in the United States," one that has a record of literally bringing victims back from the dead.

Yet, as recently as 1967, Jacksonville's service was far from praiseworthy and it took an unsavory incident to emphasize it. An auto crash brought out two undertakers' ambulances—they provided most of the community's ambulance service at that time. These vehicles raced each other at 80 miles an hour, eager to get some business out of the accident. Then, arrived at the scene, the drivers found the victim dead and actually began physical combat with each other over who would get the body.

Just too much

That incident proved to be just too much. A Jacksonville TV station started a crusade exposing abuse in the local ambulance service, mostly provided by undertakers and by a few private firms. Common were such practices as dragging car crash victims out of wrecks so rudely that injuries were compounded, refusing to take sick or injured who couldn't pay, and fighting over bodies. The pressure built up until in November, 1967, all Jacksonville morticians quit the ambulance business.

One hour later the mayor ordered the Fire Department to take over emergency ambulance service, and in less than three years the city had proved that it's possible to convert a typical ambulance mess into perhaps the most outstanding service in the U.S. The first step was to empty out five fire chiefs' station wagons and man them with firemen already trained in advanced first aid. Thus, the Jacksonville Rescue Squad was founded, an essential service as important in its way as police and fire protection.

The principal architect of Jacksonville's squad was Captain John M. Waters Jr., a Coast Guard rescue expert, who had been hired by the city to head its Fire Department rescue services. And his feat was doubly commendable because just about the time he took over the whole city's ambulance service, Jacksonville merged with the Duval County government, making it the world's largest municipality in area—842 square miles.

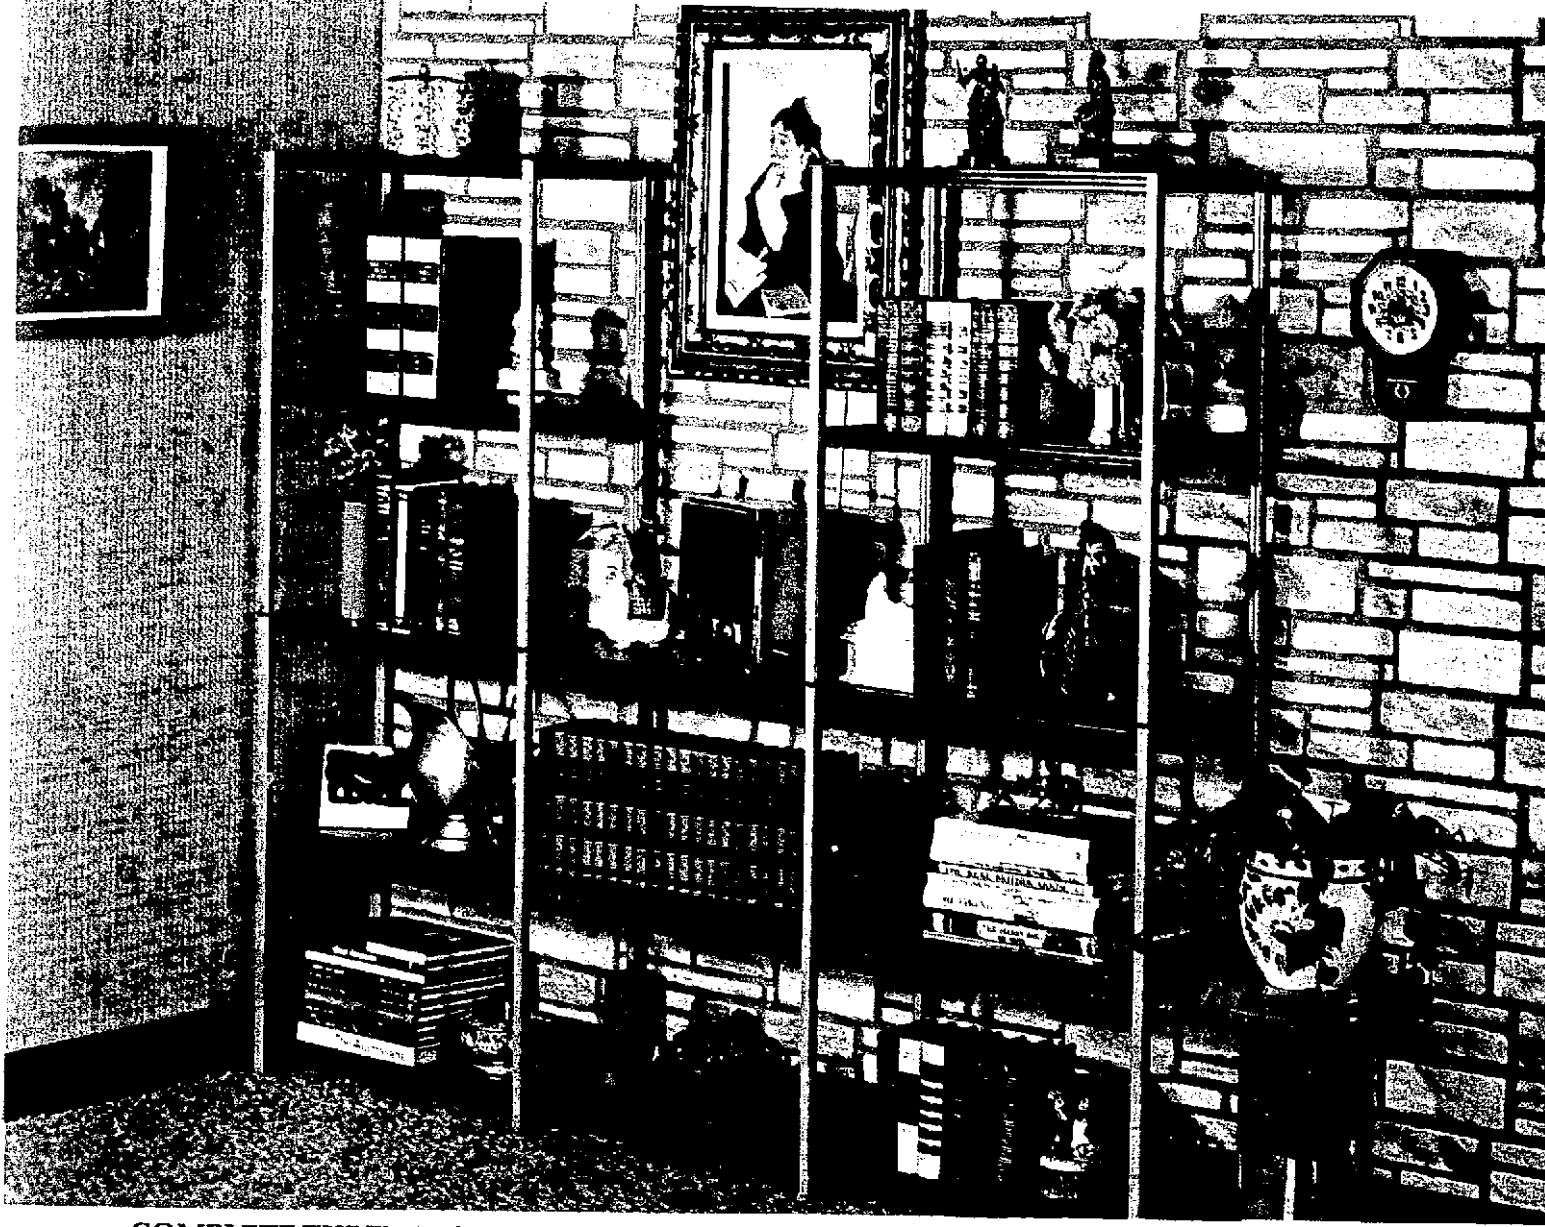

Telephone help

By making the Fire Department responsible for ambulance service, the department's sophisticated communications system was immediately available and Waters made it even better by replacing the pull-lever fireboxes with telephones. When a phone is picked up, a light goes on on a master map and the ambulance crew knows immediately where the emergency is.

Among other of Waters' innovations:

- Replace the chiefs' station wagons with modern, specially-designed ambulances.

- Give each of the firemen volunteering for rescue work 750 hours of training, including the delivery of two babies in a hospital under a doctor's supervision. Also, pay each volunteer an extra $30 monthly.

- Stock each ambulance with a wrecking kit—fireman's axes, saw, wrenches, crowbar, all the equipment needed to cut a crash victim out of a crumpled automobile.

- Place in each ambulance a complete supply of medical equipment—scalpels, hemostats, splints, tourniquets, adrenalin, drugs, oxygen tanks and hand-type resuscitators, backboards, stretchers.

- And, finally, electrocardiographs so that the rescuing firemen can diagnose and monitor a heart condition and transmit the information to a hospital where a doctor may advise emergency treatment.

Captain Waters is justly proud of his rescue volunteers. He comments: "I think our people would rather do away with City Hall than the rescue people." Many a Jacksonville resident echoes this thought, none more so than Mrs. Ruth Norris.

'Clinically dead'

Not so long ago she suffered a heart attack in her home and was "clinically dead"—heartbeat and breathing had stopped. It took her son Ray only a few seconds to flash a "cardiac red" alert to the Fire Department. The nearest available unit—in this case a fire engine—arrived in two minutes, an ambulance a minute and a half later. Two vehicles are always sent to heart alarms in Jacksonville so there will be sufficient crew to get the patient to the hospital—an ambulance driver and two men to work on the patient. In the case of Mrs. Norris, she was put on a rigid backboard so that manual chest depression by one fireman could help start her heart while the other administered oxygen and the driver alerted the hospital that a heart victim was en route.

In the hospital, a single "zap"—medical slang for an electric shock to the heart—restored Mrs. Norris' heart back to a normal beat and in 60 seconds she was awake, her mind normal.

Such a performance is almost routine for the Jacksonville firemen because they've had the training, equipment and communications. Yet, Dr. Huntley of the U.S. Public Health Service estimates that not one in 100 U.S. ambulances can communicate with a hospital and no more than one in 20 ambulance attendants gets better than minimum training. Dr. Seeley of the National Academy of Sciences says that about a third of our ambulance vehicles are station wagons and about a third of actual ambulances are more than ten years old.

Various systems

Across the nation, according to the U.S. Public Health Service, undertakers still provide half of all ambulance service and there's quite a lot of variety in the other half. Baltimore uses a system much like that in Jacksonville and Houston, having studied the Jacksonville pattern, is installing it. Charlotte, N.C., gives an ambulance franchise to a single private service much along the lines of a utility under public supervision. In Louisville, Ky., all policemen are trained in advanced first aid and all police patrol station wagons are immediately convertible into ambulances. Calls for help go to the police and are radioed to the cars on patrol. Fort Dodge, Iowa, has devised a system of special application to small cities. Ten men, in relays, staff the three ambulances and are trained in advanced care for heart patients. The vehicles are kept at the hospital where the men work as orderlies between ambulance calls.

These examples, plus the case history in Jacksonville, show that there are no mysteries to the provision of the kind of good ambulance service that saves lives routinely every day. Any community with the will to have it can have it. But it's tragic that it probably will take more unnecessary deaths to jolt many of our cities into action.

Ambulance crew demonstrates emergency treatment of a heart attack victim in her home. Man in foreground is alerting the hospital that a patient can be expected soon. Meantime (below) the hospital emergency room prepares to give instructions to the crew at the scene.

Back from the dead: Fire Dept. surgeon Dr. Roy M. Baker visits Mrs. Ruth Norris, a heart patient, who was saved by an ambulance crew.

"One day it dawned on me that I was boring my husband to death."

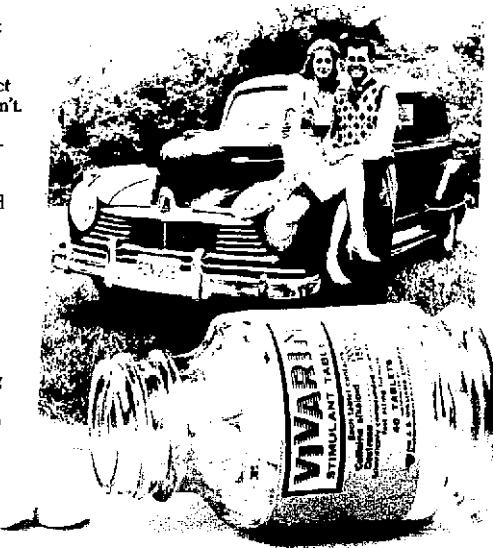

When you're married as long as I am, you can reach a point where you start taking your husband for granted. Good old dependable Jim I used to say, and I guess that's how he was beginning to think of me, too. Good old dependable Barbara. It was horrible.

One day it dawned on me that I was boring my husband to death. It was hard for me to admit it—but it was true. It wasn't that I didn't love Jim, but often by the time he came home at night I was feeling dull, tired and drowsy. And so Jim would look at television and, for the most part, act like I wasn't even there. And I wasn't.

I decided that I had to do something. I had seen an advertisement for a tablet called Vivarin. It said that Vivarin was a non-habit forming stimulant tablet that would give me a quick lift. Last week there were a couple of evenings when I felt that I needed Vivarin. So, on those days, I took a Vivarin tablet at 5:00 p.m., just about an hour before Jim came home, and I found time to pretty up a little, too. It worked.

All of a sudden Jim was coming home to a more exciting woman, me. We talk to each other a lot more than we have in years—like we used to when we first were married and we'd take long rides in the old car just to be together and talk. And after dinner I was wide awake enough to do a little bit more than just look at television. And the other day—it wasn't even my birthday—Jim sent me flowers with a note. The note began: "To my new wife..."

THROW AWAY YOUR DENTURE ADHESIVE

It takes more than memories to make it from day to day.

Someday you'll be old.

When you are, you'll find that though you can taste memories, you can't eat them. Though memories can give you a warm feeling, they aren't shelter from the cold.

There's no substitute for money when you're old.

And you can have that money if you start building your nest egg now, while you're still feeling young.

One of the very basic things you can do is join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work or the Bond-A-Month Plan where you bank. Buying U.S. Savings Bonds this way makes saving almost painless.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years (10 months 14% the first year).

That extra 3½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970 . . . with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

YOUR CHILD MAY HAVE PIN-WORMS 1 OUT OF 3 DOES

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms—ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . small, easy-to-take tablets . . . special sizes for children and adults.

Comedian Jack Carter gives Plimpton how-to tips as tailor fits costume on George for his act before Las Vegas audience.

'...But Seriously, Folks'

by George Plimpton

EDITOR'S NOTE: George Plimpton, amateur jack-of-all-trades, has played football with the Detroit Lions, basketball with the Boston Celtics, and percussion with the New York Philharmonic among other things. He has made two television specials: a Western with John Wayne, and performing on the trapeze with the Beatty Brothers Circus. Plimpton is the author of the best seller, Paper Lion (football), Out of My League (baseball), and The Bogey Man (golf).

What happens when an amateur steps out on the stage of Las Vegas' Caesars Palace in the guise of a professional stand-up comic and tries to entertain a huge and somewhat startled audience?

True, he has been provided with a professional script (written by Laugh-In people) and coached for a month for a television special by a galaxy of such comedians as Steve Allen, Jonathan Winters, Phyllis Diller, and Buddy Hackett among others. Still, however the special may look to others, I doubt that I will look at it, since I was the amateur involved. The hour would bring back all too vividly the cliff-hanger suspense leading up to the performance, and finally, on the stage suffering the symptoms of personal anguish referred to in show business as "flop-sweat."

A would-be comic, I kept telling myself that perhaps my comedian-tutors could coach me through my act. Frankly, they were all skeptical.

As I sat in the dressing room of Caesars Palace waiting for my time to come (I was supposed to follow The Fifth Dimension; their finale, "Let the Sunshine In," hammered at the walls), I stared at the floor and tried to remember not only the routine I was to deliver (a series of one-liners that seemed peculiarly lifeless at that moment) but also the pertinent bits of advice I had been given. None of them was especially comforting.

Steve Allen had tried to make me feel better by telling me that all comedians had failed at one time or another. "Bombed," as he put it, and when it happened to me on the stage at Las Vegas, I could take comfort by telling myself that I was in very distinguished company.

"Oh yes," I had said.

"One other thing," Allen said. "If a joke dies, don't start off your next sentence with '... but seriously, folks'."

Confidence needed

Buddy Hackett had a firm if disconcerting piece of advice which I remembered. He advised: "Never look up, because if they look in your eye, they'll see how frightened you are."

"Oh," I said. "Aren't you ever frightened?"

"Never, no."

"Well, how do you ever get over it?" "It's very simple. Confidence. Also I think about the people out there in front—that many of them have saved up to come to see me. Of course, out there are people who can afford to see me night after night. We call them 'rounders'. They do the rounds of all the acts on the Las Vegas strip. But somewhere there are some plain people out there who have saved up for this one night in Las Vegas, which is a very big night in their lives, and who am I not to be aware that they have saved up to see me?"

"Yes," I said. "They've not exactly saved up to look at me."

"You gotta come and tell how you feel," Hackett said. "Just be very honest. Open. If you have confidence in your life in general, you'll have confidence on the stage."

"I see," I said.

Phyllis Diller was quite positive about my moments on the stage—that terror was inevitable. "When I started," she told me, "I was so petrified I shook visibly. I shook so you could hear me rattling. I shook so bad I was a blur. Some people actually took the pledge. But whatever happens, don't flee."

"You mean just run off the stage?"

Phyllis Diller was another in a galaxy of comics who tried to help Plimpton.

"If you do that, I'd say you're in the wrong business . . . even as an amateur."

Jack Carter, one of the great stand-up comics who helped me, mulled over my problems. He had said: "Cry a lot, just throw yourself on their mercy." Then he had gone on to explain about flop-sweat. "No one in the world experiences it but a performer," he said. "It's walking out there and suddenly you know it's not working; you know in your heart it's over, there's no way. It starts to pour, and it drenches down the arms a lot, and the legs, and all of a sudden you're swimming in your shoes."

I had asked Woody Allen if there was anything that could be done about 'flop-sweat'.

"No," he said. "Nothing. The sweat starts beading up on your forehead." He was especially gloomy. "There's nothing I can tell you which would make you funnier or less frightened," he said. "Or be of any value whatsoever. It's a purely personal experience. It's like dying. Until you do it, you can't learn very much about it."

"Oh," I said.

A woman's touch

The only comforting words finally came from Phyllis Diller: "I'm going to be there on your opening night in Las Vegas," she said. "And afterward I'm going to come to your room and I'm going to rub your temples. I'm going to be sweet and darling to you and you'll get well."

When the time came—the applause roaring for The Fifth Dimension, and the knock on the dressing room door, and the voice telling me that I was due on stage—the advice that suddenly came to mind was not from any of my tutors. I thought not of what Hackett had told me, or Jonathan Winters, or Phil Silvers, or any of the others, but of a famous phrase used by the great black comic and character actor, Willie Best.

The moment of truth

"Feet, do your stuff," he used to say, usually in a haunted house with a ghost nickering behind the armchair, and his feet would remove him from the premises in a blur of speed. That's what I said to my feet when the knock came: "Feet, do your stuff." But they took me not out the stage door onto the street and the safety of the neon vastness of the Las Vegas night, which I half expected, but like an automaton's they walked me out past the heavy side curtains of the stage into a cone of light. I stood momentarily and blinked and then my feet walked me out to the microphone and to the weird confrontation with the audience out there in the dark. I could not have been more surprised.

What happened? This Friday night at 9(EST), over ABC-TV, a Du Pont special entitled "Plimpton! Did You Hear the One About?" will tell the story.

Something New With Mushrooms

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Mushroom Cutlets may be served as a main dish or as an accompaniment. Either way, they are new and delightful, with interesting texture and intriguing flavor—truly a conversation piece. This is a recipe you will want to clip and keep for frequent use when fresh mushrooms are plentiful.

MUSHROOM CUTLETS

2 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided	1 cup whole wheat bread crumbs
2 medium onions, chopped	1/4 cup wheat germ
1 pound mushrooms, chopped	1 teaspoon salt
1 cup diced cooked potato (1 medium)	1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
2 eggs	2 tablespoons chopped parsley
	1/2 teaspoon dried leaf thyme

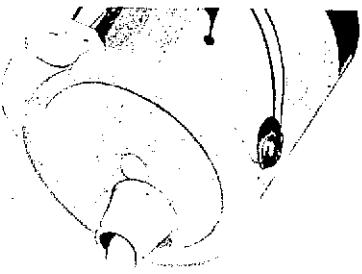

Melt 1 tablespoon butter in large skillet. Add onions; cook until tender, but not brown. Add mushrooms and remaining 1 tablespoon butter. Cover; cook over low heat until mushrooms are tender, 10 to 15 minutes. Reserve 1 cup onion-mushroom mixture, draining any liquid back into skillet. Place remaining onion-mushroom mixture, liquid, diced potato and eggs in container of electric blender; process at high speed until smooth (if blender is not available, puree vegetables in food mill). Turn into large bowl and add bread crumbs, wheat germ, salt, pepper sauce, parsley, thyme and 1/2 cup reserved onion-mushroom mixture; mix well. Spoon mixture in mounds, 1/3 cup each, on well-greased baking sheet. Bake at 350° for 20 minutes. Serve hot with Mushroom Cream Sauce* and garnish with olives. Makes 8 cutlets, 4 main-dish or 8 accompaniment servings.

*MUSHROOM CREAM SAUCE

1 cup dairy sour cream	1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/2 cup reserved onion- mushroom mixture	1/2 teaspoon salt
	1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce

Mix all ingredients in small saucepan. Heat gently to serving temperature. Do not boil.

The surprising new medical facts on headaches—their origin, and how you can recognize, relieve, and even prevent them.

Help For Your Headache

by Edward Edelson

Introduction by Seymour Diamond, M.D.

...what you can do

■ Do you get frequent headaches? If so, you may have come to believe they're a normal part of life, that nothing much can be done, and that the best policy is to pay as little attention as possible to them.

None of these assumptions is necessarily so. Although headache is probably the most common human ailment (practically everyone has them occasionally and one in 12 Americans chronically), many people have mistaken ideas about them, and thereby let themselves in for unnecessary agony.

Now a new book which PARADE readers can buy for only $1, tells in clear, untechnical language all about headaches—the different kinds, how they come about, and what you can do about them.

The book, entitled Help for Your Headache, by science writer Edward Edelson, will tell you how to recognize, relieve and even prevent this ailment. It will distinguish the differences in tension, migraine and eye headaches, as well as other types. It clears up misconceptions you may have held. It answers candidly your fears that a headache may be a sign of a brain tumor or other grave condition. It tells you when to go to a physician about recurrent headaches, and the kind of questions you can expect him to ask. It tells the truth about home remedies.

If you have headaches that interfere with your work or your pleasure, if you have headaches that keep recurring no matter what you do, if you have headaches that create anxieties in your mind about your basic health. Help for Your Headache is the book for you. It may even be the best $1 you ever invested.

My Favorite Jokes

by Jackie Clark

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jackie Clark says he's been a dedicated comedian "Since I woke up one morning and said how can I get into a business where I can sleep late?" He's appeared many times on television—Johnny Carson, Merv Griffin, David Frost in London, Hollywood Palace, etc.—and made a comedy record called simply, "Jackie Clark."

How did he get into show business? "Well no one gets up in the morning and looks in The New York Times under comedian. Now magicians, they're another story. They're the only entertainers listed in the Yellow Pages."

"The first show I did was at this place in Philadelphia. Things were going real bad. Finally I walked up to the boss and said: 'I don't mind a guy throwing heckles, but bottles!' He said: 'Kid, stick around a few weeks and you'll learn how to catch em!'

Does he write his own material? "The truth is everyone writes variations on the same jokes. The emphasis should be on performance. But the comedy writer is becoming extinct. Years back we'd all hang around Hansen's Drug Store on 7th Avenue. Joke writers were all over the place. They'd give you two jokes for $15. One guy called me up and pleaded: 'I've just gotta write for you.' I said OK. We met, had coffee, talked, he wrote down everything I said and sold it back to me."

Jackie was born in New York City, still lives there. He's unmarried. Here-with some of his favorite jokes:

A man rushed home and gleefully announced to his wife: "Darling, now we don't have to move to a more expensive apartment—the landlord has raised our rent."

Two women came into a grocery store and one ordered everything in sight. When the counter couldn't hold any more, the clerk asked where she wanted it delivered. "No place," she said. "I just want to show my friend here how much stuff you could buy for $2 in 1952."

Jack said to Jerry, "Why don't you work?" Jerry laughed and replied, "Why should I work to support a bum like me?"

Two small boys had just seen a romantic movie. "Wasn't it terrible?" exclaimed one in disgust. "I didn't think it was too bad," said the other. "During the kissing scenes I just closed my eyes and made believe he was choking her."

"My what funny names these Vietnamese towns have," remarked a man from Schenectady, as he read a Poughkeepsie newspaper on his way to meet a friend in Hackensack.

A man got married and his friend didn't know what to buy as a wedding present. Somebody suggested that he give cash. "No, no," he said. "I can't get it wholesale."

I went to a college so small it only had two students—me and this girl who sat next to me in class. When it came time for the prom I didn't go.

To avoid being drafted two brothers hid in a cellar. When they looked around in the dark, they saw their 90-year-old uncle crouched in a corner. They whispered to him, "You're 90, uncle, why are you hiding?" The uncle looked at them and said, "They need generals, don't they?"

I'm saving my money. Someday it may be worth something.

A man wearing a hearing aid entered a taxi. "Must be tough to be deaf," sympathized the driver. "But then nearly all of us have something the matter. Take me, for example, I can hardly see."

The gangster gave his girl a beautiful mink coat. After admiring herself in it, she said: "What is it worth, honey?" "Oh," he said, "from five to ten years."

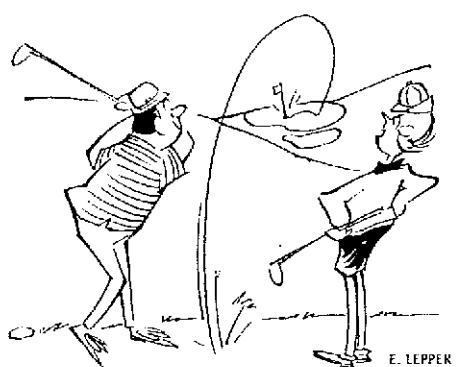

It's to Laugh

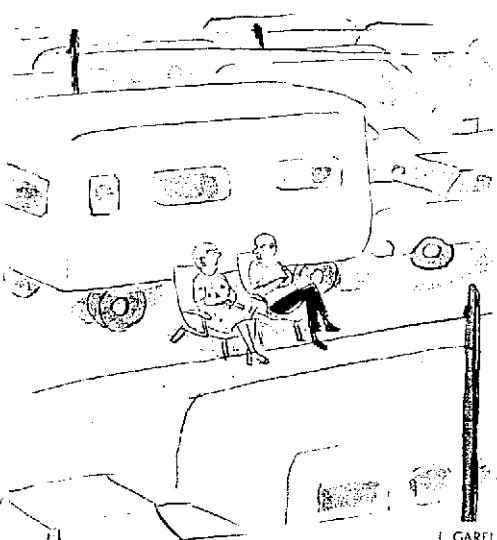

"Nancy's mother gave a present to every kid who agreed to go home early!"

"New math, old math or just plain arithmetic . . . four times eight is not thirty-four!"

"A hole in one! You did that on purpose!"

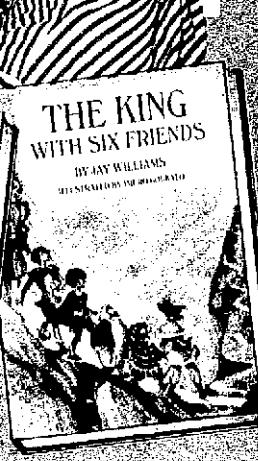

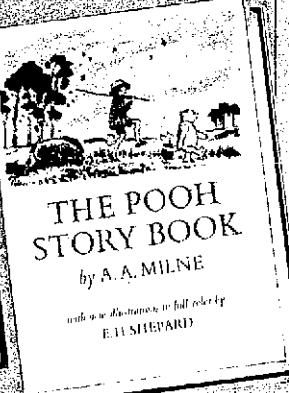

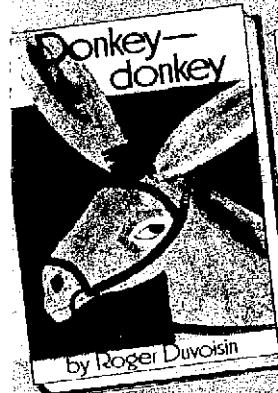

"Do you mean to tell me I knocked myself out for 40 years for this?"

THERE

CAREFUL...
DON'T GO ANY CLOSER!!

YES, WE DEFINITELY
HAUNTED!
NOBODY
SURE WHAT
FIEND IS

BUT FROM THE

by GEORGE WUNDER

TERRY'S PLANE RUNS OUT OF FUEL CLOSE TO CABALLO'S HACIENDA.

LISTEN TO ME! THAT FLYING MANIAC, WHOEVER HE IS, WAS LUCKY. CABALLO'S AIRCRAFT WERE ON THE GROUND. SITTING DUCKS! IT WAS A SHOOTING GALLERY, SO, THE COUP FAILED!

DOESN'T SOUND LIKE THEY SAW ME BAIL OUT, SUSPECT I'M HERE.

BUT WE CUBANS ARE PROS. WE DO NOT PANIC. WHY SHOULD WE? THE WOMAN, DEEPSIX OF THE NORTH AMERICAN CONGRESS, IS STILL WORTH THE PRICE OF OUR LIBERTY.

BUT THAT DEVIL IN THE FIGHTER KNOWS WE'RE HERE. SO THE REGIME ALSO KNOWS.

A CONVENIENCE! NOW THE PRESIDENT KNOWS WHERE TO CONTACT TO LEARN OUR TERMS.

HE'S TOO SURE! WHY DID THAT AIRPLANE STRAFE US?

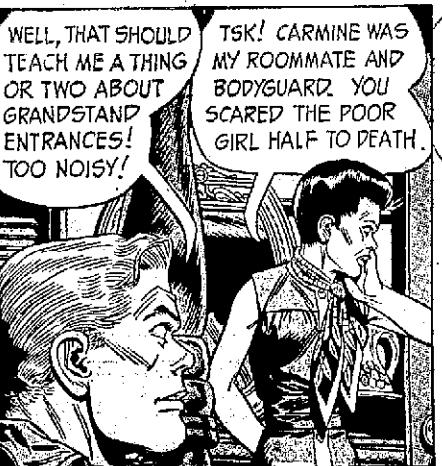

BUT IF THE REGIME FIGHTS AND WE KILL THE WOMAN, WHAT COMES AFTER? AN EMPTY THREAT!

THE DEBATE'S WARMING UP NICELY. SHOULD KEEP MOST OF THEM OCCUPIED FOR A WHILE...

GUARDS OUTSIDE NO PROBLEM, BUT WATCH FOR SERVANTS... AN UPSTAIRS ROOM'S MORE SECURE...

UH, HUH! CHAIR BESIDE THAT CLOSED DOOR WITH A GUN BY IT. GUARD MUST BE DOWNSTAIRS AT THE DEBATE.

AH, REPRESENTATIVE DEEPSIX, FORGIVE MY CASUAL ENTRANCE, BUT WE LIVE IN INFORMAL TIMES...

Little Orphan Annie

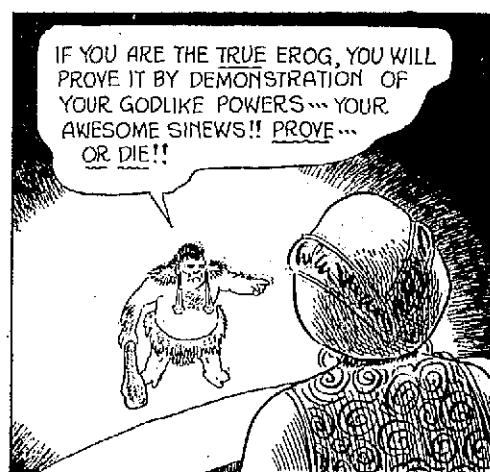

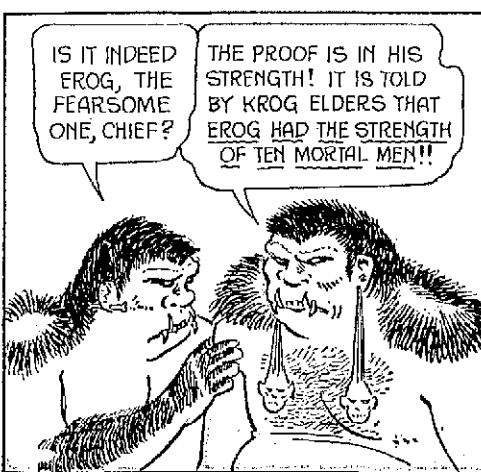

"IT TAKES TWO TO SPEAK THE TRUTH... ONE TO SPEAK, AND ANOTHER TO HEAR"
- THOREAU

THERE'S MISCHIEF AFOOT OUT THERE, SKIPPER!! BEST... CAWK! CAWK!... KEEP YER WEATHER EYE, PEELED FER FOUL-MUTINY!!

THE BLOOD-LUSTING KROGS HAVE SUBDUED THE MINIMEN AND THEIR LEADER, GOLDSWINGER... BUT... HAVE THEY...??

THEM PUTRID PUNKS... THE KROGS... 'VE GONE TO THEIR KNEES AN' THEY'RE BOWIN' AN' SCRAPPIN' IN FRONT O' PUNJAB!!

EROG!! EROG!! IS IT INDEED EROG, THE GORY ONE SAINTED IN KROG ANNALS!!!??

THE GIANT GRASPS A 1000 POUND BLOCK... INHALES DEEPLY....

...AND WITH A MIGHTY EFFORT... LOOSENS THE MASSIVE WEIGHT....

HE'S MOVIN' THAT KING-SIZED BOULDER, SANDY.... IF HE MAKES IT, WE'RE HOME FREE... IF HE DON'T....

IF HE FAILS...? HE WILL SUFFER AS NO MAN HAS EVER SUFFERED IN THE GLORIOUS HISTORY OF KROG TORTURINGS!!
